Mono Council has a traction engine and road grader at work grading on the Prince of Wales Road. The intention is to grade the road from the town limits as far north as the Culp bridge opposite lot 12. 10 sideroad will also be graded west to the Amaranth townline. Wm. Smith jr. and his brother, Herb, furnish and operate the engine. Wat McCluskey is in charge of the grader and is proving a good man for the job. Deputy-Reeve Parks is supervising the work, which should make a big improvement in the condition of the road.

Farmers' Clubs.

The Department of Agriculture is strongly advocating the organization of Farmers' Clubs as an adjunct to the Farmers' Institute system. It would be a great support to the Institute system, the Department holds, to form these Clubs, in which farmers could meet and discuss agricultural problems of interest to the locality and also provide for more or-less entertainment in the form of music, debates, readings etc. Farmers' Clubs will enable the farmer of any given district to get the greatest benefit out of Institute work or the services of the District Representative. In districts where District Representatives are located persons desirous of forming Clubs are urged to co-operate with the Representatives. Elsewhere the Department will gladly send a man to assist with the work of organization.

The 36th Regiment.

Orangeville Company of the 36th will go into Camp at Niagara with the full complement of men. Practically enough men have already been signed, although places could still be made for 4 or 5 good men. This year's company is made up of a fine lot of young men who can be safely depended on to give a good account of themselves in camp. The Port Credit Band will accompany the Regiment to Niagara and will act as the regimental band. A bugle band of 14 pieces will also accompany the Regiment. The Signalling and Stretcher Bearer Corps have been drilling all winter and are in splendid shape for Camp.

The Orangeville Company will hold a church parade to St. Mark's Church on Sunday morning next, June 14th. The local Cadet Corps will join in the parade. The rector, Rev. G. W. Tebbs, will address the citizen soldiery. The local Company will also hold a drill parade at 3.30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

Sterling Bank Statement.

The statement of the Sterling Bank of Canada for the year ending April 30, 1914, sent out by Mr. A. H. Walker, the general manager, indicates conservative management but a steady and substantial growth through a rather trying period in Canadian affairs. During the year the bank materially improved its position, expanding both its loans and its deposits, paid a dividend of six per cent. to its proprietors, made liberal provision in contingent account for bank premises, etc. and carried forward a satisfactory balance. The earnings for the year were $114,200, which represents some 9.90 per cent. on the average paid up stock. Earnings in the previous year were $113,400, or at the rate of 10.15 per cent. Of the total assets of the bank, amounting to $9,395,000, over one-third or $3,355,673 is in immediately available form, such as cash, cheques on and balances due from other banks and readily marketable securities. This portion of the assets represents over forty-three per cent. of the bank's total liabilities to the public. The remainder of the assets consist principally of $5,634,000 of discounts, $320,619, of bank premises—which appear in the statement at no more than the cost, less amounts written off. The statement is an excellent one and proves that the Sterling Bank is not sacrificing stability to promote growth.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Mylks-Shaw.

St. James Church, Primrose, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 3rd, when Miss C. L. Shaw, daughter of Mrs. Geo. Shaw, Elba, was united in marriage to Dr. L. E. Mylks, of Prince Albert, Sask. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms and flowers. The ceremony took place at 3 o'clock in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives. Rev. Mr. Adamson, rector of St. Paul's Church, Shelburne, was the officiating clergyman. The bride, who was given away by her youngest brother, Mr. Brinkman Shaw, looked charming in a gown of white brocade silk crepe trimmed with shadow lace and pearls. She wore a bridal veil in cap effect caught up with lillies of the valley and carried a large bouquet of white roses, lillies of the valley and orchids. The young couple were unattended save by Miss Muriel Little, niece of the bride, who made a sweet little flower girl dressed in pink paillette silk and carrying a basket of sweet peas and rosebuds. Prior to the ceremony the bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played by Miss Gladys Ewing, of Orangeville, who was dressed in pale blue silk. After the ceremony and congratulations from the assembled friends, the wedding party repaired to Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Summerfield's, where a dainty wedding breakfast awaited them. This was followed by the usual toasts. The bride received a number of very beautiful presents. The groom's gift was gold eardrops set with pearls and amethysts. From the groom the flower girl received a locket and chain and the pianiste a bar pin with fleur-de-lis centre set with pearls. The happy couple left on the following day amid showers of confetti and the best wishes of their many friends to sail down the River St. Lawrence through the Thousand Islands to Kingston to visit Dr. Gordon Mylks, brother of the groom. Afterwards they will journey west to their future home in Prince Albert. The bride travelled in a suit of blue broadcloth with hat to match.

A Large Funeral.

There was a very large attendance at the funeral of the late Wm. J. Farnell, which took place to Greenwood cemetery on Thursday afternoon. The funeral was under the auspices of the Orange Society and there was an imposing turnout of the members of the Order. Rich Hill L.O.L., with which the deceased was connected, and L.O.L. No. 22, his former Lodge, were both largely represented. Mr. Bruce Barnhardt, W. M. of the Rich Hill Lodge, read the impressive burial service of the Order at the grave. Rev. J. S. Stevenson, pastor of Laurel Methodist Church, was the officiating clergyman.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

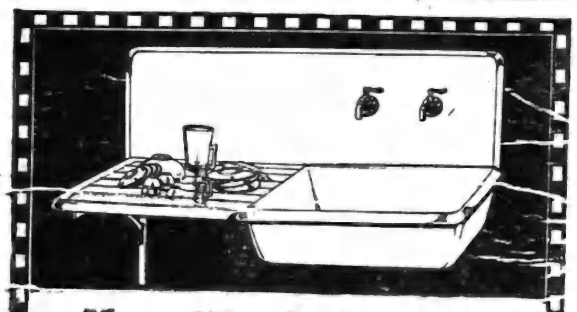
CHANGES IN ELECTION LAW.



Quite a number of changes were made in the election law at the recent session of the Legislature. The most important is that which requires a nomination paper with 50 signatures for every candidate. Hitherto the nomination has been a very simple operation—a proposer and seconder being the only requirements. In the city of Toronto and in East York and West York (which by the redistribution bill are really city constituencies and only rural in name) the polls will open at eight in the morning. It is doubtful if extension of the hours of polling will be of much use. It would be an advantage if the polls were kept open in the larger cities until seven, or even until six o'clock in the afternoon. In England the hours are from 8 in the morning till 8 at night.

The registration system, which applies only to cities and the larger towns, has been materially altered. Under the new law registration will take place on the 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th days before polling day. Saturday must be one of the days, and if Sunday intervenes the day or days will be one earlier. The hours for registration will be from 9 a.m. till 10 p.m. without any intermissions. This will give thirteen hours a day, as against eight and a half hours a day under the former law. Every Registrar must also keep on file in his booth a complete revised list of the whole municipality, which can be examined by applicants. Twenty-three cities and towns were under the operation of the manhood suffrage regiage registration act in the 1911 election, but Galt, which has a census population of 10,199 will be added to the list.

The registrations in the last Federal elections in Ontario amounted to 63,448, and in the Provincial election (three months later) to 38,414 only, in the same territory.—Toronto Globe.

Dr. G. C. Creelman, of the Ontario Agricultural College, has accepted an invitation to attend a meeting of the British Association, which will be held in Australia during the first part of September this year.

ROBT. GALLAUGHER DEAD.

Robert Gallaugher, an old and respected resident of Mulmur, died at his residence, lot 15, con. 4, E.H.S., on Thursday, May 28th, in his 79th year. Deceased was born at Tullamore, in 1836, being a son of Thomas Gallaugher, who came to this country from Ireland about 1832. He afterward moved with his parents to Adjala, two miles south of Rosemont. In 1859 he married Eliza Cook, of Mulmur, and settled on lot 15, con. 4, the farm on which he died. The farm was all forest when they settled thereon, and in hewing out a home for themselves and clearing the farm they encountered all the hardships and experiences that fall to the lot of the pioneers. Besides the widow a family of seven survive: Thos. J., Shelburne; John C., at home; Wesley, Alliston; Mrs. Wm. Evans, West Toronto; Mrs. Wm. Dewar, West Toronto; Mrs. D. Hicks, Shelburne; Mrs. George Jennings, Perm. The funeral took place to Perm cemetery, Saturday afternoon, and was very largely attended, the procession of vehicles extending a mile and a quarter. Six nephews were pall bearers—Geo. and Thos. Hoey and T. J. Gallaugher, of Alliston, Wm. Gallaugher, of Shelburne, Thos. Gallaugher, of Perm, and Robt. Gallaugher, of Toronto. The sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved ones.—Economist.

Heloise Durand

She Became an Object For National Protection

By MARIAN KNOX

The Riviera is a favorite place for the aristocracy of Europe to winter, especially Russians, who are often glad to escape the snow and ice and cold winds of that bleak empire. Nice, Mentone and other points on the Mediterranean are during the months of December, January and February thronged with people, who find there both a balmy climate and gayety.

About the middle of the nineteenth century an American girl gifted not only with beauty, but a remarkable histrionic genius, seventeen years old, was visiting the Riviera with her mother and brother. One afternoon while walking on the promenade on the Mediterranean shore the party met among the throng of idlers a tall, handsome young man whose light hair and blue eyes marked him for a northerner. As he passed the girl his gaze was fixed upon her with admiration, while she lowered her gaze to the ground.

These two were real personages, but since this is a story rather than an account we will call the girl Heloise Durand and the man Count Stremoff. The latter was a young Russian, a member of one of the most aristocratic families of St. Petersburg. He lost no time in discovering who was the girl of such striking appearance he had met and in looking for some one to introduce him to her.

He was successful in making her acquaintance, and then began a courtship which would likely have but one ending for so young a girl courted by a nobleman handsome as a picture and possessing the most charming manners. Satan is pictured with cloven feet and a disagreeable countenance. But his most effective work is done under the guise of beauty. The two listened to the music to be enjoyed at Nice, promenaded on the sea walk and were together in sailing parties on the blue waters of the Mediterranean. And all this while the count was pouring into her ear his tale of love.

The Durands were satisfied that the count's position was all he claimed it to be, and since Heloise was of an age when a girl is easily won she was not likely to resist an extremely fascinating man. European society has always been full of unprincipled men whose main object is the conquest of women, but it does not appear that this American family failed scrupulously to observe the etiquette relating to the association of young persons of opposite sex which has always been in vogue in Europe. The count, by asking for the hand of Miss Durand, seemed to indicate that his intentions were perfectly honorable.

One precaution, however, was not taken. While the Durands had evidence that Count Stremoff held the rank, the position and the wealth to which he pretended, they had no information as to his character. This is the rock on which so many American girls abroad, in making matrimonial contracts, have been wrecked. Once satisfied as to the position of the man they want, they are not likely to pay any attention to what he is in himself. The catalogue of Americans who have married titled foreigners to their cost is large, and still it grows.

Count Stremoff being a Russian, any marriage he might make was amenable to Russian law. That law explicitly required that a marriage should take place in the Russian or Greek church and in accordance with its ceremonies. There was no Russian church on the Riviera, and it was arranged that the couple be married at the consulate. The wedding took place, putting Miss Durand in the paradoxical position of being Stremoff's legal wife, while he was not her legal husband.

It was arranged that the Durands and the count should go to Paris, where there was a Greek church, and they could be married according to the Russian law. Stremoff preceded the others. It was then the Lenten season, when no marriage can be celebrated in the Greek church. This the count doubtless knew. Nevertheless, he departed, ostensibly to make preparations for the celebration of the wedding.

When the Durands reached Paris they discovered the fact that the marriage making Heloise the legal wife in Russia as well as other countries could not be completed for some weeks. And now the count showed his true character. He used all his persuasive powers to induce the young girl to go away with him, assuring her that she was his legal wife.

"Go with me," he pleaded, "to Russia, where we can be married according to the requirements of the Greek church, where I will be at home and where my family may attend the wedding. Here we must pass dreary weeks waiting, while there we can be united at once."

This was not true. No couple could be married in the Greek church during Lent in Russia any more than in Paris. The girl protested, but in vain. Stremoff seemed determined, and, becoming fearful of his integrity, not daring to keep her secret longer, Heloise told her mother of his solicitations.

At the same time rumors came to Mrs. Durand that Stremoff was a rake and a profligate, without any sense of honor whatever. Fortunately the Durands were relatives of the American minister at St. Petersburg, and the mother wrote him with reference to the marriage and the rumors she had heard. The ambassador wrote her to come at once to the capital.

The fact of having the influence of one of so much importance at the Russian court makes this episode in real life one of the remarkable stories of the world. Mrs. Durand and the young bride—the latter assumed the title and name of Countess Stremoff—went to Russia and stayed at the American embassy. They were informed by the count's brother that he was a villain and that they had better have nothing further to do with him.

Stremoff while drawing a young American girl into his toils had no idea that she had the opportunity of calling to her aid the power of the United States. Her cousin, the ambassador, took the matter as an indignity to an American citizen to the Russian government and asked for redress for the young countess. The result of his representations was an arrangement between the two powers that the pair be officially married at Warsaw, in Russian Poland. The count, who by this time had thrown off the mask, showing that he had intended to make Miss Durand his dupe, refused to go to Warsaw or be married.

And here comes in among the wrongs that may be perpetrated by despotic power a case of right. Probably no other sovereign, no head of a republic surely, would have been able to compel this rascal to do justice to the girl he had intended to win for the purpose of deserting her when won, except the czar of Russia.

One day Stremoff received an official document from the czar ordering him to go to Warsaw and complete the marriage that he had begun on the Riviera. An order from the autocrat of all the Russias to one of his subjects is not to be despised. One who by a nod can send persons, without the semblance of a trial, to work in the dreaded mines in Siberia is not likely to be disobeyed when he directs a man to do justice to a woman. And the wronged girl had behind her the power of the great American republic to re-enforce the czar.

Count Stremoff dared not disobey his sovereign's order, and at the appointed time the so called wedding party met at the church, the bride wearing a black dress, attended by her father, her mother and the groom's brother, who had been very kind to the injured girl. The father had concealed on his person a revolver, determined that if the villain refused to convey the necessary legal rights to his daughter he would at least prevent his working any more mischief.

The bride and groom met at the altar rail. Probably no more dramatic scene, certainly no more unique one, ever was enacted in a church. The groom was simply passing through a form in obedience to the will of one who held over him the power of life and death; the bride was enduring an ordeal to make her a legal wife. But for her it was a terrible crisis, knowing as she did that her father was armed and at the slightest disposition on the part of the groom to recede the ceremony would be turned into a tragedy. She must have prayed silently there before the altar that she might be spared a bloody ending of her misfortune.

The priest began the marriage service, all save the bride keeping their eyes fixed on the count, wondering by what loophole, if any, he might attempt to escape what was to be forced upon him. To all, especially the bride, the service seemed interminable. But at last it was ended, and Heloise Durand had become legally as well as really the Countess Stremoff. The bride and groom parted at the door of the church, never to meet again.

The Americans fled from Russia at once, for by the Russian law the husband can imprison, beat, in every way ill treat his wife if he can get his hands on her. They reached the border the same day and were safe.

What became of the groom, whether he continued his villainy or had been sobered by this one experience, is not known. The wedding took place more than half a century ago, and his name, save for this episode, wherein he showed his villainy, has sunk into oblivion. Not so his wife. She became one of the world's famous actresses. Yet of all the dramas in which she ever played it is questionable if any was so truly dramatic as the one in which she had played the real, the principal role in the days of her early youth.

INDUCTION SERVICES.

Rev. R. B. Stevenson M.A., is Now Pastor of Knox Church, Shelburne.

There was a large attendance of members of Knox Church present on Tuesday afternoon at the induction of the Rev. R. B. Stevenson, M.A., as the new pastor of the church. The Rev. J. R. Bell, of Laurel, was moderator and master of ceremonies. After explaining the object of the meeting he introduced the Rev. G. Kendall, of Dundalk, who would preach the sermon, as is customary on occasions of this kind. Mr. Kendall is a vigorous speaker and gave a very forcible address, which was highly appreciated by the audience. Rev. W. M. Morris, of Orangeville, interim moderator of Knox Church, was called on to explain what steps had been taken in making the call and in doing so paid a high tribute to Mr. Stevenson as a minister, tasing his knowledge on remarks made at the Stratford presbytery by ministers and elders present when the translation was asked for. After Mr. Stevenson had been inducted by the moderator, Rev. J. R. Bell, Rev. Mr. Bellsmith addressed the minister and the Rev. D. J. Lane, B.A., of Grand Valley, addressed the congregation and gave them something to think over. The entire proceedings were very interesting and the addresses were of a high order. At the conclusion an excellent tea was served in the basement by the ladies of the congregation. The Free Press extends a cordial welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson. The Rev. W. N. Carr, of Ventry, who has filled the vacancy here for some weeks, was an interested spectator of the proceedings.—Free Press.

HAVE PRETTY HAIR

Thick, Soft, Fluffy, and no Dandruff—Use Parisian Sage.

If your hair is losing its natural color, coming out and splitting, or lacks that enviable softness, gloss and beauty, do not despair—pretty hair is largely a matter of care. If it is too thin make it grow. If it is harsh and brittle soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp with Parisian Sage — all dandruff disappears, falling hair and itching head cease, your hair is doubly beautiful.

Parisian Sage, sold by F. S. Pickering and at all drug counters, is just what you need—a large bottle costs but 50 cents. It surely makes the hair lustrous and seem twice as abundant. You cannot be disappointed in Parisian Sage.

(If he only knew what else was there)
But the fool to the subject gave no care
(Even as you and I)

Oh the sleep he lost and the rest he lost
Yet wondered his health was poor
Tho' a third of his life was spent in bed
It never had entered his foolish head
To think of Ostermoor.

(Even as you and I)
On a mattress that looked so innocent
But he always arose in any event
Tired, unrested and discontent

And it isn't the shame and it isn't the blame
That burns the heart to the core
It's the coming to know the comfort we lost
Seeing at what a trifling cost
We could get an Ostermoor!

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, JUNE 18th, 1914

THE ISSUE IN DUFFERIN.

The withdrawal of Mr. A. E. Annis from the contest in Dufferin has given the people of the county a favorable opportunity to put their temperance principles before party considerations. Mr. Annis is a sincere temperance man and so far as temperance is concerned should have made an excellent candidate. But he is Liberal as well as a temperance man and had he remained in the field the whole campaign of Mr. McKeown and his supporters would have been directed against him as a Liberal. In Rev. J. R. Bell, the nominee of Tuesday's Convention, Dufferin electors have an opportunity to vote for a man who is just as pronounced an advocate of temperance as Mr. Annis and quite as good a Conservative as Mr. McKeown. Temperance Conservatives will have no excuse to offer if they fail to give Mr. Bell their hearty support. The only difference between the two candidates is this. On the temperance question Mr. McKeown will only go as far as the party caucus decides it is advisable to go. Mr. Bell on the other hand is committed to support progressive temperance legislation, whether it comes from the Government or the Opposition. Mr. McKeown places the party welfare and his party affiliations before his temperance convictions. Mr. Bell places temperance first and stands for a more progressive and aggressive policy for the improvement of rural conditions. In other respects the two candidates stand on the one platform. Dufferin is undoubtedly one of the strongest temperance counties in Ontario. It gave the second largest majority in the Province when the referendum was taken a number of years ago. It was the second county in Ontario to come entirely under local option. It can elect a man who will place temperance before party if it chooses to do so. With the opportunity to elect a man like Mr. Bell, there does not seem to be much excuse for doing otherwise.

ANNIS WITHDRAWS.

Liberal Candidate Pulls Out of the Dufferin Fight.

Yesterday morning Mr. A. E. Annis, the Liberal nominee, announced that he had decided to withdraw from the contest in Dufferin. The withdrawal means a straight contest between C. R. McKeown and Rev. J. R. Bell. Mr. Annis states that his decision to retire was reached after consulting with headquarters. He adds that at the Temperance Convention which nominated Rev. Mr. Bell the latter made a most direct promise that he would vote for the policy of Mr. Rowell on the temperance question even if his vote should mean the upsetting of the Conservative Government.

HAVE YOU A BAD SORE?

If so, remember these facts—Zam-Buk is by far the most widely used balm in Canada! Why has it become so popular? Because it heals sores, cures skin diseases, and does what is claimed for it. Why not let it heal your sore?

Remember that Zam-Buk is altogether different to the ordinary ointments. Most of these consist of animal fats. Zam-Buk contains no trace of animal fat, or any mineral matter. It is absolutely herbal.

Remember that Zam-Buk is at the same time healing, soothing, and antiseptic. Kills poison instantly, and all harmful germs. It is suitable alike for recent injuries and diseases, and for chronic sores, ulcers, etc. Test how different and superior Zam-Buk really is. All druggists and stores at 50c box. Use also Zam-Buk Soap. Relieves sunburn and prevents freckles. Best for baby's bath. 25c. tablet.

St. Andrew's Garden Party

The garden party held on Mr. John Clarke's grounds on Purple Hill on Wednesday night of last week under the auspices of St. Andrew's Ladies Aid Society was a splendid success. The night was fine and there was a very large attendance. The ladies provided an excellent supper, which was followed by a delightful programme. Short speeches were made by Mr. C. R. McKeown and Revs. A. E. de St. Dalmas, G. W. Tebbs and W. M. Morris. Mrs. O. E. Banks contributed a couple of recitations. The musical programme consisted of several selections by the Sunday School orchestra, solos by Mr. J. E. Jessop, duets by Messrs. Jessop and Harding, a solo by Mr. Percy Harding with banjo and vocal accompaniment and piano duets by Misses Patterson and King and Misses Wallace and Ritchie. Mr. A. D. McKitrick occupied the chair. The gate and booth proceeds amounted to $160.

NOMINATED BELL.

Temperance Convention Decides to Bring Out Candidate in Dufferin.

Laurel Clergyman Selected to Run Against McKeown.

At a meeting of the Executive of the Temperance and Moral Reform Association in Shelburne last Friday it was decided to call a Convention of the temperance electors of the county for the purpose of considering the advisability of placing a candidate in the field at the coming Provincial election. As election day was only about two weeks away there was no time to lose and the Executive therefore decided to hold the Convention on Tuesday. Despite the shortness of the notice about 150 people turned out to the Convention. Every municipality in the County was represented. After listening to addresses by Messrs. C. R. McKeown and A. E. Annis, nominees of the Conservative and Liberal conventions, followed by a speech by Rev. John Muir, who discussed the temperance situation from the Alliance standpoint, the Convention voted to place a candidate of its own in the field. The decision was reached by a practically unanimous vote. Nominations were then called for and resulted in three names being placed before the meeting, namely, Rev. J. R. Bell, Laurel, A. D. McKitrick, Orangeville, and John Johnston, Laurel. Messrs. McKitrick and Johnston withdrew, making Mr. Bell's nomination unanimous.

President Geo. Ireland called the Convention to order shortly after one o'clock. With the President on the platform was Mr. E. H. Lindsay, Grand Valley, the Secretary of the Association. After a few introductory remarks by the President, Mr. Robt. Reid and Rev. W. M. Morris submitted the following resolution, which was adopted without dissent:—

"That the purpose of this Convention shall be to determine whether a Candidate who will support advanced temperance legislation should be nominated for the Provincial Legislature.

"That the only Candidate satisfactory to this Convention shall be a man, who, regardless of party affiliations, shall support the most progressive temperance legislation proposed and possible within the Province."

Speaking in support of the resolution Rev. W. M. Morris condemned party politics as commonly carried on and the practice of paying railroad fares and giving free dinners as an inducement to men to go to Conventions. Politics, properly understood, was the science of government and the application of economic and business principles to the government of the country.

Messrs. McKeown and Annis, who were both in the Hall, were courteously invited to address the Convention for the purpose of defining their attitude on the temperance question. The Chairman intimated that their time would be limited to ten minutes each, but the restriction was not enforced and both men exceeded the time limit.

Mr. McKeown stated that he came to the Convention because he considered himself a temperance man. He complained that he had never received the organized support of the temperance people of Dufferin, but had supported temperance measures in spite of their active opposition. He had never touched liquor, was personally opposed to the three-fifths clause, but thought so far as this county was concerned it would be unfair to revert to a majority vote now. He would advocate and work for temperance measures in the caucus and within the ranks of his party, but would be guided by the decision of the party majority. The local option method was gradually removing the liquor traffic from Ontario and Mr. McKeown conscientiously believed that the policy advocated by Sir James Whitney was a better temperance policy than that advocated by Mr. Rowell.

Mr. Annis state that Mr. McKeown was entitled to credit for being a temperance man himself, but when he asked for approval of his party's attitude on temperance it became a different matter. If Mr. McKeown would come out squarely for the policy of abolish the bar, the speaker would withdraw from the contest at once. On the temperance question Mr. Annis considered the policy of the present Government anything but satisfactory. Over 400 municipalities had carried local option in spite of the three-fifths handicap, but the limit had been practically reached. Further progress was impossible by the local option method. Mr. McKeown claimed that the Government was removing the liquor business gradually, but it would take 4500 years to wipe out the traffic in Ontario at the present rate of progress. The temperance question was bigger than Sir James Whitney, bigger than Newton Rowell, bigger than any political party. The speaker was an out and out supporter of the abolish the bar policy and thought the best thing the Convention could do was to get in behind him on this platform and help elect him.

Rev. John Muir, the representative of the Alliance, stated that he had listened with interest to the speech of Mr. McKeown. With much of it he agreed, but with his position on the matter of advanced temperance legislation he was obliged to disagree. It was a lamentable confession of weakness that a member of the dominant party in the Legislature should be obliged to come before a Convention of temperance people and state that he had urged his party to give temperance legislation and had failed. On the question of temperance the policy of Sir James Whitney, while it had certain commendable features, was not preferable to that of Mr. Rowell. The Government policy continued in existence over 400 barrooms that would have been wiped out if there had been no three-fifths handicap. Mr. Rowell's policy would wipe out over 1300 bars at one stroke. If the record of the permanence of local option taught anything the lesson was that once it was carried it would remain. The Dominion Alliance was not a party organization, but was prepared to use all civic bodies and all political bodies for the furtherance of its objects. The Alliance was in the present fight for the purpose of having more advanced temperance legislation placed upon the statute books of the Provinces. Temperance people were being asked to break away from their political parties and to vote independently for men who will represent their views on the temperance question. In doing this the preponderating political sentiment of a constituency was taken into account and where the party candidates were unsatisfactory a temperance candidate should be selected who would best represent the views of the majority of the electorate on other questions.

At this stage Mr. Annis objected that it was not fair of Mr. Muir to come to the Convention and turn him down because he was a Liberal.

After hearing Mr. Muir it took the Convention a very short time to decide that it wanted another candidate in the field. Nominations were received and the nominees were given an opportunity to address the meeting.

Rev. Mr. Bell, who was the first nominee called to the platform, stated that while he would have preferred to keep out of politics he was in the hands of the Convention. He was brought up and had been an active Conservative in his younger days and, while he had refrained from taking part in politics since going into the ministry, he was still in hearty sympathy with the general policy of the Conservative party. He came to Dufferin County 23 years ago and had tried to live a useful life and to bear his share of public duties and responsibilities. He was largely in favor of the policy of the present Whitney administration, but thought more attention should be given to the solving of purely rural problems. It was time for a forward movement in Ontario. He differed with Mr. McKeown regarding the latter's statement that the Government would give the people the laws they wanted. The Government ought to lead the people along religious and moral lines. He did not want to go to Toronto to legislate for the people of Dufferin unless he could lead them. Mr. Bell stated that he would vote for any measure that would advance the cause of temperance. When his party went forward fast enough he would go forward with it. If it did not go forward fast enough then he would go with someone else, if he could get anyone to accompany him. Mr. Bell concluded a stirring address by stating that he would support progressive temperance legislation no matter which party introduced it.

A. D. McKitrick and John Johnston made brief speeches. Neither of them wished to be a candidate.

Mr. Bell's nomination was therefore made unanimous. In accepting the nomination, Mr. Bell stated that he was temperance before anything else and, if it should be necessary to do so, was prepared to vote against his party on the temperance question.

A meeting of the Executive was held after the Convention for the purpose of taking steps to organize the County in behalf of Mr. Bell.

Mr. R. J. Woods, who has thrice contested Dufferin against Mr. C. R. McKeown, was conspicuous by his absence. The fact caused considerable comment and friends of Mr. McKeown were not slow to assert that Mr. Woods was at variance with the Temperance Association and would not support Mr. Bell. As a matter of fact Mr. Woods' absence was due to the fact that he is in Toronto attending Conference. Before going to the city Mr. Woods, who intimated sometime ago that he did not wish to stand at this election, stated, we are informed, that he was in favor of bringing out Mr. Bell or some other good man and was prepared to give the candidate his hearty support.

Dear Sir:

I have been requested by the members of the T. M. C. who took part in the recent run to your town, to write you a letter of thanks for the excellent treatment and the fine dinner supplied for the moderate price charged. The next run scheduled for your town is July 5th, and the boys are boosting strong for a large crowd to repay you for the preparations you made last time. I will endeavor to let you know in good time about how many will be on hand. Of course you know what we are up against. It is very hard to say how many will go until the very day comes around and they are ready to start.

Yours Truly

ANNIS THEIR CHOICE

Liberals Held Convention in Carnegie Library on Friday.

Nominee Asks for Time to Consider.

About fifty party stalwarts attended the Liberal Convention in the Carnegie Library last Friday afternoon. The majority of those present were from Orangeville, Shelburne and Grand Valley. The representation from the rural municipalities was rather slim. Mr. J. J. Reith, President of the County Association, occupied the chair and Mr. T. J. O'Flynn, of Shelburne, performed the duties of Secretary.

Shortly after getting down to business the Convention placed itself on record as being in hearty accord with the policy enunciated by Mr. N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition. The resolution was introduced by D. B. Brown, of Orangeville, seconded by Wm. Park, of Grand Valley. After some discussion the Convention decided to place a candidate in the field. The following were thereupon nominated:—A. E. Annis, Orangeville; W. L. Craig, Grand Valley; Robert Irvine, Orangeville; T. R. Huxtable, Hornings Mills; Hugh Falconer, and Chas. Mason, Shelburne; J. J. Reith, Grand Valley, and A. D. McKitrick, Orangeville.

Mr. Brown, who spoke first, stated that he was not in the field but was prepared to support the candidate brought out by the Convention.

Mr. A. E. Annis made a forceful address, which created considerable enthusiasm. He criticized the Government for bringing on the election at the present time holding that it was an attempt to secure a favorable verdict at an unexpected time, because the Conservatives dreaded the future without Sir James Whitney, who would be compelled to retire shortly, and the Province would not stand for Mr. Hanna. Mr. Annis denounced the Government for its indifference to the needs of New Ontario and its failure to attract immigration to that country. He also criticized the expenditure of a million dollars on the new Government House. It would take a millionaire to live in and maintain this costly palace. Mr. Annis was heartily in favor of Mr. Rowell's "banish the bar" policy. A great wave of temperance sentiment was sweeping over the Province and it seemed as if the time had come when the bar would have to go. When it decided to spring the elections on the people, the Administration had made one serious oversight. It had forgotten that this was the month when the Methodist Conferences, the Presbyterian General Assembly and the Anglican Synod were meeting. These important bodies had all denounced the barroom and the liquor traffic and their uncompromising attitude was bound to influence the election.

Mr. Craig held that the temperance question was the chief issue before the people. Dufferin was a strong temperance county and if the Liberals ever had a chance to elect a man it was now. He was not a candidate.

Robert Irvine had been fighting for the principles of Liberalism for years and had no hesitation in saying that the present Government was the worst in the history of Ontario.

A. D. McKitrick had come to the meeting to report the proceedings for his paper and was greatly surprised that he had been nominated. He was afraid he could not subscribe to a declaration of political faith that would be altogether acceptable to the Convention, because he was a free lance in politics. While he approved of the "banish the bar" policy of Mr. Rowell, there were features of the Whitney policy with which he was in hearty accord. He thought the present Government deserved praise for its hydro-electric power and hydro-radial railway policy.

President Reith, John Park, T. R. Huxtable and Chas. Mason spoke briefly.

Mr. Annis was then tendered the unanimous nomination. Speaking in reply the nominee stated that he would not be human if he did not appreciate the heartiness with which he had been received and the unanimity with which he had been offered the nomination. He would not give the Convention a definite answer now, but would state what he intended to do in the course of a few days.

Toronto Live Stock

Union Stock Yards, June 16, 1914.

Receipts were moderate.

57 cars—675 cattle, 2554 hogs, 583 sheep and lambs, 199 calves.

CATTLE:—The quality of the cattle on sale was far from being as good as on Monday, no extra quality loads and only a limited number of what might be called good. Prices were no lower when quality is considered. The highest price was for $8.35.

Choice butcher steers $8.25 to $8.35.
Good butcher steers $8 to $8.25
Medium butcher steers $7.80 to $8.10
Com. butcher steers $7.40 to $7.65.
Choice butcher heifers $8.25 to $8.35
Choice cows $7 to $7.35.
Good cows $6.50 to $6.90
Canners $3.50 to $4.75.

FEEDERS and STOCKERS:—Prices for feeders and stockers were not as high.

Choice steers $7.30 to $7.60
Medium steers $7 to $7.25
Stockers $6.40 to $6.75

Milkers and Springers:— Deliveries not large, with market easier at $65 to $100 each; bulk sold at $70 to $85 each.

CALVES:— The calf market was very firm.

Choice Veals $9.50 to $10.50; common and medium $7 to $8.50.

SHEEP and LAMBS:—Receipts were moderate.

Sheep $5.50 to $6.25, yearling lambs $7.50 to $8.25.
Culls and Rams $3.50 to $5.25.
Spring Lambs $6.00 to $8.50.

HOGS:—Receipts were again liberal, 1200 having arrived from the northwest, and 17 cars more on the way, besides the 1250 Ontario hogs on sale, caused prices to be easy at Monday's quotations.

Look out for still lower hog prices.

Selected, fed and watered $7.85 and $7.50 f.o.b. cars, and $8.10 weighed off cars.

CALEDON.

Mrs. H. Stuckey, who was so severely injured when the veranda on the Bennett House in Georges town collapsed, is, we are pleased to state, doing as well as can be expected.

On Monday evening last the angel of death again passed over our community and claimed as its victim an old and highly respected resident in the person of Mrs. Joseph Warnock. Mrs. Warnock was a patient sufferer for a long time, but she bore it without a murmur. Her husband pre-deceased her two years and a half ago. The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Wednesday from the home of Mr. W. J. Warnock to Willoughby's Cemetery, 1st line, west.

Mrs. Norman Coutts, of Powassan, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. W. J. Warnock.

Miss Ethel Armstrong, of Erin, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. William Moffatt.

A public meeting in the interets of Mr. Jas. R. Fallis, Conservative candidate, will be held in the township hall here on Thursday evening, June 18th. Addresses will be delivered by the candidate, J. J. Donaghy, Frank Jackson, and others. Ladies are specially invited. Discussion also expected.

Mr. John A. Vance, of Mono Mills, has been clearing the county road on 15 sideroad between Bell's mill and the 3rd line, of the huge rocks which made this road so rough. Mr. Vance uses a new and very powerful powder known as C. X. L. blasting material, and has become somewhat of an expert in the use of it, as those who saw the work he did were greatly surprised and some very favorable impressed too when they thought of what it would mean to them to have their fields cleared in a similar manner. One of the special features of this new invention is that the rock requires no drilling, which greatly reduces the expense of this kind of work.

Miss Ethel McKechnie of Cheltenham, and Miss Laura Kirke, of Campbell's Cross, spent the week end with their friend, Miss Olive McCartney, and sang a duet in the Methodist Church in the morning which was greatly appreciated by the congregation of that church.

Messrs. Thompson Nesbitt and Clayton Limebeer spent Sunday with Streetsville friends.

On Wednesday last a very pretty wedding took place in the Roman Catholic Church, Silvercreek, when Miss Ada Hillock became the happy bride of Mr. T. C. Sweeney. Both these young people are very popular here and we all join in wishing them a long and happy married life. Mr. and Mrs. Sweeney left on the evening train and will spend their honeymoon with friends in Toronto and Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Laughlin motored to Brampton last Saturday and spent Sunday with friends there.

Mr. Wm. Sanderson, who went to the west last spring and erected a nice little house on his homestead, had the misfortune to have it demolished by a cyclone which went through that district two weeks ago. Mr. Sanderson has returned home none the worse for his rather fearful encounter with the elements and now thinks that Ontario is good enough and big enough for him.

Women's Institute Notes.

A new Branch of the Women's Institute has been organized in Ruskview with Mrs. Seymour Newell, President, and Mrs. Levens, Secretary-Treasurer.

The Bowling Green Branch of the Women's Institute held a most successful Garden Party on Mr. Alf. Menary's lawn, Bowling Green, on the evening of June 11th. The evening was delightful and after partaking of a bounteous repast which the ladies had provided a splendid programme was rendered. Mr. C. R. McKeown filled the chair in his usual pleasing style. The receipts were $100.

The first meeting of the Laurel W. I. was held in the Town Hall in Shelburne on Wednesday, June 3rd. Mrs. E. Richardson, of Laurel, presided at both sessions. The President's report showed that the work of the district was flourishing and also an addition of two new Branches during the year. Financially Dufferin W. I's. are strong, standing fourth among all the counties of Ontario. The Secretary's report showed a balance on the right side. The old officers were elected by acclamation. The usual routine of business was followed by an adjournment at 12 o'clock to meet again at 1.45. The afternoon session opened by singing followed by devotional exercises by the Rev. Dr. Caldwell followed by an address of welcome by Mrs. Caldwell. The reply was given by Mrs. John Blakeley, of Corbetton, in a neat and concise address. The following Paper and musical numbers were given, interspersed with reports from the Branches: — "A Talk with Mother and Girls," by Miss Bailey, Whitfield; duet, Mrs. Hepton and Mrs. Trimble, Laurel; "Nagging," by Miss G. Hamilton, Laurel; address by Mrs. M. N. Norman, Toronto; "The Value of Cheerfulness," by Miss Root, Violet Hill; solo by Miss Berwick, Shelburne.

The reports of the Branches showed that good work had been done during the year. Honeywood, Corbetton, Bowling Green and Hornings Mills might be mentioned as some of the Branches, which have been very successful in raising money during the year to be used in local improvements. The Convention was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

Bailey-Hogg.

A quiet wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hogg, Main Street, east, Shelburne, on Wednesday morning, June 10th, when their only daughter, Miss Edna Gertrude Hogg, was united in marriage to Mr. W. T. Bailey, of Shelburne. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. B. Stephenson, M. A., pastor of Knox Church. The bride was charmingly attired and received a number of handsome presents. The happy couple left by the morning train for Peterboro. On their return to Shelburne they will reside on Owen Sound St. in the residence recently purchased by the groom from R. J. Watson. Their many friends wish them success.—Free Press.

Mottershead-Harding.

The home of Mr. William Harding, West Broadway, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, June 13th, when his youngest daughter, Grace Lydia, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Mottershead, of Toronto, the Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white silk Japanese crepe trimmed with lace and finished with French knots and veil with wreath of white flowers. She carried a bouquet of white roses and fern and wore the groom's gift a gold pendant set with pearls. Miss Idella White, of Toronto, was the bridesmaid, wearing blue silk crepe trimmed with shadow lace and black velvet and carrying a bouquet of pink carnations and fern. Mr. Percival Harding was best man. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by the bride's sister, Miss Bessie Harding. Mr. Percival Harding sang "Silent as Night." The bride's travelling suit was of alice blue with white hat and touches of blue. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold pin set with pearls to the pianiste a bar pin and set of beauty pins and to the soloist an oriental watch fob. Mr. and Mrs. Mottershead left on the evening train for a trip to Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and other points and on their return will reside on Brock Ave., Toronto. Among the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Will Harding and son, Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harding and daughter, Durham, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mottershead, Miss May Mottershead, Misses Lillie and Robie Harding and Miss Idella White, of Toronto; Mr. Alex. Hardibg, Mount Brydges, and Miss Rachel Harding, of Hamilton.

TEMPERANCE SITUATION.

Dominion Alliance Issues an Important Manifesto.

Men Should be Nominated and Elected Who will Vote for Advanced Temperance Measures.

In view of the important place that the temperance question is occupying in the present Provincial elections, the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance has deemed it advisable to issue the following manifesto:—

"To the Electors of the Province of Ontario:

"The Executive Committee of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance desires at this critical juncture to place before you frankly and fairly the present position of the temperance question in relation to the approaching general election.

"The principle of prohibition as a remedy for the evils of the liquor traffic has three times been affirmed by large majorities in this province. Municipal prohibition has served a very distinct and useful place in the evolution of the reform, so that 63 per cent. of the municipalities are now under local prohibition. One hundred and thirteen other municipalities most of them incorporated cities, towns and villages, have given majorities in favor of prohibition, but have failed to register the necessary 60 per cent. vote.

Drink Habit Unpopular.

"The steady educational work of the churches, the discussion and presentation of facts in connection with local option campaigns, and the awakening of the industrial, commercial and scientific world to the economic waste and physical destructiveness of the liquor traffic and the drink habit have created a body of public sentiment which calls for a distinct advance in the matter of legislation.

"The unanimous vote of many large non-partisan conventions and church courts has called upon the Legislature to lessen these cruel evils by at least wiping out the barroom, the drinking club and the whole treating system.

Electors Should do Duty.

"In accordance with this sound and patriotic policy we urge upon the friends of our cause the duty of doing their utmost to secure the nomination and election of men who will fairly represent the people upon this supreme issue.

"We urge all right-thinking citizens to put their temperance principles before any mere party preferences in the approaching contest, and vote only for candidates who can be relied upon to support the most advanced temperance measure brought before the Legislature.

Destroy the Destroyer

"If, as we believe, this question is the most important before the electors of the Province, a question that has long pressed for solution, if it is true that wise and enlightened leaders in all departments of commercial, industrial and national life are becoming increasingly anxious to destroy the destroyer, we feel justified in asking all who love their country and care for the highest interest of their fellowmen to rise, if necessary, above party preference and affiliations, and insist that their representatives shall be untrammelled in their relation to this issue.

Up to the Electors Now

"Ministers and members of the Christian churches! The people of this Province have read and approved of the resolutions adopted from time to time by great ecclesiastical gatherings, and they look to you for leadership in this great campaign.

"Electors of the Province! You have in your own hands the remedy for the conditions you deplore. This is a fight in which an alliance of the Christian churches of our land can defeat the sordid and solidly united forces that support the liquor traffic.

"Will you act as independently for the fight as the liquor interests do for their selfish ends? If you do, the next Legislature will

"ABOLISH THE BARROOM.

"Signed on behalf of the Executive Committee.

"Canon R. W. E. Greene, President."

"Ben. H. Spence, Secretary."

McDowell-Hoey.

At Trinity Church, Adjala, at 11.30 o'clock on June 3rd, a quiet wedding took place when Mildred, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hoey, was united in marriage to Mr. Russell McDowell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McDowell, Mulmur, the Rev. G. L. Gray officiating. The bride, who was brought in and given away by her father was gowned in embroidery net over white silk trimmed with satin and pearls, sprays of orange blossom adorning the veil. She carried a large bouquet of white carnations, lily of the valley and ferns and wore the groom's gift, a gold locket and chain with diamond settings. The wedding march was played by Mrs G. L. Gray. After the ceremony a few friends returned to the bride's home for the wedding breakfast. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Toronto and Niagara. They took their departure amid showers of confetti and good wishes from their friends who had assembled at the depot to see them off. The bride travelled in a bronze suit and panama hat with large plume. On their return they will live on the groom's farm near Rosemont.

WENT TO OTHER FAITHS

SEVERAL PEERS HAVE TURNED TO EASTERN RELIGIONS.

British Law No Longer Visits Punishment Upon a Man Who Leaves Christianity to Assume Another Creed—Lord Headley Has Become a Moslem While Lord Mexborough Is a Devout Buddhist.

Since the death of the late Lord Stanley of Alderley, just ten years ago, the British House of Lords—supreme tribunal of the Empire—while boasting of the Buddhist Earl, in the person of Lord Mexborough, has had no Moslem peer to represent in its councils a religion professed by nearly 100,000,000 lieges of the British crown. This role will henceforth be filled by Lord Headley, who last week made a public profession of the fact that he had embraced the tenets of Islam, and had seceded from Christianity.

Whereas in olden times, says a recent writer, an apostasy of this kind would have been punished as an atrocious crime, it is nowadays regarded in the light of the harmless eccentricity, denoting some abnormality of a possibly brilliant mind. True, among the English officials of the civil service of India, it is visit with dismissal, and would doubtless cost any officer of the army, navy or the diplomatic corps his commission. But this is merely a matter of discipline.

There are no longer any legal penalties. It does not even entail the loss of the patronage of livings of the Established Church of England; and whereas, by laws dating from the time of the Reformation, conversion to Roman Catholicism involves the suspension of all inherited or purchased advowsons, a peer may become a Mohammedan, or Buddhist, or may publicly proclaim himself an Atheist, like the late Marquis of Queensberry, without forfeiting his right to select and appoint the rectors and vicars of often large and populous parishes—permitted therefore by the state to retain his responsibility for the spiritual welfare of the parishioners.

While Great Britain and all other Western powers—save Russia—tolerate conversions such as that of Lord Headley, they sternly refuse to allow the legal status of the person concerned to become in any way modified by the change of faith. Whereas polygamy is permitted by the European Governments to Orientals born and reared as Moslems, Lord Headley would be promptly arrested by the police and tried, like the Earl of Russell, by the House of Lords for bigamy, if he attempted to avail himself of the privilege accorded by Mohammed to true believers, to indulge in a plurality of wives.

Lord Headley's conversion to Islam marks the culmination of a career of much adventure and of interest, and he has enjoyed the well-nigh unique advantage of reading his obituaries at no less than three different periods of his life. Indeed, he has been so often reported as dead that when he is ultimately gathered to his fathers it will require something more than mere newspaper announcements to carry conviction of his demise.

He has spent much time prospecting in the Northwest of Canada; served through the Franco-German war on the staff of his friend the Prussian General von Goeben, fought beside the late Lord Ashburnham for the late Don Carlos in the several Carlist insurrections in Spain some forty years ago, and also figured on the Turkish side in the Turko-Russian war, which was brought to a close by the treaty of San Stefano and the Congress of Berlin.

The late Lord Stanley of Alderley, who was buried in England in unconsecrated ground ten years ago, with full Moslem rites, the only instance on record of the funeral of a peer of the realm under such circumstances, was also a very interesting man, though in his later years he developed an irascibility which did not precisely suggest the fatalist calm for which the followers of the Prophet are so distinguished. He commenced his career in diplomacy, but after about ten years abandoned it, in order to escape its trammels, and contracted a romantic marriage in 1861 in Switzerland with Dona Fabia Fernanlez y Funes of Madrid, who was stated to be the widow of a Spanish nobleman, Don Ramon Perez y Abril.

Lord Stanley of Alderley's conversion of Islam was brought about in the early eighties by his intimacy with Sultan Abdul Hamid, whose principal champion he became in the House of Lords and in the columns of The London Times, to which he contributed many interesting "letters to the editor."

Lord Mexborough's conversion to Buddhism is not so much a matter of eccentricity as of study and of travel. For the earl, if a crank in some respects, is a man of wide learning and culture, and has wandered all over the world, especially in the Orient, like his father.

Nor among the Buddhists who find a place in the pages of Burke's "Peerage," must one omit the name of the Marquis of Queensberry's sister, Lady Edith Douglas, married to a son of the late Gen. Fox-Pitt Rivers of Rushmore, Wiltshire, a professed Buddhist, like herself.

Lady Hester Stanhope, neice of Pitt, and a famous traveler, also became a Moslem.

After the death of her uncle, Prime Minister Pitt, for whom she kept house, and moreover broken-hearted by the death of her fiance, Gen. Sir John Moore and of her favorite half-brother, Charles Stanhope at the battle of Corunna, she left England, and spent the remaining thirty years of her life in Palestine. There, after becoming a convert to Islam, she acquired an extraordinary influence over the natives.

CALEDON COUNCIL.

Council Chamber, June 2nd, 1914.

Council met; Reeve presiding. Members all present.

Minutes of previous meeting read and adopted.

Mr. Jas. Pearson wrote the Council stating that the Council in 1913 agreed to build a concrete bridge on 2nd line, west, provided Mr. Pearson would clean out the river and asked that this arrangement be carried out also that he be allowed to expend the amount of his taxes on this road apart from the bridge.

Mr. Hillyard reported having let a job of filling a washout on No. 5 sideroad, between 4th and 5th lines, east, to D. Cunnington for the sum of $33.00, the work being done to his satisfaction, payment was recommended. Report adopted.

Mr. Moore, representing the Canada Ingot Iron Co., of Guelph, addressed Council in reference to goods manufactured by this firm.

Moved by Mr. Hawkins, seconded by Mr. Hillyard, that Messrs. Armstrong, Kannawin and Hawkins be a committee to examine north part of 1st and 2nd lines, west, as to necessary repairs required. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Kannawin, seconded by Mr. Hawkins, that the Reeve and Mr. Hillyard be a committee to have the necessary repairs made to bridge, lot 3, 1st line, east. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Hawkins, seconded by Mr. Hillyard, that the Reeve and Deputy-Reeve be a committee to build the necessary bridges and are empowered to let contracts for same. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Hillyard, seconded by Mr. Kannawin, that Mr. Carlyle, lot 6, con. 2, west, be allowed to perform 3 days statute labor on D. McLaren's division and that the Clerk notify the parties concerned to that effect. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Kannawin, seconded by Mr. Hawkins, that the Council grant N. Harrison the sum of $25.00 to be expended in his division, providing work to the same amount is supplemented. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Hillyard, seconded by Mr. Hawkins, that Mr. Armstrong be appointed to have the necessary repairs made opposite lot 30, 1st line, west. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Hillyard, seconded by Mr. Hawkins, that the whole Council be a committee to examine the bridge complained of by Jas. Pearson and that we meet at the bridge at an early date and decide the matter. Carried.

The following wire fence petitions were received, viz.:—

T. Graham, 250 rods, W. Dunn, 127 rods, J. McEnaney, 24 rods.

The following accounts were examined and passed and the Reeve's order issued for their payment, viz:—

COURT OF REVISION.

Council Chamber, June 2nd, 1914.

Council met as a Court of Revision. Members all present.

After being duly sworn, Mr. Quinn was appointed Chairman, and the several appeals entered were heard and disposed of as follows:—

R. Wilson, T. Bennett and N. Harrison appealed against assessment for dogs. Appeals allowed.

Chas. Brock appealed to have his name added and to be assessed as owner of w ½ lot 10, Main St., Belfountain. Assessed as desired.

T. Cook and W. Smith appealed against over assessment and W. H. McFadden appealed against over assessment of A. R. Robinson. T. Cook reduced $100.00 and appeals of W. Smith and W. H. McFadden, dismissed.

J. B. Smith appealed against being assessed for block 2, lot 3 (store), Alton; dismissed.

R. Thomas appealed against paying special tax to Alton Police Village; dismissed.

Thos. Smith appealed against under assessment of Chas. Mould; assessment raised $400.00.

Moved by Mr. Hillyard, seconded by Mr. Kannawin, that the Assessment Rolls for the year 1914 now pass as revised and the Clerk attach his certificate to that effect. Carried.

HEAT AND COLD.

What We Don't Know About Temperature Would Fill a Big Book.

The highest honors of the scientific world await exploration in the unknown fields of temperature. Strange as it may seem, we really know very little about temperature. Between the temperature of the surface of the sun, estimated at 6,000 degrees C., and absolute zero, estimated at minus 273 degrees C., very little has ever been discovered. The field of research has been practically restricted to 725 degrees or between the temperature of liquid air (minus 200 degrees) and the first visible red of heated iron (plus 525 degrees). We know that at a temperature of 1,000 degrees C. twenty-nine metals become liquid, at 1,062 degrees gold fuses, tungsten melts at 3,000 degrees, the temperature of the electric arc is 3,720 degrees, and here begins the great unknown in the world of heat.

The hottest thing on earth is the electric furnace, with a temperature of nearly 3,730 degrees. In this intense heat even the diamond can be melted and boiled like water. But this is barely halfway to the temperature of the surface of the sun, and it is thought that research in these higher temperatures will ultimately result in the greatest discoveries of the age.

What these discoveries may be no one can foresee, any more than anyone could have foretold the results of the discovery of radium.—New York World.

Which Foot Walks Faster?

If you will take a pavement that is clear, so that there will be no interference, and walk briskly in the center, you will find that before you have gone fifty yards you have veered very much to one side. You must not make any effort, of course, to keep in the center, but if you will think of something and endeavor to walk naturally you cannot keep a direct line. The explanation of this lies in the propensity of one foot to walk faster than the other, or one leg takes a longer stride than the other, causing one to walk to one side. You can try an experiment in this way by placing two sticks about eight feet apart, then stand off about sixty feet, blindfold yourself and endeavor to walk between them. You will find it almost impossible.

Rats as Food.

Rats are not entirely unknown as a food in England. Not so very long ago rat pies were comparatively common in Nottinghamshire, and one inn near the county town made a feature of periodical rat suppers and did very well out of it. And rats have been proved to have a medicinal value, for one Arctic explorer has recorded that those of his crew who were not too fastidious to eat of the good rat soup set before them by the cook enjoyed an immunity from scurvy, when all the abstainers from rats were stricken down.

Concrete Hog Houses and Feeding Floors

Enable you to raise bigger hogs and better pork without heavier feeding. A concrete feeding floor permits the animals to clean up all the feed without waste, and eliminates the possibility of your hogs contracting disease. To you they

Mean Bigger Profits

Hog houses of concrete are sanitary, easily cleaned, maintain an even temperature and give plenty of light and air, which tend to better the quality of pork. Concrete will not rust or rot. Never needs repairs or painting. It will outwear any other material for farm structures. Write for this beautifully illustrated free book "What the Farmer can do with Concrete." It shows how to build Hog Houses, Feeding Floors and many other things the farmer needs.

CARRYING FOREIGNERS.

Canadian Girls Will Do Well to Consult the Law.

Canada is becoming a cosmopolitan sort of a country, containing large numbers of foreigners, and intermarriage is by no means unknown among us. Nor is to be considered objectionable from many points of view, says The Family Herald.

But the utmost care should be exercised at the time of marriage to ensure the pact's holding good in other countries. For in these days of travel it is not enough to rank as married in Canada only, and single elsewhere.

A Frenchman, for instance, must, under the Code of France, have the full consent of his parents if under twenty-five years of age. Otherwise his marriage, wherever and however solemnized, is null and void according to French law. No one could help a woman in any redress, whose husband, married without parental consent, deserted her to return to his own country.

If the foreigner is a German, and the marriage takes place under British laws, it is valid in Germany, "so far as the form is concerned," to quote a German consular document on the subject. But it is well to remember that in some parts of Germany a male German has to observe certain conditions, and if he ignores them, the marriage may involve legal disadvantages. It should also be borne in mind that a German who is under twenty-one years of age requires the consent of his parents.

Considering the large number of Italians residing in this country, it is necessary for a Canadian girl, who meditates marrying a subject of King Victor Emmanuel, to insist that her prospective husband shall conform to the laws of his country.

First of all, the banns of marriage must be published at his place of birth or domicile in Italy, and at the Italian consulate in whose district she and her sweetheart reside. If her lover is under twenty-five years of age, she must see to it that he obtains the consent of his parents or guardians, otherwise the marriage is not legal in Italy. It is essential that the marriage be registered at the husband's place of birth or domicile. The Italian consulate will undertake the registration.

As regards Spaniards who wish to marry Canadian girls, if they are under twenty-four years of age, they must first obtain the consent of their parents. Without this consent the marriage is not legal. Nor is it valid unless the registrar's certificate has been registered in the nearest Spanish consulate.

The marriage of a Canadian girl and a Russian is hedged by serious perils. Let those of our countrywomen who have accepted proposals of marriage from the subjects of the Czar remember that a civil marriage is not valid in Russia. A religious ceremony is absolutely essential, whether the bridegroom belongs to the Orthodox or any other church in Russia.

Before a Russian can get married he has to give to the priest a certificate obtained from a recruiting office.

A recent Act of the English Parliament seeks to protect British subjects who want to marry foreigners, whether at home or abroad. If they are residing in the United Kingdom, and want to marry in a foreign country, they must give notice of the marriage to the superintendent registrar of marriages, but if their domicile is in a foreign or overseas country, like Canada, notice must be given to the marriage officer for the time being under the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892.

Certificates from either of these officials must be secured, showing that there are no impediments to the marriage. There are penalties if a certificate has been obtained under false pretences.

Cases have already occurred of ill results from hastily, or ignorantly constructed marriages in the Dominions. It is best in every instance to secure the very best legal advice before entering into marriage contracts with foreigners, if only for the protection of posterity.

Goldfields of the Yukon.

Better not go to the Yukon gold fields to hunt your fortune, was the hint dropped in a recent lecture by Prof. Coleman.

The individual miners have made their pile and got out, leaving the ground to huge corporations, according to the professor. One company, he described, has piped water for 60 miles to the scene of its operations in gravel pits. The yield is as small as $2.50 worth of gold to a ton of material treated. Besides this hydraulic method of getting the gold there are the dredges which eat their way up even very small streams dredging up the bottom and extracting the ore as they go.

No Minor Crime.

"Arrest my husband! I think he is heading for Orangeville!"

This message shocked the ears of Chief Marshal in the small hours of a morning recently. It was a long distance call from Shelburne, and it was the voice of an excited woman.

"What has he done?" queried the chief, who had a mental flash that a safe had been rifled.

But it was even worse than the trained mind of the chief could have imagined.

"He has run off with a basket of eggs!" came the hysterical reply.—Orangeville Sun.

May Establish Corn Farm.

A "corn farm" somewhere in Essex or Kent, for experimental work, research in seed selection, and the like, may yet be included in the activities of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. It is not possible to grow seed corn at the Agricultural College, Guelph, and mature it with the same results as in the southwestern counties.

CLEANS-DISINFECTS

THE GOOD WORK OF THE DOWNY WOODPECKERS.

Much is said nowadays about planting trees and taking care of the forests. It is certainly necessary to protect the trees, for lumbermen chop them down, fire destroys them, and there are certain insects, called borers, which eat out their very life.

There is one little bird, called the downy woodpecker, which tries to help save the trees. His sharp ears hear the borers eating into the trunks of the trees, and his quick bright eyes spy out the nests of the borers which are tucked away in the bark of the trees. The woodpeckers eat up the borers and destroy their nests, and thus they save many trees from destruction. This is the reason that the State of Washington has honored this bird by choosing it for the new State seal.

The downy woodpecker is only about six inches long, with black and white feathers and a red patch on the back of its head. It chirps "Clink! Clink!" like the big hairy woodpecker, only not so loudly.

HORSE ROUTES.

Mr. Geo. W. Hepton's thoroughbred Stallion, Cormorant (Reg. No. 7463, Vol. VII., Pg. 378, Bruce's American Stud Book) will stand for mares at his own stable at Laurel during the present season. Cormorant is a beautiful mahogany bay with black points, stands 16.1 hands high and weighs over 1300 pounds. He is sired by Phenix, who was by Mr. Pickwick, imported, and he by the renowned Hermit, a Derby and St. Leger winner. Glen Hop, Cormorant's dam, is by imported Glengarry and is one of the best brood mares in the stud book. She is the dam of several stake horses, her eighth foal bringing $2800 at auction when a year old.

The Clydesdale stallion, King Alfred (10873. Vol. XIX.) will make the season of 1914 at the stable of his owner, Mr. Geo. I. Nodwell, lot 2, 18th line, East Garafraxa. King Alfred is a fine large horse, 4 years old, with lots of bone and a splendidly shaped body and limbs. He weighs about 1800 lbs. and has a splendid record as a sire and prize-winner. Last and this year he won Firsts at Orangeville, Hillsburg and Grand Valley Spring Shows and has also won prizes at Guelph Fall, and Winter Shows. Cards giving pedigree and full particulars may be obtained from Mr. Nodwell.

Baron Again (12836) a pure bred Clydesdale stallion, owned by W. J. Trathen, of Caledon, will make the following route this season :—Wednesday he will leave his own stable at the Vogan House, Charleston, and proceed to W. J. Trathen's, lot 15, 2nd line, east, Caledon, for noon, and thence back to his own stable, where he will remain until Friday; on Friday he will travel by the 1st line, west, to Wilmer Dawson's at Melville for noon and thence back to his own stable until the following Wednesday morning. W. McCort, Manager.

The choice bred imported Clydesdale stallion, Dunure Postman (15377) (15206), owned by J. E. Thompson, will make the season of 1914 at his own stable, The Commercial House, Orangeville. Dunure Postman is a beautiful brown horse and was bred by Robert Kay, Flishmillan, Newburgh, Fife, Scotland. His sire Marcellus was a son of the famous Hiawatha, who was for three years Champion of Scotland, Marcellus won Championship and Grand Championship at Toronto and Chicago. Dunure Postman has already made a splendid reputation as a stallion of substance and quality. N. Thompson, Manager.

Geo. W. Hepton's heavy draught stallion Albion (14453) (16435) will make the following route this season :—Monday, from his stable at Laurel to John Sproule's, Crombie, and thence to Richard Fife's for night; Tuesday to Wm. Tansley's for noon and John Staveley's, Whittington, for night; Wednesday, to his own stable; Thursday, to John Menary's, Farmington, for noon and the Grand Central stables, Orangeville, for night. Friday, to George Duke's, Prince of Wales Road for noon and thence to his own stable until the following Monday morning Peter Walker, Manager.

THE CHOICE BRED IMPORTED CLYDESDALE STALLION.

BARON'S FANCY

will make the season of 1914 as follows :—

Tuesday—May 5th, will leave his own stable, Lot 37, Con. 1, Albion, to W. A. Donaldson's, Lot 5, Con. 6, Mono, for night.

Wednesday—To his own stable, where he will remain until the following Tuesday.

TERMS—$15.

JAMES HAFFEY,
Owner and Manager.

The choice bred imported Clydesdale stallion, Kirmimmooch Mac (12122) (16172) will make the season of 1914 at his own stable, Commercial House, Orangeville. Kirmimmooch Mac is a beautiful bay horse, with stripe on face and hind legs white. He was foaled in May, 1908, bred by James Todd, Strathmiglo, Scotland, and imported by Graham Bros., Claremont. His dam, Kiminnooch Princess, was got by Prince of Albion, the Montrave Shield horse. Kirmimmooch Mac has several prizes to his credit in Scotland and is without doubt one of the best Clydesdales in Canada to-day. N. Thompson, Manager.

Thomas Hardy at Home.

A London paper, commenting upon the standing of Thomas Hardy with his townspeople, says: "In point of fact the presence of Thomas Hardy—a legend to the great world—means practically nothing to the life of Dorchester. Its farmers, factors, shopkeepers, keen, plump, rosy, practical men, who are hard as nails at a bargain and 'do themselves well,' look upon Thomas Hardy as the son of his father and the brother of his brother. They know dimly that he has 'made a good thing out of book writing.' They respect him. They are proud to know that the world rings with his fame. But they wonder why."

Newspapers and Geography.

A correspondent, writing on the subject of a daily paper as a geography, states: "I have carefully gone over twenty-four pages, with their 168 columns, noting the places named. The list numbers 1,447, of which England claims 622, Scotland 64, Ireland 29, Europe 262, Asia and Australasia 163, Africa 110, North America 159, South America 27. In point of space they range, of course, not only from China to Peru, but from pole to pole."—London Chronicle.

Knew Them at Once.

The vicar appointed to a living in an old English village was anxious to restore his church. On either side of the porch were grotesque, not to say hideous, faces that had become almost hidden. The vicar had these ancient faces worked up until their features were made distinct. Then he took a very old lady of the parish to see them and jokingly asked if she could tell him who they were. "Why, bless my heart, sir," said she, peering at the old ornaments, "it's you and your good lady!"

Expert Tattooers.

The inhabitants of the Marquesas islands are among the most expert tattooers on earth, and not even the crown of the head, the fingers and the toes are exempt from the needle. The hands are ornamented with utmost care, all the fingers having their own pattern, so the hand would look as though incased in a tight fitting glove were it not for the finger nails of enormous length which complete the hand adornment of the wealthier natives.—London Telegraph.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

Has no greater Cooking Convenience than you can have on the Farm or in the Village

Cooking in a hot, stuffy kitchen on a sizzling hot wood or coal range in summer has probably made more women discontented with farm or village life than any one thing. She thinks of the gas stoves the city folk can cook on. We have a joyful message for these women.

The "Detroit" Vapor Gasolene Stoves

Work just like a city gas stove, so you do not have to be without the convenience of a city gas stove any longer, no matter where you live. No storage or pressure tanks needed. You can put the stove in any part of the kitchen. Simply light the burners and the stove is ready to cook on. We invite you to look at them, and we will give you a little book showing the different styles and sizes.

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XVII.—continued.

She thanked him with a look and rose to her feet.

"Go down and rescue the rags of my reputation," she said, smiling. "I expect it is pretty well in shreds by now. To-morrow morning I shall have made up my mind what to do."

* * * * * * *

"I must confess," Mr. Carter said, pursing out his lips in a manner peculiar to him, "that the young lady has always been an object of some suspicion to me."

"The way she monopolizes—has always monopolized those two young men is most barefaced," Miss Ellicot declared. "Still, one must not be uncharitable. I wish it were possible to get rid of one's suspicions."

"Her references," Mrs. White said anxiously, "were really excellent."

Miss Ellicot smiled. Mr. Carter also smiled. Mrs. Bodham shook her head solemnly.

"References are so easy, my dear Mrs. White," she said.

Mr. Bullding gulped down his coffee and grunted audibly.

"God bless my soul," he said, "what's wrong with the girl? Scarcely spoken a word to her in my life, but if it's her story against Hill's, give her a chance, I say."

Hill himself at that moment entered. He was carrying in his hand a folded paper. He addressed himself to Mrs. White.

"I've brought you this document to look at, ma'am," he said. "Read it through, and show it to all the other ladies and gentlemen, if you like. I'm not asking you to take my word against any one's. There's proof—all the proof that any sane person can need."

Mr. Carter made his way to Mrs. White's side. His eyes were bright with curiosity. With twitching fingers he drew from his pocket a pair of spectacles and hastily adjusted them.

"Dear, dear me, what's this?" he exclaimed. "What's this? Upon my word, a marriage certificate."

The young man stood with his hands in his trousers pocket, an unlit cigar in the corner of his mouth.

"Read it," he said. "Read it, all of you. I don't mind. Nothing secret about me. Montague Hill—that's my name—and Annabel Pellissier—commonly known as Anna, I believe. Married at the British Embassy at Paris. Bit swagger that, you know, and cost me a pretty penny. What's the odds, though? Montague Hill's no pauper—no, sir."

He bit the end off his cigar, and stretched out his hand for the paper, which Mrs. White held towards him. Mr. Carter, however, was quick to seize it.

"Dear, dear!" he exclaimed, pursing out his lips. "It is indeed a marriage certificate. Montague Hill, bachelor, and Annabel Pellissier, spinster. All quite correct. My dear sir, you have my sympathy."

"Don't want it," the young man declared brusquely. "Give me the paper."

Mr. Carter parted with it reluctantly. He took a long time folding it, and Mr. Hill at last snatched it unceremoniously from his hands. Brendon and Courtlaw entered at that moment. Their appearance was so unexpected and so unusual that there was a moment's silence. Then Miss Ellicot, with a thin smile, motioned to them to join her on the sofa.

"Dear, dear me! Isn't this a sad thing?" she exclaimed, "and you all such friends too."

Brendon stretched out his long legs, and looked thoughtfully at his toes.

"Isn't what sad?" he asked calmly.

"Why, this affair about Miss Pellissier—or Mrs. Hill, as I suppose we must call her. To think that we never suspected it! But perhaps you two knew. Such friends as you have been, I dare say she told you all about it."

"All about what?" Brendon asked again.

"Why, her marriage, of course," Miss Ellicot said calmly.

They both looked at her.

"Surely," Brendon exclaimed, "nobody here can honestly believe that ridiculous story."

"Fancy," Sydney Courtlaw remarked, "a girl like Miss Pellissier married to a bounder like that fellow Hill. Can't think how he had the nerve to try it on, even for a bluff."

Miss Ellicot sighed, and looked demurely into her lap.

"Dear me, I thought that you knew," she murmured. "We have all been shockingly deceived, Mr. Brendon. Mr. Hill's story is perfectly true. He has the marriage certificate here. We have all seen it."

"Absurd!" Sydney muttered. "It's damned ridiculous," he added, under his breath.

"You are very foolish," Miss Ellicot said sharply. "People don't forge marriage certificates nowadays."

The young man turned away from Mrs. White, and glanced truculently towards them.

"What's that about forging marriage certificates?" he asked.

Miss Ellicot smiled up at him sweetly.

"It is nothing, Mr. Hill," she declared. "Only I cannot persuade Mr. Brendon and Mr. Courtlaw here, who are great friends of Miss Pellissier, that she is really married to you."

Hill looked at them with darkening face.

"I don't know as it matters," he said slowly. "I don't know as it matters either way. But I don't want to hear anything about forgery, or there'll be trouble. If a properly stamped and witnessed legal document ain't to be believed—well it isn't likely that anything I could say would convince them."

"You are quite right, Mr. Hill," Brendon said coolly. "Neither your document nor anything you could say would ever induce me to believe your story. Put it away, please. Pray, don't waste your time showing it to me."

"I wasn't going to," Hill declared. "What you believe, or don't believe, wouldn't trouble me in the least. Facts are facts, and I can prove all I say, as you'll know before long."

The door leading into the hall stood wide open. Hill turned suddenly towards it. Brendon, even more quick in his movements, blocked the way. Anna had descended the stairs, and was passing along the passage.

"Here, let me pass!" Hill exclaimed.

Sydney joined Brendon. Everyone in the room regarded the three young men with breathless interest.

"I think not," Brendon said coolly. "You have made yourself objectionable enough already to Miss Pellissier. Sit down, please."

"But I won't sit down," Hill declared, fuming. "What right have you to interfere between a man and his wife, eh?"

"Fiddlesticks," Brendon declared scornfully.

"Rot!" Sydney echoed.

Hill pushed forward.

"I'll show you whether it's rot or not," he exclaimed furiously.

He found himself in the grasp of a giant. He was set down gently upon a chair, and he felt as though all the breath had been shaken out of his body. Outside in the street an omnibus had stopped to pick up a passenger. Glancing over his shoulder, Brendon saw Anna climbing briskly up the stairs to the top.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Marriage Certificate.

Anna looked about her admiringly. It was just such a bedroom as she would have chosen for herself. The colouring was green and white, with softly shaded electric lights, an alcove bedstead, which was a miracle of daintiness, white furniture, and a long low dressing table littered all over with a multitude of dantily fashioned toilet appliances. Through an open door was a glimpse of the bath-room—a vision of luxury out of which Annabel herself, in a wonderful dressing gown and followed by a maid, presently appeared.

"Too bad to keep you waiting," Annabel exclaimed. "I'm really very sorry. Collin, you can go now. I will ring if I want you."

The maid discreetly withdrew, and Anna stood transfixed, gazing with puzzled frown at her sister.

"Annabel! Why, what on earth have you been doing to yourself, child?" she exclaimed.

"The very question, my dear sister," she said, "tells me that I have succeeded. Dear me, what a difference it has made! No one would ever think that we were sisters. Don't you think that the shade of my hair is lovely?"

"There is nothing particularly the matter with the shade," Anna answered, "but it is not nearly so becoming as before you touched it. And what on earth do you want to darken your eyebrows and use cosmetics for at your age? You're exactly twenty-three, and your got up as much as a woman of forty-five."

Annabel shrugged her shoulders.

"I only use the weeniest little dab of rouge," she declared, "and it is really necessary, because I want to get rid of the 'pallor effect.' Do you remember when we were both called the 'Moonlight Madonnas'? And, you know, nowadays it is piquante to make up, if you don't really need to. Men like it."

Anna made no remark. Her disapproval was obvious enough. Annabel saw it, and suddenly changed her tone.

"You are very stupid, Anna," she said. "Can you not understand? It is of no use your taking my identity and all the burden of my iniquities upon your dear shoulders if I am to be recognized the moment I show my face in London. That is why I have dyed my hair, that is why I have abandoned my role of 'ingenue' and altered my whole style of dress. Upon my word, Anna," she declared, with a strange little laugh, "you are a thousand times more like me as I was two months ago than I am myself."

A sudden sense of the gravity of this thing came home to Anna. Her sister's words were true. They had changed identities absolutely. I was not for a week or a month. It was for ever. A cold shiver came over her. That last year if Paris, when Annabel and she had lived in different worlds, had often been a nightmare to her. Annabel had taken her life into her hands with gay 'insouciance,' had made her own friends, gone her own way. Anna never knew whither it had led her—sometimes she had fears. It was her past now, not Annabel's. And somehow she fancied that even then the faint smile which was parting her sister's lips was inspired by some secret knowledge, some grimly humorous reflection as to the nature of that burden which henceforth was hers. It was absurd to give way to such phantasies. Nevertheless Annabel's smile tortured her.

"It is very good of you to come and see me, my dear sister," Annabel remarked, throwing herself into a low chair, and clasping her hands over her head. "To tell you the truth, I am a little dull."

"Where is your husband?" Anna asked.

"He is addressing a meeting of his constituents somewhere," Annabel answered. "I do not suppose he will be home till late. Tell me how are you amusing yourself?"

Anna laughed.

"I have been amusing myself up to now by trying to earn my living," she replied.

"I hope," Annabel answered answered lazily, "that you have succeeded. By-the-bye, do you want any money? Sir John's ideas of pin money are not exactly princely, but I can manage what you want, I dare say."

"Thank you," Anna answered coldly. "I am not in need of any. I might add that in any case I should not touch Sir John's."

"That's rather a pity," Annabel said. "He wants to settle something on you, I believe. It is really amusing. He lives in constant dread of a reappearance of "La Belle Alcide," and hearing it said that she is his wife's sister. Bit priggish, isn't it? And if he only knew it—so absurd. Tell me how you are earning your living here, Anna—typewriting, or painting, or lady's companion."

"I think," Anna said, "that the less you know about me the better. Is all your house on the same scale of magnificence as this, Annabel?" she asked, looking round.

Annabel shook her head.

"Most of it is ugly and frowsy," she declared, "but it isn't worth talking about. I have made up my mind to insist upon moving from here into Park Lane, or one of the Squares. It is absolutely a frightful neighborhood, this. If only you could see the people who have been to call on me! Sir John has the most absurd ideas, too. He won't have manservants inside the house, and his collection of carriages is only fit for a museum—where most of his friends ought to be, by-the-bye. I can assure you, Anna, it will take me years to get decently established. The man's as obstinate as a mule."

Anna looked at her steadily.

"He will find it difficult, no doubt, to alter his style of living," she said. "I do not blame him. I hope you will always remember——"

Annabel held out her hands with a little cry of protest.

"No lecturing, Anna!" she exclaimed. "I hope you have not come for that."

"I came," Anna answered, looking her sister steadily in the face, "to hear all that you can tell me about a man named Hill."

Annabel had been lying curled up on the lounge, the personification of graceful animal ease. At Anna's words she seemed suddenly to stiffen. Her softly intertwined fingers became rigid. The little spot of rouge was vivid enough to draw the colour over from her lips. But she did not speak. She made no attempt to answer her sister's question. Anna looked at her curiously, and with sinking heart.

"You must answer me, Annabel," she continued. "You must tell me the truth, please. It is necessary."

Annabel rose slowly to her feet, walked to the door as though to see that it was shut, and came back with slow lagging footsteps.

"There was a man called Montague Hill," she said hoarsely, "but he is dead."

"Then there is also," Anna remarked, "a Montague Hill who is very much alive. Not only that, but he is here in London. I have just come from him."

Annabel no longer attempted to conceal her emotion. She battled with a deadly faintness, and she tottered rather than walked back to her seat. Anna, quitting her chair, dropped on her knees by her sister's side and took her hand.

"Do not be frightened, dear," she said. "You must tell me the truth, and I will see that no harm comes to you."

"The only Montague Hill I ever knew," Annabel said slowly, "is dead. I know he is dead. I saw him lying on the footway. I felt his heart. It had ceased to beat. It was a motor accident—a fatal motor accident the evening papers called it. They could not have called it a fatal motor accident if he had not been dead."

Anna nodded.

"Yes, I remember," she said. "It was the night you left Paris. They thought that he was dead at first, and they took him to the hospital. I believe that his recovery was considered almost miraculous."

"Alive," Annabel moaned, her eyes large with terror. "You say that he is alive."

"He is certainly alive," Anna declared. "More than that, he arrived to-day at the boarding house where I am staying, greeted me with a theatrical start, and claimed me—as his wife. That is why I am here. You must tell me what it all means."

"And you?" Annabel exclaimed. "What did you say?"

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. COOK, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

"Can"

ADVERTISING is the public expression of a master's will and wish—his word of power.

We want to say this to the merchants of this community:

You CAN make the public of this community buy more goods from you.

You CAN teach the public new customs, new tastes, new habits. You CAN make the public do what it is not in the habit of doing. Powerful and persistent advertising has revolutionized modern life. It sends people travelling. It has made them photographers. It has made the motor car a necessity. It makes women change the fashion of their apparel twice or thrice a year. It selects the very food we eat.

A NOTE TO THE PUBLIC

Does not the publicly expressed will and wish of the merchants of this community influence you in your shopping? Do you not go where you are guided? Are you not very attentive and responsive to the advertisements which appear each week in the columns of THE BANNER?

LADIES' OUTFITTER

A MIDNIGHT FIRE

Sammy Duckworth's Egg Emporium in Grand Valley Falls Prey to Flames.

Some young people returning from a garden party at Laurel about two o'clock Tuesday morning arrived at the opportune moment to save a large portion of the village from going up in smoke. Earl Fry, while near R. E. Hamilton's crossing heard a crackling noise and not seeing anyone on the sidewalk, looked down the street from which direction the noise came, and detected a light in Sammy Duckworth's egg emporium, and immediately gave the alarm of fire. He burst in the front door and found a comparatively small blaze burning on the main floor well to the back of the place. He soused it with a pail of water, one or two more being given by Mr. Lane and others who were early on the scene; and it looked as though the blaze was under control. But by the time they had returned with another supply of water the whole inside was a seething blaze. In an hour the place had fallen in and it soon burned itself out.

The old Gordon block at one time looked as if it was doomed, the fire getting a good hold on the roof, and working down beneath the sheeting.

Fire Chief Swain proved himself a good, useful man, for he had the engine in working order, the hose in readiness and there was no delay in getting the old man-killer to work. The engine undoubtedly saved the Gordon block and a certain further spread of the fire.

The contents of Tough & Co's store and Dr. McClelland's surgery, were moved out when the Gordon block took fire.

While the cause of the fire is not known, there is little doubt it was of incendiary nature, and a thorough investigation would be welcomed.

Mr. Duckworth was around the place on Monday morning and on Monday evening about nine o'clock, but he could not be located Tuesday morning, so we are unable to give any information as to what loss he sustained or what insurance he carried. There was no insurance on the building, which was owned by Charles Morrison.

The burned building was one of the land-marks of the village. It was built 53 years ago for a school house, and forty-seven years ago about this time R. E. Hamilton began teaching there, continuing for some years. A larger building being necessary the old school was turned into a store, and was conducted by Gordon & Hambly, by Dr. Gordon, and at last by Gordon & Son. For the last ten years Mr. Duckworth has occupied the premises as a butter and egg emporium.—Star & Vidette.

A SUDDEN CALL

R. H. Jupp Fell from Scaffold and Expired in a Few Minutes.

Was Inspecting Material and Work at New Bridge at Nicolston

Robert H. Jupp, civil engineer for the county of Simcoe, was killed at Nicolston on Friday afternoon of last week. The accident came without warning to Mr. Jupp or any person near him and there was absolutely no chance for any of the workmen to save him. Neither was there any chance for him to save himself once he lost his balance for the very nature of the place into which he fell absolutely precluded any possibility of escape from death to any man who should fall into it. Mr. Jupp had spent most of the afternoon at Nicolston inspecting the work on the new bridge which the county is building across the Nottawasaga. After examining timbers, piles, cement and all other materials he was scrutinizing the work already completed and the casing for the concrete work in the abutment on the west side. This is to be a very substantial and very solid piece of concrete work. The boxing for the abutment had been put up and preparations were under way for putting up the boxing for the wing walls. It was this in which Mr. Jupp was interesting himself and was looking at everything entering into its construction from a scaffold or platform erected at the top of the retaining box. To the bottom of the pit was a distance of about fifteen feet and into the earth had been driven numerous piles which were sticking up two or three feet. While standing directly over this pit Mr. Jupp in some way which will never be explained lost his balance and fell head first among the piles and the boulders which had been thrown in as an anchorage for the concrete which was to be poured in soon. Some of the workmen saw Mr. Jupp fall and only a couple of minutes elapsed till they were down to his assistance. He was lifted over the pit and carried over to a nearby bank. There were signs of life and both Dr. Harper and Dr. Corningham were summoned. Both being in their offices at the time they were able to reach the injured man in a few minutes, out by motor car. When the physicians arrived Mr. Jupp had expired. His injuries were fatal, the skull received three distinct fractures any one of which would be sufficient to cause death. The news of the accident seemed almost incredible to many in town. It occurred about a quarter to four and a few minutes later one was informing another of the fatality. The engineer had been in town a couple of hours before noon discussing with Mayor Mitchell and Reeve Elliott the work Alliston proposed to do on its portion of the county roads system. Mr. Jupp asked each to go out to Nicolston with him in the afternoon, but neither could accept. After he got his dinner he walked down to the Mayor's house to get the latter's horse and on his way called in to Mr. Joseph Whiteside to come out to Nicolston with him. Mr. Whiteside could not go so Mr. Jupp went out alone and the next time any of these men heard of him he was dead. His son, Ernest, a S.P.S. student, was employed on the bridge at the time of the accident, and at once took charge of his father's remains. Mr. W. F. Kinsey, undertaker, brought the body in and during the evening prepared it for burial. On Saturday morning it was taken by Grand Trunk to Orillia. The local members of the Masonic Order, of which Mr. Jupp was a member, escorted the remains to the depot. The death of Mr. Jupp leaves the office of county engineer vacant. He had filled this position for a number of years and although there was some opposition to him from outside sources, no complaint against him had ever been uttered in county council and only last session when some abuse was levelled at him by a writer, the letter was ordered thrown in the waste basket. Mr. Jupp was extremely popular among his friends and few there are who have been members of the county council since he became engineer who are not his friends.—Alliston Herald.

Arising From Constipation, Cured and Regular Habits Established by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes:—"For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SLEEP DEATH'S ENEMY

Eminent German Surgeon Emphasizes Necessity for Slumber.

Sunset and Sunrise Nature's Time for Sleeping and Awakening.

That sleep is the "key to the timepiece of life," the "greatest enemy of death," the most vital factor for long life, and that the sending of children to school at seven and eight o'clock in the morning, as is done in Germany, is "barbarous" and a "massacre of life" are some of the statements made by Prof. Carl Ludwig Schleich in an article on "How to Prolong Our Life," says the New York Sun.

Prof. Schleich is one of the most eminent surgeons and medical authorities in Germany, and is also widely known in other countries. The local anaesthetic which he discovered is used by surgeons and physicians for operations in every civilized land.

Dwelling upon the necessity and relation of optimism to longevity Prof. Schleich quickly passes over the necessity of hygiene, moderation and temperance, and declares that the secret of long life lies in two things—elasticity of the veins and arteries and sleep.

"What can we do," he asks, "to protect our elastic, rubberlike cell system and prevent the loss of energy through what is known as 'calcification?'

"I know nothing more important than gymnastics of the blood vessels of the skin—systematic 'turn exercises' of the millions of little ringlet-like muscles of the blood vessels in the skin—and second—the art to sleep, developed to a tyrannical point.

"Everybody feels instinctively that sleep is the greatest physician for the suffering of the day. Sleep is not only the 'beautiful brother of death,' as the ancient Greeks characterized it, but is in fact the enemy of death.

"Sleep quietly one half of your life away! You will have twice as much of the other half! This is a maxim that ought to become a part of our flesh and blood. The oft repeated 'eight hours for work, eight hours for pleasure and eight hours for sleep,' is unquestionably false.

The civilized man or woman of today must learn to sleep at the very least ten hours of the twenty-four if he or she expects to check the increased wear and irritability of his or her modern neurasthenic life and temperament. The extra two hours, I believe, should be taken from work time rather than from the hours for pleasure and recreation."

The professor says that there are many who cannot even sleep eight hours, not to mention ten. These, he says, must by "iron force" learn the art of sleeping. Go to bed at 9. If for a time you lie awake four hours you will soon find that you drop asleep in three, and before long without in half an hour after retiring.

"Sunset and sunrise are nature's time for sleeping and awakening," declares Prof. Schleich. "Those who postpone or shift this time and endeavor to find in the sham sun of electricity and abnormants of daylight will sooner or later fatigue their hearts and blood vessels. Because sleep is that pause during which the throbbing blood tubes, which pulsate like the heart, drive at half power. Sleep is the preserver of the spiral electricity of the blood vessel—it is the key that winds up the timepiece of life.

"I declare that it is schoolmaster barbarity and a deliberate massacre of life when I see children, pale, creepy and bloodless, dragging themselves to school at eight o'clock in the morning. This unnatural anti-hygienic and brainless violence upon the sleep of our little ones should be stopped. Here indeed is the principal cause for the checking of the stream of life and the principal reason of degeneration and childlessness. Why in the world could not the schools begin at two o'clock?"

Marvels of the Wireless.

The inauguration of the wireless service at sea, a thing but of yesterday, is credited with having already saved nearly 3,000 lives.

The public imagination, says the London Chronicle, is stirred only by sensational tragedies, when ships actually doomed have sent out despairing messages by this means. But not a month passes without some vessel being warned of imminent peril by wireless. The highways of the sea are strewn with derelicts, and the western portion of the North Atlantic is a great danger zone from this cause; but in one year 131 messages were sent from coast stations to passing ships warning them of these floating perils, and vessels, and vessels proceeding on the North and South Atlantic routes report to each other when any derelict is sighted.

Even in the early days of the Marconi system, when it was ridiculed by skeptics, there were striking proofs of its value as a life-saving invention. The lighthouse keeper at the Lizard, for instance, received a message from a fog-bound ship out at sea stating that the captain believed himself to be in the neighborhood of the Lizard, and asking that if the message was "received" the powerful foghorns might be blown. This was done, and shortly afterwards a big German liner which had been making straight for the rocks altered her course and proceeded up the Channel.

The captain, on arrival at Southampton, acknowledged the response to his "wireless" by a letter to the lighthouse keeper. He explained that he had been running in the fog for nearly two days, and that his wireless installation had saved him from disaster. Since that early experience of the Marconi system there have been thousands of similar cases, unheard of by the great public, but familiar in the conversation of seamen.

Mr. Lempfert, superintendent of the British Forecast Division of the Meteorological Office, contributes an article in which he acknowledges the debt of gratitude that meteorologists on shore owe to their colleagues afloat in the endeavor to make the collection of information about the weather of the greatest benefit to those on land and sea. No doubt, he says, the day is distant when it will be possible to draw a weather map for the whole globe day by day, but progress in that direction is steady, though slow. Wireless is expected to play as important a part in the distribution of forecasts as it does in the collection of weather reports. A widespread distribution by ordinary telegraphy has proved too expensive, and distribution from a centrally situated wireless station of sufficient power, supplemented by the telephone, may ultimately prove a satisfactory solution of the present difficulties standing in the way of effective circulation.

Wireless operators at Sandy Hook, Sea Gate and Atlantic Highlands and on ships leaving the harbor, together with scores of amateur wireless enthusiasts in Greater New York and along the Jersey coast, were mystified on a recent afternoon by hearing through their receivers the voice of Caruso singing. Most of the delighted ones did not know to whom they were indebted for the canned solos of the great tenor, but it wasn't long before some of them found out that the concert was a part of a wireless telephone test made by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company at its station on the roof of the Wanamaker store in Philadelphia.

PERFECT HEALTH DUE TO THE BLOOD

No Girl or Woman Need be Constantly Ailing and Unhappy.

Nature intended every girl and every woman to be happy, attractive, active and healthy. Yet too many of them find their lives saddened by suffering—nearly always because their blood is to blame. All those unhappy girls and women with colorless cheeks, dull skins and sunken, lustreless eyes, are in this condition because they have not enough good red blood in their veins to keep them well and in the charm of health. They suffer from depressing weariness and periodical headaches. Dark lines form under their eyes, their heart palpitates violently after the slightest exertion, and they are often attacked with fainting spells. These are only a few of the miseries of bloodlessness. Nothing can rescue girls and women from the inevitable decline that follows anaemia except a generous supply of new, rich, red blood, and nothing has ever proved so successful in creating red, good blood as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Thousands and thousands of girls and women owe their good health and charming complexion to the use of this medicine. Here is one example of its power to cure. Mrs. Rose Rolli, Toronto, Ont., says: "For a long time I suffered with anaemia, nervousness and general debility, in fact I was beginning to feel a positive wreck. I tried several medicines and emulsions. For a time I would feel better for taking them and then the effect would wear off, leaving me worse than before. The continued drain on my health altered my appearance, my friends telling me I had a haggard and worn appearance. This naturally did not help to improve me, as you know no woman likes to be told she looks "worn out." Finally Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were suggested and my husband got me a supply. I used them and found the result good—not only good, but the benefit lasting, and I am now enjoying perfect health, have a good color and have regained my natural buoyancy. I trust my letter of gratitude may be the means of helping others who are suffering as I was."

New health, new strength, new vitality, follow the fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get them from your medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NEW $5 NOTE.

The Sterling Bank of Canada has issued a new $5 note of most striking design, the face of this note being of a bright golden color, the reverse, a brilliant red.

The bank is to be congratulated, not only on the artistic appearance of this bill, but also on the quality of workmanship. As an additional safe guard, a silk fibre thread paper has been used similar to that of the United States Government.

The bill is very noticeable and attractive.

Potato Diseases.

There has been issued by the department of agriculture at Ottawa a remarkably well executed folder, Farmers' Circular No. 4, entitled "Potato diseases transmitted by the use of unsound tubers," showing in natural colors, representations of specimens of diseased potatoes. Diseases and other blemishes represented are potato canker, powdery scab, hollow potato, internal brown streak, little potato disease, dry rot, wet rot, common potato scab and stem end rot Special reference is made to potato canker and powdery scab, the latter of which occurs already in Canada and should be carefully avoided. The folder points out that, under the destructive Insect and Pest Act of Canada, any person using for seed potatoes infected by potato canker or powdery scab is liable to prosecution. Potato growers who suspect the presence of either of the latter diseases are requested to send specimens to the Dominion botanist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. This folder, prepared by Mr. H. T. Gussow, Dominion botanist, will be sent free to those who apply for it to the publication branch of the department of agriculture at Ottawa.

THE PATH TO GOD.

Every path that takes a man nearer to God and to the truth about himself is sure to be a hard path, a true way of the cross. But a good man does not want things to be made easy for him. He may have to apologize here and there. He may have to confess things which have lain hidden in his breast. Still, let him not hesitate. He is standing at the gate of new life. It may be an iron gate. Still, let him go up to it, and I believe he will find that it will open of itself and admit him to the city of God. There may be many a pang of pain by the way; but it will be that kind of pain which we even like to feel, the pain of an old wound which away down at its base has begun to heal. It will be that kind of pain which means that the principle of sound life within us has been established. It will be the pain which itself is a proof that we are now on the way back to moral vigor, back to personal honor and to candid dealings with ourselves and with other people and with God.—Church Life.

A yearly fleece take off our sheep—
The hens lay every day!

A few weeks yield the honey store;
The blossom, fruit, and all are o'er—
The hens lay every day!

For other things too long we wait,
Our life is short and pay day late—
The hens lay every day!

Hospital Notes

The regular monthly meeting of the Daughters of the Empire was held at the residence of Mrs. C. R. McKeown on Friday, June 12th. The Chapter was well represented. After the business had been transacted, Miss Edith Marsden gave an interesting Talk on Woman Suffrage. The address was much appreciated by all the members.

The kind donations of chickens and butter from Mrs. McMaster, Prince of Wales Road, and a tent from Mrs. Hyland were gratefully received.

At the meeting on Friday it was decided to erect a new verandah on the south side over the main entrance to Lord Dufferin hospital. This will not only add considerably to the appearance of the building, but also to the comfort of the patients as well. The intention is to build the hospital with sleeping apartments above.

BABY'S HEALTH DURING HOT WEATHER

During the hot spell the health of baby must be carefully guarded. Diarrhoea, cholera infantum and dysentry carry off thousands of precious little lives every summer. Baby's Own Tablets are especially adapted to keep the little ones well during the summer. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach, and an occasional dose will prevent the dreaded summer complaints, or if they do come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will set baby right again. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The four Ottawa controllers have been unseated owing to irregularities in the January elections.

Dominion Day.

After a lapse of several years Orangeville is again going to have a First of July celebration. This time it is the Dufferin Lacrosse Club that is taking charge of the celebration. Arrangements have been made for two lacrosse matches—a junior game between two local teams and a senior match between The Dufferins and The Maitlands, of Toronto. The latter should furnish an excellent exhibition of the national game as the Maitlands have a speedy team and in the exhibition games against Fergus a few weeks ago the Dufferins also showed that they were capable of putting up a fast brand of lacrosse. The Maitlands won the junior championship of Ontario last season and this year are grouped with St. Catharines, who held the Globe Trophy for seven successive years. In the evening arrangements have been made for a football game between Orangeville and Connor, commencing at 6.45. The people of the town and vicinity should turn out in large numbers to support the lacrosse boys in their Dominion Day venture.

Electors of Orangeville:

I wish to announce that I have decided to stand for the office of Reeve in the event of Reeve White resigning to run for the Mayoralty. I have spent four years on the School Board and four years in the Town Council, one as deputy-reeve and one as reeve. I think I can therefore claim that I have a working knowledge of the affairs of the town and county. I respectfully solicit your hearty support in the event of an election.

Yours Truly
W. FAIRBAIRN.

ORANGEVILLE MAYORALTY

As I understand that Mayor Island will resign shortly, I desire to announce that I will be a candidate for the Mayoralty whenever the position is vacant. I am taking this step in compliance with the expressed wishes of a large number of ratepayers, and respectfully solicit your hearty support should I have any opposition.

Yours Faithfully
DR. G. H. CAMPBELL

ORANGEVILLE MAYORALTY

I desire to inform the electors of Orangeville that I will be a candidate for the position of Mayor, when the office becomes vacant through the expected resignation of Mayor Island. I have had eight years' municipal experience as a member of the Orangeville Council and have served under no less than five Mayors. I feel that my long record gives me a right to aspire to the Mayoralty, now that the position is about to be thrown open. I shall be grateful for your hearty support.

Yours Very Truly,
J. J. WHITE.

AT CAMP NIAGARA.

36th Regiment is Slightly Over Strength This Year

Orangeville Company Had a Pleasant Though Uneventful Trip.

Niagara Camp, June 15.

To The Banner.

The Orangeville Company of the 36th reached camp and got settled down to the routine of camp life without any mishap. The men's baggage was very slow in arriving on account of the great quantity of baggage to be transferred to the boats at Toronto. However at 9.30 p.m. on Monday the men were comfortably settled in their tents ready for a good night's rest.

The Camp is beautifully situated, the tents being pitched in Paradise Grove, where the large shade trees make it quite cool. The weather was decidedly cool on Monday night. The temperature took a drop of several degrees after nightfall and a strong breeze added to the sense of chilliness.

The men of the Orangeville Company thoroughly enjoyed the trip by special train to Toronto and across the lake by the steamer, Cayuga. They are a jolly lot of boys, many of them musicians, singers and athletes, so that a great twelve days is in store for them. The Y.M.C.A. has large tents on the camp grounds and also a large open air picture theatre at which is shown Canada's best moving pictures free of charge. The work is very light, consisting of target practice at the ranges.

The 36th Regiment is over strength by about five men. This constitutes a record for the Regiment, which has been invariably short of the full complement of men. The Regiment marched into Camp headed by a bugle band of well-trained buglers and the new regimental band from Port Credit. The 36th wore the new issue of uniforms and has the distinction of being the only khaki uniformed regiment in camp.

In all there are about 4000 men in camp, including 8 battalions of infantry, the Mississauga Horse, the Governor General's Body Guards and a Corps of Engineers. Lt. Col. R. C. Windeyer is in command of the Regiment. Major Gabriel and Capt. Kempthorne are the Majors and Capt. A. J. McCausland is Adjutant. Capts. Kennedy and Lieut. Jack Spence are in command of the Shelburne Company. Lieut. H. A. Dorrance was unable to come to camp with the Orangeville Company this year and Lieut. W. A. Spence, through sickness, will not join the Company until the end of the week. Capt. Harry McGuire has command of the Company. The officers and privates are:—Color Sergeant, W. G. Snooks; Sergeants, Ewart Macpherson, Herb. Tuck, R. E. Courtney; Corporals, Art Torrie, H. Wilcox, E. Nichol and F. A. Ellis and Privates, S. Arnott, R. Corbett, H. Curry, A. Crawford, J. H. Cruikshank, D. Donnelly, F. Golden, E. Hewson, Gordon Hunter, Oscar Hayes, J. Jenkins, G. Mossop, J. Mossop, G. R. Martin, Horace McGuire, E. Noble, H. Powers, D. Pierson, C. Pierson, L. Patterson, E. Statia, L. Smith, A. Tyner, F. Tate, G. Vanwyck, W. Walsh, C. Wickens, R. Young.

The regulations regarding intoxicating liquor will be strictly lived up to. There must be no liquor in camp and any man parading under the influence of liquor will be dismissed. This will do away with all possibility of any undesirable element making its influence felt in camp.

H. B. McGUIRE.

Anniversary at Laurel.

The 22nd Anniversary of the induction of Rev. J. R. Bell will be commemorated on Sunday, June 21st. Rev. Jenkins Burkholder will hold anniversary services in Bell Church, Laurel, at 3 p.m. and in Sproul Church, Black's Corners, at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. On Monday evening, June 22nd, the Laurel Church will hold its annual garden party in Maltby's grove. A goodly portion of the programme will be furnished by Robert Wilson, the well-known humerous entertainer. There will also be a baseball match between Laurel and Camilla teams, beginning at 6 o'clock, music by the Trimble Family orchestra and short addresses by John Best, M.P., C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., Rev. J. S. Stevenson, Rev. Mr. Cullis, Rev. W. M. Morris and Rev. D. J. Lane. Admission has been fixed at 25c and 15c.

Mrs. Joseph Warnock.

Caledon lost an old resident this week in the person of Mrs. Catherine Warnock, widow of the late Joseph Warnock. Her death took place on Monday. The funeral was held from the residence of her son, Mr. W. J. Warnock, Township Treasurer, to the Church of England cemetery, 1st line, west, Caledon, yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. W. J. Foster.

Much sympathy is expressed for the husband and relatives of Mrs. Wm. J. Foster, of Mono, who passed away in Lord Dufferin hospital on Saturday, after a severe illness caused by some internal trouble. Deceased, whose maiden name was Sarah Jane Harrison, was a sister of the late Robert H. Harrison, whose tragic death a couple of months ago is still fresh in the minds of our readers. Mrs. Foster was 36 years of age. The funeral was largely attended.

Edward W. Maxwell.

Edward W. Maxwell, a well-known Caledon farmer, passed away on Wednesday of last week aged 34 years and 4 months. Deceased had been in poor health for the last two years. He was a son of Mr. Wesley Maxwell and is survived by a widow and one son, John W. Maxwell, Amaranth, Washington Maxwell, Chicago, Nelson N. Maxwell, Mrs. W. M. Freebury and Mrs. T. H. Smith, of Caledon, are the surviving brothers and sisters. He was highly esteemed and his demise in the prime of life has caused deep sorrow in the community. There was a large attendance at the funeral, which was held to the Forest Lawn cemetery on Saturday afternoon. Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, conducted the services. The pallbearers were three brothers and three brothers-in-law, Messrs. Alan, Dan and Farquhar Baxter.

Mrs. R. W. Rooney.

The death of Mrs. Rooney, wife of Dr. R. W. Rooney, took place at her home, corner of John and York Sts, about 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon. The end was not unexpected, as the deceased had been in ill-health for two years or longer. Her death was the result of heart trouble. Mrs. Rooney, who was a daughter of the late John Witter, was born and spent her girlhood in Orangeville. She was in her 38th year and had been married for 17 years. She is survived by her husband, one son, John, her mother Mrs. Witter, and two sisters, Mrs. E. G. Bingham, Orangeville, and Mrs. G. E. Reynolds, of Beeton, who have the sympathy of our townspeople in their bereavement. Mrs. Rooney was a bright, vivacious woman, with a warm sympathetic nature and social qualities that endeared her to a wide circle of friends. She bore her long illness with splendid fortitude and it was unusual indeed to find her otherwise than bright and cheerful no matter how poorly she felt. There was a very large funeral on Sunday afternoon and the mass of floral tributes which surrounded and covered the casket bore impressive testimony to the sorrow and sympathy of friends. Rev. G. W. Tebbs, rector of St. Mark's Church, conducted the service at the house and grave. The pallbearers were Dr. R. N. Kyles, Dr. W. H. Bowles and Messrs. J. W. Aiken, J. J. Laverty, Alex. Firth and A. D. McKitrick. A large number of Shelburne friends were here for the funeral.

There are four candidates for the Conservative nomination for Nipissing, and all insist on having it.

SOLDIERY AT CHURCH.

Orangeville Company of 36th and Public School Cadets Attend Divine Service in St. Mark's.

The interior of St. Mark's Church presented rather a martial air on Sunday morning last, when the members of the Orangeville Company of the 36th Regiment and the Public School Cadets attended divine service. The youthful soldiery occupied the centre pews of the church and made an imposing spectacle. The men 'whose business 'tis to fight,' were attentive listeners to a forceful sermon, appropriate to the occasion, given by Rev. G. W. Tebbs. In his introductory remarks Mr. Tebbs spoke of the responsibilities of a soldier, and pointed out that after taking the King's coin a soldier was owned, clothed and fed by his country and his duty was to obey the King's commands and if need be to give his life for his country. Continuing Mr. Tebbs compared a soldier of the King with a soldier of Christ. A citizen soldier gives his life in the service of his country and King and in the British Empire this service was given voluntarily. There were good, bad and indifferent soldiers. It was the good soldiers the country wanted. A soldier of Christ must be a good soldier—a voluntary soldier—one ready to sacrifice his life for Christ. A soldier was not his own master, but must obey his superior's commands. To be a soldier of Christ he must obey His commands. "Their's not to reason why, but their's to do or die." In preaching his sermon Mr. Tebbs brought in several interesting incidents relative to the life of a soldier and in closing exhorted the assembled men to carry themselves and behave as good soldiers while in camp, saying that the people of Orangeville and district would be looking for them to bring credit to their Company.

After the service the two companies formed up outside the church and marched to the Public School grounds where they disbanded.

Mrs. Andrew Lennox

Mrs. Eliza Lennox, widow of the late Andrew Lennox, of Orangeville died at the home of her son, Mr. W. J. Curry, Erin township, on Tuesday at the ripe age of 85 years. The funeral will be held to Greenwood cemetery this (Thursday) afternoon.

TORTURED WITH RHEUMATISM

Could Not Walk, Until "Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Him

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd. 1913.

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up, making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-tives". They cured me of both the Rheumatism and Constipation. In my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-tives".

THE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE.

Report of the Annual Convention at Shelburne.

The fourth annual convention of the Dufferin Women's Institute was held in the town hall, Shelburne, on Wednesday, June 3rd, 1914. There were two sessions, morning and afternoon, about fifty delegates registering, representing nearly all the branches in the county. They were very enthusiastic.

A new branch was organized at The Maples on May 29th, which promises to be a good one, making sixteen branches in all, and it is expected another will be organized at Black Bank this week. The branches are nearly all working for civic improvements in some way. Also the Orangeville Hospital has been helped by several branches by donations of comforters, furnishing wards, buying sewing machines for nurses, etc. The sanitorium at Weston has also been helped.

The officers were all elected by acclamation as follows:— Mrs. E. Richardson, Laurel, Pres.; Mrs. Blakeley, Corbetton, Vice-Pres.; Miss E. H. Besley, Shelburne, Secy-Treas.; Mrs. G. Laking and Mrs. W. Clubbe, Shelburne, Auditors.

The afternoon session was opened by singing, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," after which Rev. Dr. Caldwell led in prayer. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. Caldwell, of Shelburne, speaking on behalf of all the ladies' societies of our town. Mrs. Blakeley, of Corbetton, replied in a pleasing manner. The following program was then given, all of which was good:—Paper, "A Talk with Mothers and Girls," Mrs. Jas. McKee, Whitfield; duet, Mrs. Hepton and Mrs. W. Trimble, Laurel; address "Medical Health Inspection of Schools and a Talk on Institute Work," Mrs. M. N. Norman, Toronto, being one of the best addresses given in the history of the convention; paper, "The Value of Cheerfulness," Miss E. Root, Violet Hill; reading, "Nagging," Miss G. Hamilton, Laurel; solo, Miss L. Berwick, Shelburne. The reports of the various branches were distributed through the afternoon program. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem. As this was the King's birthday special tribute was paid to His Majesty.

This convention was a record breaker both in interest and attendance, the hall being almost filled. —Economist.

NEWFOUNDLAND WELL OFF.

Island Colony Sees Motor Boats Replace Old Fishing Craft.

An interesting statement of the affairs of Newfundland, Canada's little sister colony, for the past year has been compiled from private information, furnished by its agents to the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Fishing, shipping, mining, railway construction, manufacturing, including the pulp and paper industry, and mercantile business all flourished, and the year closed with very satisfactory results.

As this is essentially a fishing colony, the fishing industry is much more important than all others. During the last two years prices have been high, and the fishermen have materially improved their financial position. On the other hand, considering the precarious nature of the fish export business, the exporter has been obliged to work on a very narrow margin of profit, and one that is apparently inadequate.

The fishermen are just beginning to realize the advantages of the use of motor-driven craft; probably 1,000 to 1,500 are now in use, and as there are over 50,000 men and 20,000 vessels engaged in the industry, a rapid annual increase may be expected, which in time should lead to a material increase in the catch.

The year compares very favorably in this respect with 1912, the estimated value of the products of the sea being about $12,500,000. Compared with the Maritime Provinces of Canada, and with Gloucester and Boston, the following statistics indicate that in the value of the annual catch Newfoundland takes first place: Newfoundland, $12,500,000; Nova Scotia, $9,400,000; New Brunswick, $4,900,000; Prince Edward Island, $650,000; Quebec, $1,800,000; Gloucester and Boston, $5,000,000.

The pulp and paper industry represents an investment of $12,000,000, the products of which are exported to Great Britain. For 1913 the approximate value of the exports of pulp is $350,000, and of paper $2,000,000. Mining has been active at Bell Island, where there is an iron deposit of about 3,500,000,000 tons. The estimated value of the exports of ore for the year is $1,400,000.

During the past two years the Government has expended about $5,000,000 on branch railways the cost being financed by the sale of bonds. At the end of this year the public debts is approximately $28,000,000. The revenue for the year is about $3,900,000; the expenditure including the cost of the administration of the colony and the interest on the public debt, is about $3,800,000, thus leaving a surplus of $100,000.

Imports increased $1,278,000, and amounted to $16,012,000, of which Canada contributed $5,200,000, the United States $5,500,000, and the United Kingdom $4,400,000. Exports were $14,458,000 an increase of $800,000. The investments and bank balances of the people are now estimated at over $20,000,000, showing a moderate increase for the year.

Taking all things into consideration, the year 1913 was one of progress, and the people of Newfoundland look to the future with a spirit of optimism.

To Abolish the Veil.

A strong movement is on foot in Cairo, Egypt, for the emancipation of the Moslem woman and the discarding of the traditional "veil." The leaders of this movement are young men who have studied in the colleges and universities of England and other European countries and who consider that the seclusion of the Egyptian and Moslem woman behind the "veil" has been the chief factor in keeping her in her present backward state.

Subsidy to Ameer.

The Ameer of Afghan' tan receives from the Government of India an annual subsidy of about $600,000.

On the Advice of His Doctor

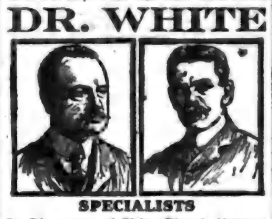
He Used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Protruding Piles With Splendid Results.

Too often a doctor can only think of an operation when asked for a treatment for piles. Some are sufficiently broad-minded to use the most effective treatment available, which is undoubtedly Dr. Chase's Ointment, as was proven in the case referred to in this letter.

Mr. Simon E. Jones, Railway street, Inverness, N.S., writes:—"I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable for protruding piles. For three years I suffered from piles, and was advised by a local physician to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I had tried many treatments in vain, and therefore know which is the best. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and you are at liberty to use this statement."

The record of cures of every form of piles which stands behind Dr. Chase's Ointment is the strongest guarantee you can have that it will promptly relieve and cure this ailment, even in the most aggravated form. 60c a box, all dealers.

STODDART—BUDD.



A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Budd, lot 21, con. 4, Amaranth, on Wednesday afternoon, June 3rd, 1914, when their only daughter, Ethel C., was united in marriage to Mr. Reuben E. Stoddart, an esteemed and prosperous young farmer of Melancthon, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. R. Bell, of Laurel. The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the drawing room to the strains of "The Bridal Chorus," played by Miss Ena Johnston. The bride wore a gown of white brocaded satin, trimmed with lace, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Rhoda Adamson, who wore a dainty little frock of blue brocaded satin and carried a basket of pink roses, carnations and ferns, bearing the ring, made a very charming flower girl. The gift of the groom was a sunburst of pearls, to the organist a blouse set, and to the flower girl a brooch. After the ceremony all repaired to the dining room where dinner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Stoddart left on the evening train for Toronto, where they will visit a short time, after which they will take up their abode on Mr. Stoddart's farm in Melancthon.—Free Press.

He found his own front porch with wonderful accuracy, navigated the steps with precision, and discovered the key-hole by instinct. Once in the dimly lighted hall, there was an ominous silence followed by a tremendous crash.

"Why, what has happened, Henry?" came a voice from above.

"It's all right, Mary, but I'll—I'll teach those goldfish to snap at me!"

TURNED TABLES ON DAN.

Dargavel Was Revenged and Ladies' Aid Waxed Rich.

Slade Dan Derbyshire, the "Cheese King of Canada," was translated to the Senate a few years ago, he has not been much in the public eye, but when the Senator was an M.P. and used to address farmers' institutes and dairymens' meetings all over Eastern Ontario, there was no more genial or popular idol with the rural folk. They would flock in crowds to hear him, and he usually had a good story or two to narrate which never failed to catch on. He went out one night to a tea meeting in Leeds county, accompanied by J. R. Dargavel, then M.P.P. The good ladies of the church had prepared what was called a "birthday cake," and "Uncle Dan," as he is familiarly styled in and around Brockville, was asked to auction off the interesting object. Bidding was slow, and when a couple of dollars had been reached, the amateur auctioneer halted. "Two dollars, I am offered. Two dollars. Are you all done? Fair warning, last call. Last call, do you hear me? And sold to J. R. Dargavel for five dollars." The shout of laughter that went up at the expense of Mr. Derbyshire's friend and associate was enough to shake the building.

Mr. Dargavel accepted the situation good-naturedly, but there was a twinkle in his eye. His admirers thought he might be able to get even, but did not exactly know how. Mounting the platform Mr. Dargavel said: "I have just bought this birthday cake for five dollars," and he handed over the money.

"Now," he continued, "the property is mine, and it is the privilege of any owner to do just as he pleases with his own goods. I propose that we have another little sale for the benefit of the good ladies. Some of the men, catching an inkling of what was up, started the bidding in lively fashion, and the price of the cake ran up speedily. Then all of a sudden the bidding ceased, and quick as a flash Mr. Dargavel closed the sale with the words "and sold to Mr. Dan Derbyshire for the sum of ten dollars." The tall, burly form of Uncle Dan rose slowly from a seat, but the smile was rather sheepish, as he remarked: "Occasionally a politician gets caught in his own trap." The coffer of the Ladies' Aid Society was, however, enriched by a ten-spot from a source that was totally unexpected.

The Beet Sugar Industry.

The question of the Canadian beet sugar industry is dealt with in the current issue of The Canada-West India Magazine in an article which asks whether the efforts which have been made to get it properly going will prove successful or, like many other industries, prove an uneconomic undertaking. The first attempt to establish the industry took place in the 'eighties, when three factories were built: one at Coaticook, one at Berthier, and another at Farnham—all being in Quebec. Inside of two years, however, all these factories had failed. The next attempt to found the industry took place in Ontario in 1901. Four factories were erected. After about two seasons' work, however, the Wiarton and Dresden factories closed down. In 1908 the Berlin factory got into financial difficulties and was bought at public auction by the Wallaceburg Sugar Refinery, leaving but two factories out of the four commenced. Another factory was started at Raymond, Alta. The industry has been greatly aided both by large provincial subsidies and by the protection under the customs tariff, and $370,906 has been given in bounties by Ontario and $63,000 by Alberta. From 1901 to 1912 the Ontario factories received in tariff protection $1,061,000 and the Alberta factory $172,000. Altogether the aid given amounts to nearly $1,300,000 since 1901. Notwithstanding this immense aid, beet sugar production amounts to only 12,000 tons per year, or but four per cent. of Canada's consumption. This is mainly due to the difficulty of securing suitable labor and the lack of a diversified system of farming.

Railway Death Toll.

It is to be noted that the total number of killed and injured reported by the various railroad companies under the jurisdiction of the board for the year ending March 31, 1913, was 2,547, that is to say, 643 persons were killed and 2,231 were injured. Of the total of 643 persons killed, 250 or approximately thirty-nine per cent. of the total were trespassers on railway tracks. Twenty-one passengers were killed, or 3.26 per cent. of the total. Of this total of 21 passengers killed, it appears that 15 met their deaths by what would appear to be preventible causes on the part of the passengers themselves, such as falling off trains while in motion, endeavoring to board trains while in motion and endeavoring to get off trains while in motion, so that the actual number of passengers killed in what might be termed preventable causes on the part of the railway companies was only six, or less than one per cent. of the total number of 643 persons killed.

New Maxim Gun Coming.

Word has been received by the officer commanding the 19th regiment at St. Catharines that a Maxim rapid-fire machine gun will be issued to the regiment at an early date. The gun will be one of the improved pattern, the same size and type as at present used by the imperial forces, and will fire at the rate of about 500 rounds a minute. The gun will be forwarded to St. Catharines upon its arrival from England.

Indians In Ontario.

The fact comes out in the latest Government statistics that there are in Ontario more Indians than in any other province in Canada.

BUSSORAH A FILTHY TOWN.

A Visit to the Apocryphal Home of Sindbad the Sailor.

We were on our way to Bussorah, famous as the apocryphal home of Sindbad the Sailor. Bussorah is the seaport of Bagdad, from which it is distant about 500 miles by river.

Bussorah in the summer is nothing less than a fiery furnace, for the thermometer registers more than 100 degrees F. in the shade during 120 consecutive days, and the mean temperature, night and day, for upwards of four months, is about 95 degrees.

Malarial fevers, dysentery and ague are prevalent, and the town is frequently visited by plague and cholera, and yet, thanks to the cool winter and prevailing north winds, the place is not essentially unhealthy for those who are acclimatized.

The habits and wants of the population are simple and are likely to remain so for some time to come, but the sanitary state of the town is deplorable. The creeks, which are tidal, supply it with drinking water, but are used indiscriminately for all household purposes, and the stench arising from them at low water is overpowering.

The governor general of the province of Bussorah had his private residence in the upper story of a flimsy lath and plaster edifice overlooking the main road. The walls of his house could not have been more than six inches thick, and it was full of windows. The ground floor seemed to be a stable and was occupied by goats.

As our carriage approached, churning up the mud which lay ankle deep and bumping over the hollows and obstructions which had so far escaped the attention of a not too observant municipality, we saw the governor's head appear at an upper window and that of a she goat at a lower one simultaneously.

The governor, a middle aged man of dignified bearing, greeted us gravely and kindly. From his conversation he appeared to be somewhat of a pedant, imbued with the chauvinistic tendencies of the young Turk, and a reformed bureaucrat.

His excellency's salutations as he bade us farewell were expressed with becoming gravity: "We trust that God may be pleased to preserve your excellency's health. Our town is yours, as well as our house. May we order our soldiers to accompany you on your ride to Zobeir? Your person is more precious to us than our eyes, and there are evil men, enemies of our lord the sultan, abroad in the desert."—Chambers' Journal.

THE RAZORBACK HOG.

Here's His Portrait, and It Doesn't Flatter Him a Bit.

In physique and mentality the razorback differs even more from a domestic hog than a wild goose does from a tame one. Shaped in front like a thin wedge he can go through laurel thickets like a bear. Armored with tough hide, cushioned by bristles, he despises thorns, brambles and rattlesnakes alike. His extravagantly long snout can scent like a cat's and yet burrow, uproot, overturn, as if made of metal.

The long legs, thin flanks, pliant hoofs, fit him to run like a deer and climb like a goat. In courage and sagacity he outranks all other beasts. A warrior born, he is also a strategist of the first order. Like man, he lives a communal life and unites with others of his kind for purposes of defense.

The pig is the only large mammal I know of, besides man, whose eyes will not shine by reflected light—they are too bold and crafty, I wit. The razorback has a mind of his own—not instinct, but mind—whatever psychologists may say. He thinks. Anybody can see that when he is not rooting or sleeping he is studying devilment.

He shows remarkable understanding of human speech, especially profane speech, and even an uncanny gift of reading men's thoughts whenever those thoughts are directed against the peace and dignity of pigship. He bears grudges, broods over indignities and plans redresses for the morrow or the week after. If he cannot get even with you he will lay for your unsuspecting friend. And at last, when arrested in his crime and lodged in the pen, he is liable to attacks of mania from sheer helpless rage.—From Horace Kephart's "Our Southern Highlanders."

Opposite Opinions.

If Marie Corelli has a large circle of readers who admire her books, there is also a number of people who do not. Two men belonging to the opposing camps, both well known journalists, were discussing her the other day.

"What I like about Miss Corelli," said the one who admired the authoress, "is that she is so—so alive!"

"Yes, that's what I object to!" retorted the other.—London Spectator.

HELPING THE YOUNG MAN FIND HIMSELF.

From July 11th to 18th, the woods of beautiful Geneva Park, on Lake Couchiching (six miles from Orillia) will resound with the shouts, cheers and laughter of two hundred of Ontario's choicest Older Boys. The gathering will be a unique one. Under the leadership of a host of Ontario's best leaders and workers with boys, these two hundred boys will spend a week in recreation, sport and such fun as only boys can have.

The chief purpose of the Conference, however, is to train for Leadership, and to give the boys practical help in choosing their life work. The program will consist of Bible Study, Nation Study, Vocational Guidance, Sunday School Leadership, Platform Meetings, Personal Interviews. Prominent business men, physicians, lawyers, ministers, missionaries, Sunday school men, and men from many other walks of life will speak on their various professions as a life work.

The mornings will be devoted entirely to lectures, platform meetings, interviews with leaders, etc., ending with a swimming period just before noon. The afternoons will be given over to organized recreation.

The number of registrations is limited to two hundred. Already a goodly number of these places have been taken. The Secretary of this unique Conference-camp is H. L. Taylor, 526 Lansdowne Avenue, Toronto, from whom further information may be secured.

HOW TO OBTAIN GOOD DIGESTION

The Stomach Must be Toned and Strengthened Through the Blood.

The victim of indigestion who wants to eat a good meal, but who knows that suffering will follow, finds but poor consolation in picking and choosing a diet. As a matter of fact you cannot get relief by cutting down your food to a starvation basis. The stomach must be strengthened until you can eat good, nourishing food. The only way to strengthen the stomach, to enrich the blood, tone up the nerves and give strength to the stomach that will enable it to digest any kind of food, is through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The one mission of these pills is to make rich, red blood that reaches every organ and nerve in the body, bringing renewed health and activity. The following case illustrates the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing indigestion. Mrs. T. Reid, Orangeville, Ont., says : "I have much pleasure in testifying to the reliability of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For several years I had suffered greatly from stomach trouble. Several doctors prescribed for me but their medicine did not help me. After every meal I would suffer great pain, and would often be attacked with nausea. I grew weak and had almost lost all hope of recovery. As this juncture I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which were recommended to me. In these pills I at last found the right medicine, and I am once more in good health. I have much pleasure in sending you my testimonial in the hope that it will encourage some suffering persons to try this sure remedy."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mayor Climie, of Listowel, denies that there is any incendiarism scare there, pointing out that there have been only six fires this year. The council, however, has decided to investigate two recent fires and an extra policeman will be engaged.

The Dominion buffalo herd at Wainwright, Alta., is increasing so rapidly that the Government now has no less than fifteen hundred animals. When the herd was secured several years ago there were only half of this number and no less than 152 were added by natural increase during the past year alone.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Scott, Inglewood, announce the engagement of their second daughter, Annie Irene, to Mr. Arthur Sedgwick, of the Ontario Department of Public Works, Toronto, and son of Mrs. Sedgwick and of the late John Sedwick, of Windsor. The marriage will take place the first of July.

On Wednesday, the 10th inst., Mr. Charles Helwig, 6th of Bruce, met with an exceedingly painful accident in the bush near Baie-de-dore. He was engaged in getting out poles. His team became frightened and ran away. In some manner his leg became entangled with the chain. The result was that the flesh was torn from the back of his leg below the knee joint, leaving the muscles exposed. Dr. McLeod, who was in that neighborhood put the wounded man into his auto and rushed him home where he and Dr. Struthers fixed up the terrible wound. Mr. Helwig is doing well at present.

Willie, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Pringle, Toronto, was seriously injured on Sunday. He had gone out for a walk with his grandfather, Mr. W. W. Ellis, and as they were passing Mr. A. S. McArthur's shop he touched with his hand a set of harrows which were hanging at the front. As he did so they fell, knocked him down and fell on him, one of the teeth piercing his neck near the base of the skull to a depth of two inches. Mr. Ellis quickly removed the harrows and carried him to the Queen's Hotel, where he received medical attention. He is now making good progress towards recovery. —Boston World.

Oh the sleep he lost and the rest he lost
Yet wondered his health was poor
Tho' a third of his life was spent in bed
It never [illegible] entered his foolish head
To think of Ostermoor.

A fool there was and his nights he spent

THE BANNER, JUNE 25th, 1914

WOODS FOR BELL

Mr. McKeown's supporters have been persistently circulating the report that R. J. Woods, McKeown's opponent at the last three elections, is not supporting Mr. Bell in the present election. Mr. Woods has disposed of this report by taking the platform at Mr. Bell's meeting in Corbeston last night and delivering a rousing speech in support of the temperance candidate. Mr. Woods is right behind Mr. Bell in the present fight and Woods' men throughout the county need not have the slightest doubt about their leader's position.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

See that every poll in the County is opened on Monday.

Every elector should go to the polls on Monday.

Every elector can cast a good temperance ballot by voting for Bell on Monday.

If Bell's supporters get to work in earnest they should be able to elect their man.

The Dufferin contest is keen, but good-natured as all election fights should be.

Both candidates are Conservatives —but one is independent, and the other a mere party man.

Mr. Bell stand for honest and efficient administration of the law should receive him many votes.

Why should a minister not engage in politics? He has as much interest in government as other citizens.

[illegible] own has represented Dufferin for years. What has he done for the farmers of the county during that time?

[illegible] position on the temperance question is clear-cut and definite. The people who fail to vote for Bell have a hard job finding excuses.

[illegible] on and capable scrutineers play an important part in the coming elections. These are matters which supporters should look after.

[illegible] hough has the Church stood at the back door picking up crumbs? It is time now to go ahead with her vote bar the first thing.

[illegible] Mckeown men should not lose valuable time sympathizing with Mr. Annis and Mr. Woods. These gentlemen are shrewd enough to see through the little game.

[illegible] is strong for Bell. He is well in East Garry, and Melancthon and his are looking for an even little better in Mono. The better and safer representative the man who has considered the issues of the day or whose actions are determined by expediency?

[illegible] safe on the bilingual question. Even Mr. McKeown has the platform Monday will was just as strongly for bilingual schools as himself.

[illegible] elector is a law maker. His part in shaping the laws of country. Can he afford to ballot lightly or mark it from as his own conscience dictates?

[illegible] platform is well worth reading. It expresses the views of a man who has convictions and dares to put the imprint of those convictions upon the legislation of the province.

[illegible] s have their great opportunity to deal the liquor traffic a blow in Ontario. Will [illegible] ers, who have been talking for temperance, rise to the opportunity?

[illegible] osts very little and so does profess sympathy for A. [illegible] to tell him that he has [illegible] ly used. But what did the [illegible] are so sympathetic just [illegible] D. B. Brown, when he was [illegible] in Dufferin?

[illegible] ll approve of Mr. Bell's [illegible] increased tax on autos [illegible] Government grants for [illegible] Mr. Bell believes that the [illegible] ent should grant a dollar for dollar that the municipality [illegible] on road improvement.

[illegible] everything that can be [illegible] vor of the local option [illegible] batting the liquor evil, [illegible] ident to everyone that [illegible] has reached a stage in [illegible] which it has become [illegible] impossible to make further [illegible] progress.

[illegible] ng to watch the men [illegible] against him through [illegible] ns shedding crocodile [illegible] pathy for Mr. Woods. [illegible] tle they care for Woods, [illegible] far as they can use his [illegible] efforts to make a few votes [illegible] Keown.

Mr. Bell is a man of the people. Born and [illegible] red on the farm and living [illegible] farmers during the 23 years he has been in the ministry, he knows farm life and conditions and has intimate knowledge of farm problems. He is a safe man for farmers to support.

[illegible] proving an energetic campaigner. He is addressing two meetings every night and manages to do a lot of effective canvassing during the day. He is meeting with a most encouraging reception at his meetings. Mr. McKeown is also working hard and speaking every night.

The day following Mr. Bell's nomination, John Best, M.P. and a prominent Shelburne supporter of Mr. McKeown drove to Corbetton and made a desperate attempt to prevail upon R. J. Woods to take the stump in Mr. McKeown's behalf. We do not know what inducements they offered but Mr. Woods was proof against their blandishments and their professed sympathy and is showing his sincerity as a temperance man by openly supporting Mr. Bell. Mr. Woods, we might add, spoke for Mr. Bell at the latter's meeting in Corbetton last night.

The demand for drink is the result of the drink appetite, which is the result of drink indulgence. Most of that drink indulgence is because of the treating system. The treating system would be practically non-existent if the barrooms were abolished. Therefore barroom abolition would greatly diminish the demand for the drink traffic.—The Pioneer.

The Whitney Government has done a great deal to curtail the evils of the liquor traffic. It is entitled to every credit for its strong and honest enforcement of the local option law. The trouble is that it is not moving fast enough. The people are no longer content with lopping off a limb here and there. They want to strike a blow at the root of the evil.

John Best will have reason to repent of his rash and reckless statement that the churches of Dufferin have done enough harm in the last 3 weeks to offset all the good they can do during the next ten years. Does Mr. Best want the people of Dufferin to understand that ministers and churches are not to be allowed to voice their protest against the liquor evil?

Mr. McKeown was talking rank nonsense when he told the nomination meeting that Mr. Muir, the representative of the Dominion Alliance, had no more interest in Dufferin than he has in Timbuctoo. The Ontario branch of the Alliance is a province-wide temperance organization that has a very real interest in temperance issues in every part of this province.

"Bell didn't support Woods last time" is the story told to strong Woods' men in an attempt to win them over to McKeown. Mr. Bell supported Mr. McKeown in the first by-election, but was a supporter of Mr. Woods in the 1911 election. The vote at Laurel shows what his influence meant. Here are the figures:—1907, McKeown 58, Woods 54; 1908, McKeown 73, Woods 46; 1911, McKeown 46, Woods 54.

Some of the Convention delegates, who want to vote for Bell, are in trouble because they believe their pledge to support the choice of the Convention binds them to vote for McKeown. They should remember that Mr. McKeown was pledged as well as the delegates. Despite his pledge he afterwards went to the Temperance Convention, spoke from the platform and in his speech made a strong bid for the Convention's endorsement and support. If Mr. McKeown could do this despite his pledge are the Conservative delegates not equally as free to vote as they wish?

In the Polling Booth.

On election day, when you go behind the screen to register your vote, when you are alone with God and your thoughts, I want you to see that long line of little boys as sweet and fresh as any of your own going to the bar for the first time. I want you to see these boys, the cream of our land, turned into drunkards. I want you to see the long line of mothers, with eyes reddened from weeping and faces drawn and haggard, waiting in the night for the footsteps of the drunken father, and the little ones poorly clad and often beaten. If you mark your ballot against them, I will not know what to think of you. I appeal to you men in the name of your manhood that you protect our homes and our children and I tell you women that if there ever was a time when you should be aroused, it is now. I point to a better day, which will reverse the old order, a day of brave women and fair men.—Mrs. Nellie McClung.

Who May Vote.

Voting at the Provincial election next Monday will take place on the Voters' Lists for 1913. With certain defined exceptions, every man whose name is entered on Parts I. and III. of the Lists for 1913 is entitled to vote if he is AT THE TIME OF TENDERING HIS VOTE a resident of and domiciled in the electoral district and has resided continuously therein from the time when the list was certified by the Judge of the County Court. Persons, under 21 years of age, whose names may appear on the list have, however, no right to vote until they are actually 21 years of age.

Clergymen or school teachers, whose names appear on the voters' list, may vote even if they do not actually reside within the electoral district provided they have not been non-residents more than three months prior to the election, are still residents of the Province and are not entitled to vote in any other electoral district. Occasional or temporary absence from home does not deprive a resident of his right to vote. Students, notwithstanding their absence at school or college, are entitled to vote in the municipality in which they reside, provided their names are entered on the voters' list and they are not entitled to vote elsewhere.

Bingham won a number of games with a rink of travellers.

McKEOWN AND BELL

Are Candidates Whose Names Will Appear on Ballot Papers on June 29th

Large Crowd Attended Nomination Meeting on Monday—Sympathies of Audience Pretty Evenly Divided—Candidates Made Strong Speeches and Each Received an Excellent Hearing.

The keen interest that the electors of the County of Dufferin are taking in the approaching Provincial election was clearly shown by the large attendance at the nomination meeting on Monday afternoon. There was not an empty seat in the Opera House while the candidates were speaking and some late comers were obliged to be content with standing room. The audience was very orderly and apparently pretty evenly divided in its sympathies. The McKeown men were more demonstrative than the Bell supporters, although there were times when the latter showed their strength by making the big hall resound with applause. Both candidates spoke well and eloquently. Mr. Bell has seldom appeared to better advantage on a public platform and his ringing denunciation of the liquor traffic and its attendant evils made a profound impression.

The formal nomination meeting began at 12 and lasted until 2 o'clock. It was in charge of Returning Officer Dr. M. W. Berwick, of Grand Valley, assisted by Election Clerk Jos. J. Kelly. Under the present election law the nomination paper of each candidate must be signed by at least fifty bona fide electors and each signature must be duly witnessed. The first name on Mr. McKeown's paper was that of J. C. Darraugh, Orangeville. The signature of George Ireland, Shelburne, President of the Dufferin Temperance and Moral Reform Association, appeared first on Mr. Bell's nomination form. Five other nominations were made for the purpose of giving those nominated an opportunity to speak. For Mr. McKeown those nominated were John Best, M.P. and Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas and for Mr. Bell, Rev. W. M. Morris, Geo. Little and Robt. Reid.

An agreement was reached whereby the two candidates were allowed an hour apiece, Mr. McKeown, who spoke first, being afterwards given ten minutes for a reply. The late member divided his time with Mr. Best and Mr. Bell with Rev. Mr. Morris. The other nominees were allowed 15 minutes apiece.

Mr. McKeown referred to the fact that this was his fourth election in 7 years and then recited the facts which led up to his selection as the Convention candidate in the present contest. He was careful to tell the audience than the Liberal party had also nominated a candidate in Mr. A. E. Annis, a strong temperance man, and feigned surprise because the temperance people had not got in behind Mr. Annis instead of nominating a candidate of their own. He had attended the Temperance Convention and when asked to express his views had enunciated what he believed was the most advanced temperance policy ever proposed by any Government in Ontario. The Conservative Government, Mr. McKeown asserted, had turned the province almost from black into white. In supporting the local option method of dealing with the liquor evil he believed he was advocating a policy that was more advanced, more progressive and more in the interests of the Province than any other policy. Reverting to the Temperance Convention, Mr. McKeown said that after hearing himself and Mr. Annis, the Convention had called on Rev. Mr. Muir, the representative of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance. Mr. Muir, declared the speaker with a grandiloquent flourish, "has no more interest in the county of Dufferin than he has in Timbuctoo." To cut the matter short the Convention had thrown him down, but he was not sorry, because he had been thrown down so often by the same crowd. The reason, said Mr. McKeown, why the temperance people preferred Mr. Bell to Mr. Annis was that they thought they could perhaps elect a Conservative temperance man where they could not possibly expect to elect a Liberal temperance man. He respected Mr. Bell as a minister—he had always been taught to respect men of the cloth—but when a man came down from the lofty pedestal of the ministry to the lower level of politics he must be treated as other politicians. Mr. McKeown discussed the attempts which he made to get Mr. Bell to say "yes" or "no" to his cleverly planned question "Will you support the abolish the bar policy even if it means the upsetting of the Whitney Government." Mr. Annis had afterwards withdrawn from the fight after he had consulted with headquarters, so he supposed the Liberal candidate had received ample assurance on that score. Turning from the temperance question to the general policy of the Whitney government, Mr. McKeown repeated in substance his Convention speech respecting the educational horse with the bilingual spavin that would be removed without killing the animal. He added, however, that there was no doubt in the world that "Mr. Bell is just as much opposed to bilingual schools as I am." The late member criticized Mr. Bell's attitude at the last Provincial election, seeking to make it appear that at that time his opponent was willing to take the nomination of the Conservative party or to run against the party nominee in the place of Mr. Woods. The Convention candidate made the claim that there was not a single session of the Legislature in the last nine years in which the Government had not placed advanced temperance legislation upon the statute book. In conclusion Mr. McKeown pointed out that it would be a serious matter if the whip of the Government were beaten and appealed for support on his temperance record and his opposition to bilingual schools.

Rev. J. R. Bell, who was given a splendid hearing, took Mr. McKeown to task for attributing to Rev. Mr. Muir, the Dominion Alliance representative, the statement that "we Liberals" had united with the Conservatives to put the Ross Government out of power. What Mr. Muir had said was "the Liberals" had united with the Conservatives for this purpose. He also objected to his opponent's statement that a minister of the Gospel was "stepping down" when he entered politics. He considered it an honor to stand before the electorate and ask for their support on a platform that aimed at banishing the liquor traffic from the land. Mr. McKeown had stated that he saw a letter which the speaker had written to Mr. Woods. This was incorrect. So far as he could remember he had never written a letter to Mr. Woods in his life. He could say though that some of his opponents had gone to Mr. Woods immediately after his nomination last Tuesday and had done their best to get Woods to take the field against him. Mr. Bell said he would like to have the opportunity of speaking to the people in all parts of the county on the temperance question. If he had the time and opportunity to place his views on this momentous issue before them all he would be quite content to abide by their verdict at the polls on the 29th. He had not sought the nomination, but had been brought out by the Temperance and Moral Reform Association, which represented a large body of the electorate of the county. The Dominion Alliance was a non-partisan temperance organization. Its president, Canon Greene, was a highly-respected Anglican clergyman and, he had been informed, a staunch Conservative as well. Although he was a candidate in opposition to the nominee of the party Convention, Mr. Bell stated that he was still a Conservative, but added that there were times when every right thinking man was bound to place principle before party. He had been a resident of Dufferin for 23 years and had always tried to make himself useful in a public way. He thought his services justified him in claiming some slight recognition at the hands of the people. Mr. Bell referred to the part he had taken in the movement to establish a Branch Office of the Department of Agriculture in Dufferin County and the boon that this was proving to the farmers. He also alluded to Mr. McKeown's failure to accompany the deputation that went to Toronto to urge the Government to appoint a District Representative and to open the Branch Office in Dufferin. The speaker invited the audience to look over Mr. McKeown's record in the Legislature for the last seven years and then followed with the pertinent question, "What has he done for the farmers of Dufferin as their representative." Mr. McKeown had told the Temperance Convention that he was not personally in favor of the three-fifths clause but supported it as a matter of party policy. In other words the late member was prepared to sink his personal convictions, whenever they came into conflict with party interests. For his part if he were elected he would work for temperance outside as well as within the party caucus.

The bi-lingual school question, Mr. Bell stated, was in his opinion one of the greatest and most important issues before the people of Ontario to-day. He was prepared to exert all the influence he could wield in opposition to bi-lingual schools. He stood prepared to do everything he could to retain English as the language of this Province. Defining his position on temperance Mr. Bell emphasized the fact that he stood squarely on the platform of the Association which nominated him. This platform stated: "That the only candidate satisfactory to this Convention shall be a man, who, regardless of party affiliations, shall support the most progressive temperance legislation proposed and possible within the Province."

On this platform he was prepared to stand or fall. Mr. McKeown and Mr. Annis had sought to entrap him by asking him to say "yes" or "no" to certain questions that they fired at him, much as if he was a child, which was being taught how to speak. If the Whitney Government offered the people of Ontario the most advanced temperance legislation possible then he would stand by the party. While he said this he put his temperance principles before party allegiance, because the temperance issue was bigger than any man and bigger than any political party. "Bell is going to wreck the Government" was the cry of his opponents. Mr. McKeown and his following must be hard pressed for arguments, when they used this as their war cry. Neither political party, said Mr. Bell, "is going to catch me on a snap want of confidence vote. When both parties have formulated their temperance policies and they are submitted in the House then the party giving the most advanced temperance legislation will have my influence and support." Dealing with some of the influences opposed to him Mr. Bell scored Mr. Best vigorously for his interference in a fight that was not his own, condemned the party machine and illustrated the attitude of the liquor interests by referring to the decision of the Port Arthur liquor interests to support the Whitney Administration. One of the members, who had always been a pronounced Grit, had openly declared that he intended to cast his first Tory vote on June 29th. The speaker got a hearty round of applause by telling an apt story in which Mr. McKeown was compared with the small boy whose father declared that he could "talk more and mean less than any boy I ever saw."

Mr. Bell justified his entrance into the political arena by showing the attitude of the churches in opposition to the liquor traffic. At the big pre-Assembly Conference a year ago the Presbyterian Church, of which he was a humble minister, had declared its uncompromising hostility to the open bar and its determination to do all it could to banish the liquor traffic from the Province and the whole Dominion. At the recent Assembly in Woodstock the Church had reaffirmed this position. In the various Conferences, the great Methodist Church, always the leader in forward temperance work, had declared openly for the abolition of the bar and pledged itself to take an active part in the present election because of the great moral issue at stake. The man who voted against advanced temperance legislation in the present election was voting against the opinion of his church courts. Ontario had asked for prohibition three times and if the politicians had acceded to the wishes of the people the Province would have had prohibition.

"I am not in the fight from personal motives," declared Mr. Bell with great earnestness. "I have no axe to grind. I do not expect a Judgeship or any other comfortable office. I am in the fight as the candidate of the forces that are striving for the destruction of the liquor traffic, root and branch. I appeal for your votes as one who has gone in and out amongst you for 23 years, as one who understands your lives, your thoughts, your problems and your aspirations, as a man who wants to do what little he can to wipe out the evils of the open bar and to make this a better and fairer land than it is to-day." "It takes 6000 boys to feed the gin mill every year," declared Mr. Bell amid breathless silence that showed how strongly the speaker had gripped the heart of his great audience. "Will you not help to stop this awful waste and destruction of many of our brightest and most promising lives." Concluding, the temperance candidate appealed for fair play and a fair, clean honest fight and gave the assurance that if he was elected he would do everything he could for the best interests of the County of Dufferin and the Province of Ontario.

John Best, M.P., who got a rather mixed reception, made a fighting address. He was glad that in politics the people of Dufferin could scrap away to their hearts content and then be the best of friends after it was all over. He thought there was no occasion for an election in Dufferin at the present time. Last Tuesday Mr. Bell had stated he was going to vote for the Rowell temperance policy, but to-day he didn't know which policy he was going to support. Mr. Best took a fling at the churches for their activity in the present campaign, expressing the opinion that the harm they had done in the last three weeks would outweigh all the good they could possibly accomplish in the next ten years. He admitted that he had gone to see Mr. Woods in the hope that he could persuade him to support Mr. McKeown, and said that the Dominion Alliance must regard the people of Dufferin as "nothing more than Indians" or they would not come to this county to abolish the bar, when there was not a licensed bar in the whole county. The bilingual school question, Mr. Best argued, was the burning issue in the present campaign.

Rev. W. M. Morris was very sorry to hear Mr. McKeown and Mr. Best make the astonishing statement that ministers of the gospel were taking a downward step when they went on the platform in their company. There was no doubt whatever that the abolition of the bar is the most important question before the electors of Ontario in the present contest. It was even greater than bilingualism for a dual language with sobriety was better than either English or French and drunkenness. One absolute essential to a great nation was sobriety and righteousness and the barroom must be removed as a stumbling block to the wheels of progress. Mr. Morris argued that Canada was confronted by a great crisis because of the large influx of non-English speaking peoples, who had lower moral ideals than the people of English, Irish and Scotch descent and were apt to vote with the liquor interests. The loudest call on our patriotism to-day was the call to wipe the liquor curse from the land. He was speaking for Rev. Mr. Bell from a non-partisan platform. His father was such a staunch Conservative that he would hardly allow the Globe to be used to kindle a fire. Personally he was in favor of the three-fifths clause because it tested the force of temperance conviction and contributed to permanency wherever the by-law was carried. The present election gave the people of Dufferin an opportunity in Mr. Bell to elect a representative who would exert an active influence in the House in behalf of the abolish the bar movement. If the Conservative party had done all it could or was doing all it could Mr. Bell would not have been before the people of Dufferin as a candidate.

Mr. McKeown in his reply denied that he had stated that Mr. Bell had sent a letter to Mr. Woods. The temperance people were supporting Mr. Bell because he would support temperance regardless of affiliations. Mr. McKeown argued rather lamely that there was inconsistency in this for the reason that Mr. Annis had been rejected because of his party affiliations.

Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas, who spoke on behalf of Mr. McKeown, admitted that the temperance question was a great issue, but maintained that bilingualism was of greater importance. While a Liberal, he was out of touch with Ontario Liberals, but in harmony with western Liberalism, which was opposed to bilingualism and Separate Schools. Mr. St. Dalmas caused a roar of laughter by saying to his audience, "You are here and you do not know what you are here for."

Geo. Little wanted to know why an election had been brought on now, when an appeal to the country was not necessary for another eighteen months. The Legislature was supposed to sit for four years and still Mr. McKeown had stated that he had been through four elections in the last seven years. Leaving the first bye-election out of the question, the fact remained that the Government had put the country to the expense of three elections in less than seven years. Mr. Little condemned the increase in sessional indemnity, the million dollar folly known as the new Government House and twitted Mr. McKeown as the standard bearer who had kept the party standard unspotted and unsullied for seven long years. His conclusion was that if the banner was as clean and unsullied as it was when Mr. McKeown first received it, the member for Dufferin could not have done much fighting or even been near the heat of the battle. The Mono orator told John Best bluntly that it would have been more becoming "to keep his nose out of this business."

Robt. Reid, who also spoke for Mr. Bell, thought that the temperance candidate should make an ideal representative. He (the speaker) was neither a Reformer nor a Conservative, but a man who placed his judgment before the interests of either political party. Mr. Reid criticized Mr. McKeown for defending liquor cases and argued that Dufferin needed men who would enforce the law.

The meeting closed shortly before 5 o'clock with cheers for the King.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union has passed the following resolution in favor of Abolish the Bar candidates:—

"Resolved that every woman who wears the white ribbon should cast behind her all party affiliations and should aid by her voice, pen and influence the man who is championing the reform that is the root cause of our existence. There is one thing that every White Ribboner should do and that is pray that victory may be granted to those pledged to 'Abolish the Bar'."

ROSEMONT.

At the last regular meeting of Rosemont L.O.L. No. 9 the following resolution of condolence was passed to the husband and family of the late Mrs. John Little :—

We, the officers and members of L. O.L. No. 9, having learned with deep regret of the great loss you have sustained through the death of your beloved wife, hereby tender you our sympathy and condolence in your sad bereavement. By her death we have lost an honest friend. May our loss be his eternal gain. We realize how powerless any words we may utter are to relieve your grief, but we trust that you may be given strength to bear your great loss with Christian fortitude.

Signed on behalf of the Lodge.

Edward W. Maxwell

The late Edward W. Maxwell, whose death on Wednesday, June 10th, was briefly referred to in last week's Banner, was a son of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, of Caledon. He was 39 years and 4 months of age and had been in indifferent health for two years or longer. He leaves a widow, formerly Miss Mary Edith Baxter, a daughter of the late Malcolm Baxter, of Caledon, a boy of six years, John W. Maxwell, Amaranth, Washington Maxwell, Chicago, Nelson N. Maxwell, Mrs. W. M. Freebury and Mrs. T. E. Smith, of Caledon, are the surviving brothers and sisters. The deceased was a man who enjoyed the esteem and good will of the whole community and his demise in the prime of life has caused widespread sorrow. The funeral, which was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Saturday afternoon following his death was largely attended. There were also numerous beautiful floral tributes. Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, held the services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were the three brothers and three brothers-in-law, Messrs. Alan, Dan and Farquahar Baxter.

Florence Connop's Death

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Connop, Little York St., was saddened on Tuesday night by the death of their daughter, Florence Pearl, a bright and lovable girl of ten years. Death followed two weeks illness from bronchitis. The funeral will be held to Greenwood cemetery at 3 o'clock this (Thursday) afternoon. Service will be held at the house at 2.30. The sympathy of their friends goes out to the bereaved parents in their trying affliction.

Had Nervous Dyspepsia

With Frequent Sick Headaches and Much Pain After Eating — Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured.

This letter is from a lady who gained 14 pounds by using the great food cure. It did wonders for her in improving her general health. She is enthusiastic in its praise, and refers to her neighbors as witnesses of the splendid results obtained.

Mrs. Susan Dobson, Spring Hill Mines, N. S., writes:—"It is with pleasure that I write to you in praise of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was troubled with dyspepsia, and could not eat without suffering much pain; also had sick headaches frequently, and my nerves were in bad condition. About ten years ago I took a thorough treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, using altogether 21 boxes, and since then can eat anything, have been freed from headaches, and my health has been greatly improved in every way. I gained 14 pounds in weight, and feel sure I owe everything to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You may use this letter, and my neighbors can tell you of my condition before using this treatment."

THE MAYORALTY.

Mr. J. J. White Gives Reasons Why He Is a Candidate for the Chief Magistracy.

To the Electors of Orangeville.
Ladies and Gentlemen :

Owing to Mayor Island having accepted the office of Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace for the County of Dufferin, he has intimated his early retirement from the Chief Magistracy of the town of Orangeville. In that event I propose to tender my resignation as your reeve, to which honorable position you elected me in January last by a large majority, and offer myself as a candidate for the higher office of Mayor.

In doing so it is only proper to recount my experience and qualifications for the office to which I aspire, and why I, at this time, solicit your support.

The reeve of any town is the logical successor to the mayor on the latter's office becoming vacant. I am now in the eighth year of my municipal experience, having served under five mayors, as councillor, deputy-reeve and reeve, and during that period, at one time or another, have been a member of every committee appointed by council and chairman of several.

I first entered council over twenty years ago, in the year 1893, when Mr. Johnston Lindsay was mayor, and for six consecutive years was a member of the town council. In the years 1894-5, under Mayor Bailey, the present splendid water works system was installed. In that great undertaking I took no small part, and contributed in a large measure to its success. In 1896, under Mayor Endacott, several important works were consummated, and in the years 1896-7 I was elected deputy-reeve, when under Mayor Stevenson, the construction of cement sidewalks, under the present beneficent plan, was introduced. After a few years' retirement, I was again returned to the Council in 1913, and last January was elected your Reeve, as stated.

During my somewhat extended term of office, I have always advocated everything which would advance the town. My sympathetic attitude towards factories and my constant endeavor to attract new industries to our midst has, I trust, met with your approval. My work as Chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee has been arduous and entailed personal and constant attention.

I have considerable personal stake, no little pride and every confidence in the future of our beautiful and healthy town, and bespeak your votes and influence, confidently relying on my past record.

With the assurance that if elected as your Mayor it will be my constant effort to serve you to the best of my skill and ability and to see that all branches of our civic government are administered with EFFICIENCY and ECONOMY, I have the honor to be

Your obedient servant,
J. J. WHITE.

Mrs. James Robinson

Mrs. Robinson, wife of Mr. James Robinson, passed away at her home in Pasadena, Cal., on Monday, June 8th at the age of 77 years. Deceased had been bedfast for five weeks or longer and her death was caused by a general breakdown. Mrs. Robinson was a daughter of the late John Skelton, of Mono, and is survived by her husband and the following family :—John and William Robinson, Mrs. H. G. Arundel, Mrs. H. A. Fawcett, of San Francisco. The late Mrs. John Nunn, of Toronto, was also a daughter. She was a sister of Alex., John and William Skelton, Mrs. Medley, of Toronto, the late Mrs. Lundy, Mrs. Leighton, Mrs. McMaster and Mrs. McKim, of Orangeville.

She has gained the other side
Crossed the river's sombre tide
Reached at last her Father's home
Where no sin or sorrows come.
Why are we thus wildly weeping
When our darling is but sleeping.

Mrs. Wm. J. Foster.

A very sad death took place at Lord Dufferin Hospital on Saturday, June 13th, when Mrs. W. J. Foster, of Mono, passed away after a short illness. The end was unexpected, despite the fact that Mrs. Foster had been ailing for the past three months. The deceased, whose maiden name was Sarah Jane Harrison, was the eldest daughter of Mrs. Harrison, of Caledon, and a sister of the late Robert Harrison, whose tragic death took place only two months ago. She was in her 36th year and had been married 3½ years. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, one daughter, Helena, 2 years old, and an infant son 3 months old. She is also survived by her aged mother, two sisters and two brothers, Georgina, Albert and William at home and Mrs. R. H. Robinson, Caledon. The relatives have the sympathy of the surrounding neighborhood in their bereavement. There was a very large attendance at the funeral, which took place to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Monday afternoon. There were numerous beautiful floral tributes, including a wreath from the husband, a pillow from the brothers and sisters, a crescent from Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Delaney, Toronto, and a spray from Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Island. Rev. G. W. Tebbs, rector of St. Mark's Church, conducted the services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. D. Henderson, Cheltenham, E. C. Delaney, Toronto, S. Foster, R. H. Island, F. C. Island and W. N. Baker.

Jeffers, the druggist, has the agency for cut flowers from the Dale Estate, Brampton. They will be on sale each Saturday. Kindly leave your orders before Friday if possible. Sold at the lowest prices.

A June Wedding

A happy event took place at the home of Mrs. John Trimble, lot 18, township Mono and Amaranth, on Wednesday afternoon, June 17th, when her second daughter, Edna Louise, was united in marriage to Mr. W. Ernest Raine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Raine, of Britannia, Ont. The marriage took place in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreens decorated with pink and white carnations and banked with ferns. The Rev. J. S. Stevenson, B.A., B.D., of Laurel, officiated. The bride, who entered the drawing room escorted by her brother, Mr. Bert Trimble, looked charming in a gown of alice blue silk trimmed with shadow lace and pearls. She wore the customary bridal veil with wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white carnations, and maidenhair fern. She also wore a crescent brooch set with pearls, the gift of the groom. The only attendants were Winnie Trimble and Master Harold Hamilton, a small niece and nephew of the bride, who carried the ring in a cala lily centred in a basket of delicate sweet peas. The bridal chorus was played by Miss Mary Raine, the groom's sister. The groom's gift to the organist was a gold brooch and to the ring bearer a bracelet and ring. After the ceremony the happy couple led the way to the dining room, where a dainty repast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Raine left later on the evening train for Toronto and other points east, the bride travelling in a suit of blue serge and hat to match. On their return they will reside near Cooksville and will be at home to their friends on Aug. 1st. The Banner joins the bride's numerous local friends in extending its hearty congratulations.

WHALE—NORRIS.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Norris, Goldstone, Ont., on Wednesday afternoon, June 17th, when their daughter, Edna, was married to Mr. Irvine Brock Whale, B.S.A., of London, District Representative of the Department of Agriculture for Middlesex County. The groom, who was formerly assistant District Representative of the Department in Dufferin County, is well and favorably known in Orangeville and vicinity. His numerous local friends unite in tendering their hearty good wishes.

How Good Roads will benefit You

THEY BENEFIT THE FARMER, because they increase the value of his farm; enable him to raise more profitable crops; his cost of hauling will be low; he can reach market when prices are best; his children can go to school every day in the year, and he will have more comfort in life and better conditions generally.

BENEFIT THE CONSUMER, because they reduce the cost of living in proportion to what the farmer gains and by bringing new industries to the community, create a larger proportionate amount to be paid out in wages and with increased population, more amusements and better stores.

Good roads are commercial feeders of the city, and every improvement of these roads means a greater prosperity through increased agricultural production and greater stimulus to all industries.

Economical Good Roads

Concrete roads are best from the start and cheapest in the end. They are free from ruts, mud and dust. They give less jolting to horses and easier traction to every class of vehicle, but most important is the fact that they require practically no expenditure for upkeep.

Complete information of concrete road construction is yours for the asking, without cost or obligation.

CHILD WAS LOST.

Little Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ahrens Wanders Away from Cottage at Leith and is Found After Five Hours Eager Search.

To be unable to find any trace of their little daughter, Florence, aged two years, for five hours, was the nerve-wrecking experience of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ahrens, who are camping at Leith, on Friday afternoon. While Mr. and Mrs. Ahrens were at a farm house on business the little girl was left with two older children in care of Mrs. Ahrens' sister, Miss Wainwright and a maid. The children were left on the beach for a moment while their elders went into the cottage and had not been alone for more than a few minutes when Miss Wainwright noticed that baby Florence was missing. She immediately started in search for her, but went towards Leith while the little girl, it afterwards transpired had passed through the fence on the Nixon estate and was speedily beyond the searchers' view in the thick woods. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Ahrens and their household spent the afternoon searching, and having no success, about six o'clock the entire neighborhood turned out to aid them, with the result that after beating the woods thoroughly for an hour Mr. Will Ross and Mr. Thos. Rutherford came upon the little girl lying face downward in the sands beside the spot known as the Cold Springs. Except for a few scratches she was entirely uninjured, and had apparently never become frightened enough by her loneliness to shed a tear. The distance she has travelled from the cottage was over a mile and a half, the most of the way through rough bush and though several times the searchers had been near the spot, the child had evidently been asleep and unaware of their cries.—Owen Sound Sun.

TO CHECK A COLD.

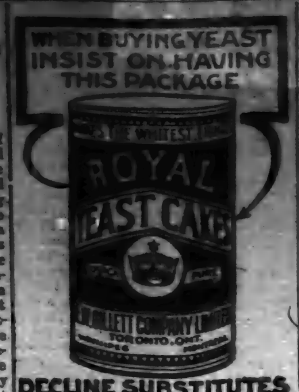
It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

THE DUTY OF PRESBYTERIANS

(The Presbyterian, June 11.)

A large conference, representing all sections of the Province and varying shades of temperance opinion, met in Knox Church, Toronto, at the end of December, 1902, and the following resolution, moved by Rev. Dr. Carman, and seconded by Principal Caven, was carried with utmost heartiness:

"That in view of the recent expression by the electors of the Province of Ontario in favor of the liquor act of 1902, we deem it advisable to appoint a deputation to await upon the Government and request that effect be given to the said vote by the abolition of the public bar, the treating system, and drinking in clubs, and the imposition of such other restrictions on the liquor traffic as shall most effectively curtail its operation and remedy its evils."



The resolution so passed was taken up in substance by the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance and embodied in its platform. It was approved by the highest courts of religious denominations. We quote from two deliverances. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, while affirming its belief that total prohibition must be the goal of temperance reform, recommended as a step thereto "the abolishment of the barroom (i.e., the sale for consumption on the premises), and the public treating system associated therewith." A report from the Committee on Temperance adopted by the General Synod of the Anglican Church says: "In glancing over the several Provinces of the Dominion it is manifest that there is a great consensus of opinion conrerning the bar under our present licensing system, namely, that it is a public menace, and your committee would urge upon the Synod that it is the duty of every man to endeavor to further the effort to abolish the bar."

Mr. N. W. Rowell, as leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, has accepted the platform which was set forth and confirmed as we have just stated. In the forefront of his program stands "the immediate abolition of the bar, including therein the abolition of all hotel and club licenses, and therewith the treating system." And now Mr. Rowell issues this challenge: If the organized temperance forces of this Province, if the Churches of Ontario really want the bar to go, they can say so on the 29th of June. If the bar does not go, where does the responsibility rest?"

To that challenge there can be but one answer. Those who believe that the liquor traffic, whose stronghold is the licensed bar, is a menace and a curse, those who accept, on moral issues, the leadership of the Christian Church, are bound to vote only for candidates who can be relied upon to support such legislation as Mr. Rowell has pledged himself to enact.

Mauritius Stamps.

The most valuable stamp in existence is said to be the "postoffice" Mauritius, which is worth about $6,500. Just after the postal authorities had received the issue the postoffice was destroyed in a hurricane. But the governor had given a ball and as an act of courtesy had sent invitations to friends in England. The only specimens of the stamp known to exist are those which were affixed to the envelopes of these invitations.—London Opinion.

Gilbert Bretz, of Shelburne, a member of the firm of Bretz & Co., will be permanently lame for the rest of his days, and may yet possibly lose a part of his right foot, as a result of a gun accident on Tuesday morning. In company of George Marlatt, of Toronto, they went to the latter's father's at Melancthon Station, and in the course of looking up things about the old home, picked up an old shot gun, that had not been down for a year or so. The piece had a broken bolt and Bretz undertook to break the gun when a forgotten shell of No. 6 shot was discharged shattering his foot terribly. Dr. Smith, of Shelburne, was called, who secured assistance from a local surgeon. An effort is being made to save the unfortunate man's foot, but it is just possible that amputation of a portion may be necessary.

Has no greater Cooking Convenience than you can have on the Farm or in the Village

Cooking in a hot, stuffy kitchen on a sizzling hot wood or coal range in summer has probably made more women discontented with farm or village life than any one thing. She thinks of the gas stoves the city folk can cook on. We have a joyful message for these women.

The "Detroit" Vapor Gasolene Stoves

Work just like a city gas stove, so you do not have to be without the convenience of a city gas stove any longer, no matter where you live. No storage or pressure tanks needed. You can put the stove in any part of the kitchen. Simply light the burners and the stove is ready to cook on. We invite you to look at them, and we will give you a little book showing the different styles and sizes.

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XVIII.—continued.

"Well, I considered myself justified in denying it," Anna answered drily. "He produced what he called a marriage certificate, and I believe that nearly every one in the boarding house, including Mrs. White, my landlady, believes his story. I am fairly well hardened in iniquity—your iniquity, Annabel—but I decline to have a husband thrust upon me. I really cannot have anything to do with Mr. Montague Hill."

"A—marriage certificate!" Annabel gasped.

Anna glanced into her sister's face, and rose to her feet.

"Let me get you some water, Annabel. Don't be frightened, dear. Remember——"

Annabel clutched her sister's arm. She would not let her move. She seemed smitten with a paroxysm of fear.

"A thick-set, course-looking young man, Anna!" she exclaimed in a hoarse excited whisper. "He has a stubbly yellow moustache, weak eyes, and great horrid hands."

Anna nodded.

"It is the same man, Annabel," she said. "There is no doubt whatever about that. There was the motor accident, too. It is the same man, for he raved in the hospital, and they fetched me. It was you, of course, whom he wanted."

"Alive! In London!" Annabel moaned.

"Yes. Pull yourself together, Annabel! I must have the truth."

The girl on the lounge drew a long sobbing breath.

"You shall," she said. "Listen! There was a Meysey Hill in Paris, an American railway millionaire. This man and he were alike, and about the same age. Montague Hill was taken for the millionaire once or twice, and I suppose it flattered his vanity. At any rate, he began to deliberately personate him. He sent me flowers. Celeste introduced him to me—oh, how Celeste hated me! She must have known. He—wanted to marry me. Just then—I was nervous. I had gone further than I meant to—with some Englishmen. I was afraid of being talked about. You don't know, Anna, but when one is in danger one realizes that the—the other side of the line is Hell. The man was mad to marry me. I heard everywhere of his enormous riches and his generosity. I consented. We went to the Embassy. There was—a service. Then he took me out to Monteaux, on a motor. We were to have breakfast there and return in the evening. On the way he confessed. He was a London man of business, spending a small legacy in Paris. He had heard me sing—the fool thought himself in love with me. Celeste he knew. She was chaffing him about being taken for Meysey Hill, and suggested that he should be presented to me as the millionaire. He told me with a coarse nervous laugh, I was his wife. We were to live in some wretched London suburb. His salary was a few paltry hundreds a year. Anna, I listened to all he had to say, and I called to him to let me get out. He laughed. I tried to jump, but he increased the speed. We were going at a mad pace. I struck him across the mouth, and across the eyes. He lost control of the machine. I jumped then—I was not even shaken. I saw the motor dashed to pieces against the wall, and I saw him pitched on his head into the road. I leaned over and looked at him. He was quite still. I could not hear his heart beat. I thought that he was dead. I stole away and walked to the railway station. That night in Paris I saw on the bills 'Fatal Motor Accident.' Le Petit Journal said that the man was dead. I was afraid that I might be called upon as a witness. That is why I was so anxious to leave Paris. The man who came to our rooms, you know, that night was his friend."

"The good God!" Anna murmured, herself shaken with fear. "You were married to him!"

"It could not be legal," Annabel moaned. "It couldn't be. I thought that I was marrying Meysey Hill, not that creature. We stepped from the Embassy into the motor—and oh! I thought that he was dead. Why didn't he die?"

Anna sprang to her feet and walked restlessly up and down the room. Annabel watched her with wide-open, terrified eyes.

"You won't give me away, Anna. He would never recognize me now. You are much more like what I was then."

Anna stopped in front of her.

"You don't propose, do you," she said quietly, "that I should take this man for my husband?"

"You can drive him away," Annabel cried. "Tell him that he is mad. Go and live somewhere else."

"In his present mood," Anna remarked, "he would follow me."

"Oh, you are strong and brave," Annabel murmured. "You can keep him at arm's length. Besides, it was under false pretences. He told me that he was a millionaire. It could not be a legal marriage."

"I am very much afraid," Anna answered, "that it was. It might be upset. I am wondering whether it would not be better to tell your husband everything. You will never be happy with this hanging over you."

Annabel moistened her dry lips with a handkerchief steeped in eau de Cologne.

"You don't know him, Anna," she said with a little shudder, "or you would not talk like that. He is steeped in conventions. Every slight action is influenced by what he imagines would be the opinion of other people. Anything in the least irregular is like poison to him. He has no imagination, no real generosity. You might tell the truth to some men, but never to him."

Anna was thoughtful. A conviction that her sister's words were true had from the first possessed her.

"Annabel," she said slowly, "if I fight this thing out myself, can I trust you that it will not be a vain sacrifice? After what you have said it is useless for us to play with words. You do not love your husband, you have married him for a position—to escape from—things which you feared. Will you be a faithful and honest wife? Will you do your duty by him, and forget all your past follies? Unless Annabel, you can——"

"Oh, I will pledge you my word," Annabel cried passionately, "my solemn word. Believe me, Anna. Oh, you must believe me. I have been very foolish, but it is over."

"Remember that you are young still and fond of admiration," Anna said. "You will not give Sir John any cause for jealousy? You will have no secrets from him except—concerning those things which are past?"

"Anna, I swear it!" her sister sobbed.

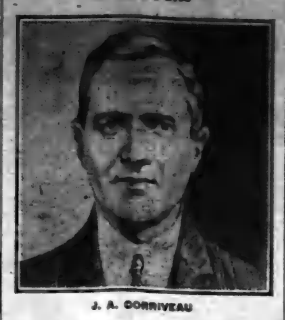
"Then I will do what I can," Anna promised. "I believe that you are quite safe. He has had brain fever since, and, as you say, I am more like what you were then than you yourself now. I don't think for a moment that he would recognize you."

Annabel clutched her sister's hands. The tears were streaming down her face, her voice was thick with sobs.

"Anna, you are the dearest, bravest sister in the world," she cried. "Oh, I can't thank you. You dear, dear girl. I—listen."

They heard a man's voice outside.

"Sir John!" Annabel gasped.



Anna sprang to her feet and made for the dressing room door.

"One moment, if you please!"

She stopped short and looked round. Sir John stood upon the threshold.

PAIN NEARLY DROVE HIM MAD

Suffered Horribly Until He Turned To "Fruit-a-tives"

DEVDALE, ONT., June 15th, 1913

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them strongly to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to inflammation of the brain but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives" and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness."

CHAPTER XIX.

The Discomfiture of Sir John.

Sir John looked from one to the other of the two sisters. His face darkened.

"My arrival appears to be opportune," he said stiffly. "I was hoping to be able to secure a few minutes' conversation with you, Miss Pellissier. Perhaps my wife has already prepared you for what I wish to say."

"Not in the least," Anna answered calmly. "We have scarcely mentioned your name."

Sir John coughed. He looked at Annabel, whose face was buried in her hands—he looked back at Anna, who was regarding him with an easy composure which secretly irritated him.

"It is concerning—our future relations," Sir John pronounced pompously.

"Indeed!" Anna answered indifferently. "That sounds interesting."

Sir John frowned. Anna was unimpressed. Elegant, a little sorrowful, she leaned slightly against the back of a chair and looked him steadily in the eyes.

"I have no wish," he said, "to altogether ignore the fact that you are my wife's sister, and have therefore a certain claim upon me."

Anna's eyes opened a little wider, but she said nothing.

"A claim," he continued, "which I am quite prepared to recognise. It will give me great pleasure to settle an annuity for a moderate amount upon you on certain conditions."

"A—what?" Anna asked.

"An annuity—a sum of money paid to you yearly or quarterly through my solicitors, and which you can consider as a gift from your sister. The conditions are such as I think you will recognize the justice of. I wish to prevent a repetition of any such errand as I presume you have come here upon this evening. I cannot have my wife distressed or worried."

"May I ask," Anna said softly, "what you presume to have been the nature of my errand here this evening?"

Sir John pointed to Annabel, who was as yet utterly limp.

"I cannot but conclude," he said, "that your errand involved the recital to my wife of some trouble in which you find yourself. I should like to add that if a certain amount is needed to set you free from any debts you may have contracted, in addition to this annuity, you will not find me unreasonable."

Anna glanced momentarily towards her sister, but Annabel neither spoke nor moved.

"With regard to the conditions I mentioned," Sir John continued, gaining a little confidence from Anna's silence, "I think you will admit that they are not wholly unreasonable. I should require you to accept no employment whatever upon the stage, and to remain out of England."

Anna's demeanour was still imperturbable, her marble pallor untinged by the slightest flush of colour. She regarded him coldly, as though wondering whether he had anything further to say. Sir John hesitated and then continued.

"I trust," he said, "that you will recognize the justice of these conditions. Under happier circumstances nothing would have given me more pleasure than to have offered you a home with your sister. You yourself, I am sure, recognize how impossible you have made it for me now to do anything of the sort. I may say that the amount of the annuity I propose to allow you is two hundred a year."

Anna looked for a moment steadily at her sister, whose face was still averted. Then she moved towards the door. Before she passed out she turned and faced Sir John. The impassivity of her features changed at last. Her eyes were lit with mirth, the corners of her mouth quivered.

"Really, Sir John," she said, "I don't know how to thank you. I can understand now these newspapers when they talk of your magnificent philanthropy. It is magnificent indeed. And yet—you millionaires should really, I think, cultivate the art of discrimination. I am so much obliged to you for your projected benevolence. Frankly, it is the funniest thing which has happened to me in my life. I shall like to think of it—whenever I feel dull. Good-bye, Anna!"

Annabel sprang up. Sir John waved her back.

"Do I understand you then to refuse my offer?" he asked Anna.

She shot a sudden glance at him, although she held her head upright maddening to be made feel that he was in any way the inferior of this cool, self-possessed young woman, whose eyes seemed for a moment to scintillate with scorn. There were one or two bitter moments in his life when he had been made to feel that gentility laid on with a brush may sometimes crack and show weak places—that deportment and breeding are after all things apart. Anna went out.

• • • • • •

Her cheeks burned for a moment or two when she reached the street, although she held her head upright and walked blithely, even humming to herself fragments of an old French song. And then at the street corner she came face to face with Nigel Emison.

"I won't pretend," he said "that this is an accident. The fates are never so kind to me. As a matter of fact I have been waiting for you."

She raised her eyebrows.

"Really," she said. "And by what right do you do anything of the sort?"

"No right at all," he admitted. "Only it is much too late for you to be out alone. You have been to see your sister, of course. How is she?"

"My sister is quite well, thank you," she answered. "Would you mind calling that hanson for me?"

He looked at it critically and shook his head.

"You really couldn't ride in it," he said, deprecatingly. "The horse's knees are broken, and I am not sure that the man is sober. I would sooner see you in a 'bus again."

She laughed.

"Do you mean to say that you have been here ever since I came?"

"I am afraid that I must confess it," he answered. "Idiotic, isn't it?"

"Absolutely," she agreed coldly. "I wish you would not do it."

"Would not do what?"

"Well, follow omnibuses from Russell Square to Hampstead."

"I can assure you," he answered, "that it isn't a habit of mine. But seriously——"

"Well, seriously?"

"Isn't it your own fault a little? Why do you not tell me your address, and allow me to call upon you."

"Why should I? I have told you that I do not wish for acquaintances in London."

"Perhaps not in a general way," he answered calmly. "You are quite right, I think. Only I am not an acquaintance at all. I am an old friend, and I decline to be shelved."

"Would you mind telling me," Anna asked, "how long I have seen you in Paris?"

He looked at her side-face. There was nothing to be learned from her face.

"Well," he said slowly, "I had met you three times—before to-night's dinner."

"Oh, Drummond's dinner," she repeated. "You were there were you?"

He laughed a little ironically.

"Isn't that rather a strange question—under the circumstances?" he asked quietly.

Her cheeks flushed a deep red. She felt that there was a hidden meaning under his words. Yet her excitement was only a passing thing. She dismissed the whole subject with a little shrug of the shoulders.

How's . . . Business?

Advertising, backed up by the right spirit, the right goods and the right service, can rescue a sinking business and will make a prosperous business more masterful in its own community.

When John Wanamaker, the Prince of Merchants, began business, he resolved to force matters. He was not content to WAIT to be found out—he DETERMINED TO BE found out. In short, he advertised. He threw on his business, small as it was, the light of publicity, and the public of Philadelphia entered the shop on which the light shone.

In this community the public is entering those shops on which the light of advertising is falling.

A WORD TO THE PUBLIC

Be sure of this: those who are using our columns week after week do not give you poorer goods or service, or have higher prices.

Shops which are illumined by advertising court with full confidence your favor.

THE BAR MUST GO!

Principle Ought to be Put Before Party.

"Whereas the General Assembly has repeatedly declared for the total suppression of the liquor traffic; and whereas the abolition of the public bar is now an issue before the electors of the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario; and whereas this is a great forward step in the direction of the ultimate prohibition of the traffic; therefore resolved that nothing short of the complete suppression of the traffic can satisfy the Christian conscience; that the assembly express their gratification at the rapid advance in temperance as shown by the present position of the question in the provinces named; and urge all ministers and congregations in those provinces and throughout the Dominion to set principle before party and to unite by vote and influence in the support of this movement for the immediate abolition of the open bar."

Declaration of Presbyterian General Assembly, June, 1914.

HEART RUPTURE.

Caused Sudden Death of Wm. Ritchie, a Retired Farmer.

Early on Sunday morning William Ritchie, a retired farmer, was found dead on the floor of his bedroom in Mr. Edward French's residence on East Broadway. Mr. Ritchie, who was 81 years of age, had retired about 11 o'clock Saturday night apparently in his usual health. In the morning his dead body was found lying face downward on the floor beside his bed. He had evidently risen during the night and fallen on the floor when overtaken by the fatal seizure. Dr. James Henry held an inquest in the Town Hall on Sunday afternoon. The evidence of Dr. T. H. Henry, who made the post mortem examination, ascribed death to the rupture of a blood vessel in the heart. The heart itself had softened and it was remarkable that the deceased was so healthy and vigorous considering the condition of the organ. The jury brought in a verdict in accordance with the evidence.

The deceased, who had lived in Orangeville at intervals for a number of years, was born in Ireland, but came to Canada over 60 years ago. He settled in Brampton, afterwards moving to Luther township and later on to Laurel. He was a widower, having been twice married, and leaves a family of one son and four married daughters. The son, William Ritchie, who lives near Laurel, is in the West at present and was unable to come home for the funeral. The daughters are Mrs. Jos. McGowan and Mrs. M. Bennington, Amaranth; Mrs. Wm. Robinson, Guelph, and Mrs. David Nichol, New York. Deceased was a Presbyterian, an Orangeman and a Conservative. The funeral was held from his daughter's home, Laurel to Grand Valley cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. Revs. J. R. Bell and J. S. Stevenson conducted the services at the house and Rev. E. J. Lane, of Grand Valley, officiated at the grave.

Camilla Picnic.

Dominion Day.

After a lapse of several years Orangeville is again going to have a First of July celebration. This time it is the Dufferin Lacrosse Club that is taking charge of the celebration. Arrangements have been made for two lacrosse matches—a junior game between two local teams and a senior match between The Dufferins and The Maitlands, of Toronto. The latter should furnish an excellent exhibition of the national game as the Maitlands have a speedy team and in the exhibition games against Fergus a few weeks ago the Dufferins also showed that they were capable of putting up a fast brand of lacrosse. The Maitlands won the junior championship of Ontario last season and this year are grouped with St. Catharines, who held the Globe Trophy for seven successive years. In the evening arrangements have been made for a football game between Orangeville and Connor, commencing at 6.45. The people of the town and vicinity should turn out in large numbers to support the lacrosse boys in their Dominion Day venture.

Methodist Garden Party

The Ladies Aid Society of Orangeville Methodist Church will hold a big garden party on Alexandra Park on Wednesday evening, July 1st. A good programme of music, addresses etc. will be provided. Mr. C. R. McKeown will preside. Tea served from 5 to 8 o'clock. Admission, 25c.

WESTLAKE—BUCHANAN — At the Rectory, on June 24th, by Rev. G. W. Tebbs, Mr. Emerson Westlake, of Bolton, to Miss Ella Buchanan, of Glencross.

to the meeting of the Executive it was tendered the nomination after the Association had placed itself on record on the temperance question in the following terms:—

"That the only Candidate entitled to the Convention shall be a man, who, regardless of party affiliations, will support the most progressive temperance legislation proposed and possible within the Province."

On this platform I stand squarely and ask for your hearty and unreserved support. While I am Conservative in my record and sympathies, I place my temperance principles and convictions before my party affiliations and stand prepared to work and vote for the abolition of the liquor traffic and other advanced temperance legislation regardless of the effect my vote may have upon the fortunes of either of the political parties. On this great issue I do not commit myself to either of the political parties, but reserve the right to act as I think the best interests of Temperance demand whenever the Government and the Opposition formulate their respective temperance policies and submit them to the Legislature for the consideration of its members.

I am unalterably opposed to the system of bi-lingualism that the French people are seeking to fasten upon Ontario through the medium of bi-lingual schools. If I have the honor to become your representative, I will do my utmost to resist these subtle and insistent encroachments, to maintain the teaching of English in our Public Schools and to preserve and promote the use of the English language throughout this Province.

It has been represented that I am in favor of the immediate establishment of a consolidated school system. This is incorrect. While there is much to be said for this system, I recognize that there are many grave difficulties in the way of its adoption and that many years must elapse and many other changes and improvements be effected before such a system could be successfully worked out in rural Ontario. I regard it as a future rather than a present day problem.

While I am not favorably disposed to the present Provincial Good Roads system, I recognize the need for further road improvement and would strongly advocate increased Government grants for the upkeep and improvement of our highways. I believe that the Provincial Government should expend dollar for dollar on the roads. In this connection I am heartily in favor of making auto owners, who use the roads to an increasing extent each year, contribute more to the maintenance of our highways. This I would oblige them to do by compelling them to pay a higher yearly license based on the power of the cars they drive.

If elected I shall advocate more attention and more generous assistance to the agricultural interests of the Province. I believe that by the extension of the work of the Department of Agriculture and the Ontario Agricultural College by means of Branch Offices of the former and the appointment of District Representatives a great deal may be done toward the betterment of conditions on the farm.

I am in favor of the continuance of the present hydro-electric policy of the Whitney Government and of any practicable extension of the system and its benefits. I am also convinced that the policy of constructing radial railways under the control of the Hydro-Electric Commission is in the interests of the people and is bound to prove of immense benefit to the whole Province. In my opinion anything that will improve and cheapen transportation facilities and stimulate manufacturing enterprise in our smaller centres of population is bound to be of incalculable benefit to the people at large.

I also stand for the honest and efficient administration of justice whether at home or abroad. I believe too that officers of the law should be men who can be depended on to administer the law honestly and not use their office to shield offenders or make it easier for them to escape the penalty of their transgressions. I do not see why we should be put to the expense of bringing magistrates and Crown prosecutors from abroad when there are officials at home whose duty it should be to try local cases and see that justice is done.

I have lived and moved in and out amongst the people of Dufferin for 23 years. Reared on the farm, and always closely in touch with farm life, I claim to understand conditions in rural Ontario and to be fairly familiar with the problems and difficulties that confront the farmers in this and other counties. It is as one of yourselves that I appeal for your hearty support. If you see fit to elect me next Monday I shall be deeply sensible of the high honor and trust you have conferred upon me and I will make it my constant endeavor to serve the best interests of the people of Dufferin and of the Province at large.

Yours Sincerely

J. R. BELL.

REV. J. R. BELL

Temperance Candidate in Dufferin is a Man Who Does Things

Has Been Active in Many Capacities During 23 Years He Has Lived in This County,

Rev. J. R. Bell, who, as the candidate of the temperance people in Dufferin, is very much in the limelight at the present time, may be described as a man who has the ability to do things. From this it must not be inferred that Mr. Bell is not a capable speaker. On the contrary he is pleasing and convincing on the public platform and his utterances carry weight because of the earnestness and singleness of purpose that is characteristic of the man. At the same time it may be fairly said that Mr. Bell has won the high place he occupies in the estimation of his friends and admirers in Dufferin through actions rather than words. He is essentially a man of action, and with his capacity for doing he possesses energy and a public spirit that have combined to make him the useful citizen he is.

Rev. Mr. Bell was born and re... on a farm in Wellington cou... Twenty-three years ago he came Laurel to become pastor of the P... byterian churches there and Black's Corners. Under his ... guidance and oversight what w... then struggling charges have gr... into two strong, vigorous congre... tions. It is not usual for the ... between pastor and people to rem... unbroken for twenty-three years, b... this has been the happy experience Rev. Mr. Bell. A few years ago ... neighboring congregation invited ... to become its pastor. When the ... vitation came before the Orangev... Presbytery a score of representat... men from Mr. Bell's two congreg... tions were present to urge reaso... why they should be allowed to ret... their beloved pastor. Their ...ar... ments carried the day and Mr. B... is still engaged in the work to whi... he was called over a score of yea... ago. One of the secrets of his su... cess in his church work has been ... interest in the young and his abili... to fire them with his own zeal a... enthusiasm for whatever is good... pure and true. He has always be... known as an active Temperance a... Sunday School worker and since he became a resident of Dufferin has been actively identified with every forward movement along these lines in this county. He took an active part in the organization of the Dufferin Sabbath School Association and filled the responsible and onerous position of County Secretary for a number of years.

In the wider sphere of general educational work Mr. Bell has been equally prominent and active. He was a member of the Orangeville High School Board for twelve years and was honored by his colleagues with the Chairmanship of the Board for five successive terms. He was finally obliged to sever his connection with the Board because of a change in the High Schools' Act, which made it necessary for the Trustees to be residents of the High School district. While connected with the Board Mr. Bell was admittedly one of its most useful members. He did a great deal to improve the equipment of the High School and was prominent in the movement which resulted in the organization of a County Branch of the Department of Agriculture and the securing for the farmers of Dufferin of the services of a District Representative in the person of Mr. H. A. Dornance. To Mr Bell must also be given much ... the formation of ... ces Association, ... rst President of ... ich office he con... veral years. The citizen ... ed is always able ... need remedying ... of bettering exist... It is only natural ... the man of this type should as... the position which will place ... he will have an opportunity to give practical effect to his views. The Prohibition wide movement to wipe out the licensed barroom makes a strong appeal to a man of Mr. Bell's pronounced temperance sympathies. Should he be successful at the polls next Monday the people of Dufferin will have a representative who will be vigilant and energetic in the discharge of his duties. To use a popular colloquialism there is not any danger that he will be found "asleep at the switch."

MAYOR RESIGNS.

Reeve White also Steps Down

Mayor Island, who was appointed Crown Attorney of Dufferin County a few weeks ago, handed in his resignation at the meeting of the town council on Monday night. Mr. J. J. White also resigned his office of reeve in order to become a candidate for the mayoralty. The nomination meeting for the purpose of filling the vacant positions will be held in the Opera House on Tuesday, June 30th, at 10 o'clock a.m. The election, should one be necessary and it is almost a certainty that it will, will be held one week later on Tuesday, July 7th. Deputy returning officers were appointed as follows:—

East Ward—Jas. A. Patterson, polling in Wm. McConnell's store.
West Ward—Jos. J. Kelly, polling in Wm. Cruikshank's shop.
North Ward—Thos. J. Bennett, polling in Opera House.
South Ward—John Howard, polling in the Fire Hall.

Guard Baby's Health In the Summer

The summer months are the most dangerous to little ones. The complaints of that season which are cholera infantum, diarrhoea and dysentry come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is really ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to the mother during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE METHODIST CHURCH

Strong Stand Taken by Toronto Conference Respecting Duty of Church in Present Provincial Election.

The following report of the Temperance, Prohibition and Moral Reform Committee of the Toronto Conference dealing with the issue now before the electors of the Province, was adopted by the Conference and ordered to be printed and placed in the hands of all its members.

Your committee have had submitted to them strong resolutions from many of the districts of our Conference, all of which, in substance, approve the "Banish-the-Bar" policy now before the electors of the Province of Ontario. The Methodist Church has always taken an advanced stand on all questions of Temperance and Moral Reform. During the entire history of our Church our General and Annual Conferences, our District Meetings and Official Boards have spoken boldly and fearlessly in advocacy of all measures and means having for their purpose and end the curtailment and destruction of the liquor traffic.

As a Church we have, on numerous occasions, affirmed and placed on record our position in relation to this question. We have said the liquor traffic is a business antagonistic to every interest of the Church and State; the traffic in intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes is immoral; it is the duty of the civil Government to prohibit and it cannot be licensed without sin."

We have protested against the unholy alliance and partnership involved in licensing this business, which is justly declared to be an enemy of God and man. We have pledged ourselves repeatedly to total hostility to the traffic as the only proper attitude for any Christian.

We believe that these and other equally emphatic and unequivocal utterances of our Church were the genuine, earnest, thoughtful expression of the views, convictions, purposes and desires of our people.

We recognize that a unique crisis has now arisen. For the first time in the history of our Province the policy of the Churches' temperance organizations has become the issue in a general election. This situation has placed the Church on trial as never before. The most severe testing time been experienced in our history. The prestige of the Church as an institution is at stake. Our influence in moulding public opinion and in saving the souls of men will be increased or lessened according to our action. Therefore

First—We urge all our people, both ministers and laymen, to do everything in their power by working and voting for the election of candidates who will support the "Banish-the-Bar" policy.

Second—While our Church has not looked with favor upon the practice of taking active part in elections, we regard the present contest not as partisan, but as a moral issue, adopted by candidates of both political parties, and, as the Church as an institution is on trial, we heartily approve of our ministers taking a decided stand on the question and action as, in their judgment, they may consider necessary to secure best results.

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

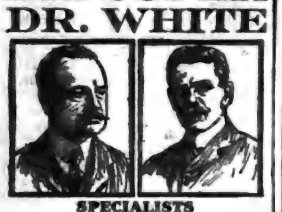
The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes [illegible] there [illegible] children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.



A CENTENARIAN.

James Graham, of Snelgrove, is 100 Years of Age.

To have watched the march of progress for one hundred years does not fall to the lot of many people. James Graham, of Snelgrove, enjoys the distinction of having attained the century mark on Sunday last. The old gentleman is known far and wide throughout the County of Peel and has always been an active, vigorous man. He is still in fairly good health and able to enjoy a talk with his friends when they call upon him. Born in County Antrim on June 14, 1814, Mr. Graham came to Canada over 80 years ago and settled in Churchville, where he followed his trade as a tanner for some time. He afterwards took up land at lot 20, second line west, and remained thereon until a little more than two years ago, when he removed with his nephew, Mr. Wm. Mundell, to their present home. About twenty years ago he gave up active work on the farm and has since lived with his nephew. Mrs. Graham, who was his second wife, died some four years ago.

There were no children by either marriage. An ardent member of the Orange Order, Mr. Graham has only missed three walks on the 12th of July since he joined the Order over eighty years ago. He was a noticeable figure in every parade, as, beaming with smiles, he took part in every procession. Of wiry and vigorous frame, he at all times possessed good health and was a hard worker until the burden of years compelled him to take life more easily. He was a smoker until about twenty years ago, when he suffered from an attack of la grippe and dropped his pipe at that time and never resumed it. Mr. Graham was the eldest of a family of 12, of whom but two others survive, Mrs. N. Elliott, of Streetsville, and Mrs. Orr Ostrander, of Huttonville. In recognition of his hundredth birthday the members of Mount Pleasant Church met at his home on Sunday night and held a prayer meeting. On Monday Mr. Graham was presented with a fine lounging robe by the members of the church, who hope that he may live many more years among them.—Brampton Conservator.

ONTARIO S CHIEF ELECTION ISSUE.

(Christian Guardian)

The chief issue will be the Temperance question. From every standpoint this is the issue which outranks every other. To the dyed-in-the-wool politician, of course, the chief consideration in any election is the triumph of his party, but there are a great many voters who are beginning to see that this is not so great an issue as it seems. The man who sincerely believes that practically all the finest men are in one party and practically all the rogues in the other, and that, as a matter of course, his party holds the honest men, is still to be found, but his days are numbered; and more and more and more men are realizing that a mere party triumph is rather a paltry affair. Naturally this means the exalting of the temperance issue, and in every constituency in Ontario this issue should be made the leading one. The merely political side of the question should be thrust into the background as far as possible, and the clear-cut temperance issue should be placed before the voters.

Would Ontario be better, more sober, more prosperous, more moral, if we wiped out by provincial vote every bar and club license in the province? So far as we can see this is the straight issue which our voters must decide. Personally we believe that the abolition of the bar and club licenses all over the province would be the greatest step toward sobriety that our province has yet taken, and we hope to say so by our vote.

It is idle to becloud the issue by arguing that the shop license is as bad as the bar license, and that it is useless to close the bar while we leave the shop open. That is not the real issue. The question is simply whether it would be wiser to close 1,300 bars and leave open 200 shops, or to leave 1,500 bars and shops open, subject simply to the local option vote or the Scott Act contest? But is it any use closing the bars until we get the support of a predominant public sentiment? It seems to us that we already have that sentiment and that all we need is to mass it at the polls and incorporate it in representatives in the next legislature.

This is not a party question except as it is made one. Mr. Rowell has not adopted this cry as the last despairing effort of a desperate politician, but he is trying rather to swing the whole Liberal vote and, if possible, the Conservative vote against the bar. The Christian Guardian, as the organ of the Methodist Church, is not in politics, and if it were merely a question of Grit or Tory, even the fact that Mr. Rowell is one of our most prominent and honored Methodist laymen would hardly tempt us to deal with political issues; but upon the temperance question our Church stands committed to the most advanced legislation, and we cannot be neutral in this fight without swallowing all our past professions. We believe in the abolition of the liquor traffic, and the abolition of the bar and shop licenses is the nearest approach to this that is at present before the people of Ontario, and we would urge that every effort be made to give this advanced temperance policy an overwhelming majority in the next legislature. Let the electors see to it that wise, determined and organized efforts be made to insure that whether one political party or the other wins in the struggle the abolition of the bar will be assured by having a vast majority of representatives in the next legislature pledged to its destruction.

Dr. Chase is No Stranger

In This Home—Receipt Book and Medicines Kept at Hand All the Time.

There is no better safeguard against disease and suffering than a good cathartic medicine. In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are constantly kept at hand, because they quickly awaken the action of liver, kidneys and bowels, and cure the most common ills of life.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, Jamestown, Ont., writes:—"Dr. Chase is no stranger in our home, for we have two of his Receipt Books in the house. My father and my husband's father each had one, and I have been familiar with it ever since I can remember. It was only natural that we should use the Kidney-Liver Pills, and we found them so satisfactory in regulating the digestive system and curing the common ills of life that we always keep them on hand. Many a time these pills have saved me much suffering and prevented serious disease. We also keep the Ointment in the house all the time."

FALLING HAIR and ITCHING SCALP

Needless—Use Parisian Sage

Now that Parisian Sage can be had at any drug counter it is certainly needless to have thin, brittle, matted, stringy or faded hair. No matter how unsightly the hair, how badly it is falling, or how much dandruff, Parisian Sage is all that is needed. Frequent applications and well rubbed into the scalp will do wonders—it acts like magic. The hair roots are nourished and stimulated to grow new hair, itching scalp, dandruff and falling hair cease—your head feels fine. Best of all, the hair becomes soft, fluffy, abundant and radiant with life and beauty.

You will be surprised and delighted with Parisian Sage. Try at least one fifty cent bottle from F. S. Pickering. He will refund the purchase price if you are not satisfied.

The Ministerial Association of Woodstock has issued a manifesto subscribing to the Rowell temperance policy.

Robert Boyle, of Monticello, states that there are deer around Luther yet. A good sized buck daily feeds in his fields near the bush, and does not seem so timid as might be expected.

WOLSEY'S CELLAR.

Some of Old Whitehall Will Be Preserved Intact.

Little survives of Whitehall save the name, the one splendid fragment of the New Palace which Inigo Jones planned for King Charles I., but the course of English history determined should never be built. It served for a short while as the banqueting hall, and later as the place wherein the King himself spent his last moments before he stepped out of its window upon the scaffold.

To-day it has become the United Service Institution, and it constitutes all of Whitehall Palace that is known to the public. Underground, however, there is still intact a relic of the older palace erected by Wolsey—a vault that is said by tradition to have been the great cardinal's wine cellar. As already stated, great changes are pending in Whitehall gardens, where additional Government offices are to be built.

This last relic of Wolsey's days of power at York Place is to be preserved unharmed when the new buildings rise above it.

For years past the vault has served the purposes of a refreshment-room for the clerks engaged in the public offices. It is a somewhat low chamber, of no architectural pretensions; its value historically is that it was Wolsey's building. The fact was made plain when, at the instance of the Office of Works, a part of the wall was laid bare some time ago.

The original brick was then disclosed, and when the stucco facing had been cleared away the arms of the cardinal carved in stone were brought to light. It has become the accepted tradition that Wolsey built Whitehall, and that is probably true, for a builder on such a magnificent scale as his works still to be seen at Hampton Court and at Oxford display, is likely to spare little that he found on the site. But York Place was standing there centuries before his time. It was not even his property. Seventeen archbishops of York has possessed the place before Wolsey, and till the day of the seizure by the crown it belonged to the Northern see.

The vault, as shown in Fisher's plan of the Old Palace, prepared in the reign of Charles II., was situated immediately behind the great hall. Near by were the kitchen, the buttery, pantry, and other offices requisite for the preparation of the great feasts at which the all-powerful Minister entertain his royal master, among others. That the vault still preserved was actually the wine cellar is, by reason of its situation, extremely probable. The means by which King Henry VIII. secured York Palace for himself were characteristic.

It belonged by right, as already stated, to the See of York. It was at this time, says the historian Strype, distinguished "by a sumptuous magnificence that most probably has never been equalled in the house of any other English subject, or surpassed in the palaces of many of its kings. Its buildings and gardens covered three acres, and from the stairs upon the river Wolsey entered his barge, and was rowed to Esher after his disgrace. Henry paid absolutely nothing for this most valuable property, either to Wolsey, the builder, or to the See of York, the dispossessed owner. Yet in the Act of Parliament legalizing the unholy business, it is set out that the state of utter ruin and decay into which the Ancient Palace of Westminster has fallen had "induced the King to purchase" York Palace. The name was changed at once to Whitehall.

FLAGS FLOWN AT SEA.

Significance of Certain Colors in the International Code.

From time immemorial flags have been flown by ships at sea all over the world, but it is only in more recent years that an international code has been adopted. All the countries of the world now conform to fixed rules about the flying of certain flags, though, of course, each navy has its own secret code for use in war time.

The national flag of any ship when hoisted upside down denotes that the ship in question is in difficulties and requires immediate assistance, which any passing ship is required to give if possible.

The quarantine flag is a plain yellow square, hoisted on the foremast, which indicates that the ship has got an infectious disease on board or that it has come from an infected port. No person is allowed either to go on board or to leave such a ship until permission is granted by the sanitary authorities of the port.

In all parts of the world a white flag is accepted as a token of peace, a red flag as that of defiance and a black flag as that of a pirate. A green flag flying from the masthead of a ship or barge at anchor indicates that there is a wreck in the vicinity. The same is denoted by a green buoy placed over the spot.

When a red flag is flying on the foremast it is a sign that the ship has powder, shell or ammunition on board and serves as a warning to other ships not to come too near in case of accidents. It is called the danger or more commonly the powder flag.—London Globe.

Sayers' Famous Fight.

Jack Johnson's boxing with a broken left arm is a feat of endurance that may be compared to some extent with Tom Sayers' famous fight with Heenan in England in 1860, when his right arm was broken soon after the fight commenced. Both events ended with a draw. Not so, however, another memorable contest in pugilistic annals—the fight between Tom Cribb and Molineaux, the black, in 1811, in which the latter, who was beaten, fought nearly three rounds with the heavy handicap of a fractured jaw.—London Daily Chronicle.

PRISONERS PLANT FORESTS.

Australian Convicts Reforest Five Hundred Acres.

According to a recent report of the Forestry Department of New South Wales, good conduct convicts at the state prison, instead of breaking stone, are now engaged in the more useful and healthy work of replanting with trees the waste lands of the state. At one prison alone 25,000 trees, mostly American ash and pines were planted in 1913, and so successful have these plantations been that this work will be considerably extended in the present year.

A similar idea has been worked out successfully by the city of San Diego in California, which possesses 7,000 acres of bare rolling sand land at a distance of ten miles from the city. A trained forester was engaged to make this land profit-yielding and under his direction the city's unemployed have been given work planting this area with trees suitable to the country. Other cities in the United States that have found it necessary to purchase and reforest large areas on the watersheds governing their water-supply have advantageously used the same kind of labor. The primary purpose of such reforestration is not, however, to furnish work to the unemployed, but to develop a profitable source of revenue from land which would otherwise remain unproductive.

City forests of this kind are not, as yet, in vogue in this country. Perhaps the only city forest in Canada is that at Guelph, Ont., where a small area has been planted surrounding the springs which furnish the city's water supply. In many of the counties of eastern Canada, however, are large areas of waste land, originally forested, and capable only of producing forests. Ontario has a Counties Reforestration Act making possible the acquisition of such waste land for reforestation purposes by municipal councils, but up to the present time only one county has availed itself of this opportunity. Quebec and the Dominion government have also passed legislation to encourage tree planting, and the Dominion Forestry Branch in the last fiscal year distributed nearly 4,000,000 trees from the nurseries at Indian Head for woodlot planting in western Canada.

The growing of forest trees on waste land can in most cases be made a profitable undertaking, besides providing labor to a considerable number of men, yet no extensive reforestation has as yet been done in eastern Canada.

Electors of Orangeville:

I wish to announce that I have decided to stand for the office of Reeve in the event of Reeve White resigning to run for the Mayoralty. I have spent four years on the School Board and four years in the Town Council, one as deputy-reeve and one as reeve. I think I can therefore claim that I have a working knowledge of the affairs of the town and county. I respectfully solicit your hearty support in the event of an election.

Yours Truly
W. FAIRBAIRN.

ORANGEVILLE MAYORALTY

As I understand that Mayor Island will resign shortly, I desire to announce that I will be a candidate for the Mayoralty whenever the position is vacant. I am taking this step in compliance with the expressed wishes of a large number of ratepayers, and respectfully solicit your hearty support should I have any opposition.

Yours Faithfully
DR. G. H. CAMPBELL

ORANGEVILLE MAYORALTY

I desire to inform the electors of Orangeville that I will be a candidate for the position of Mayor, when the office becomes vacant through the expected resignation of Mayor Island. I have had eight years' municipal experience as a member of the Orangeville Council and have served under no less than five Mayors. I feel that my long record gives me a right to aspire to the Mayoralty, now that the position is about to be thrown open. I shall be grateful for your hearty support.

Yours Very Truly
J. J. WHITE.

Byron's Proposal.

Lord Byron was led into an unhappy matrimonial alliance with Miss Milbanke, only daughter and heiress of Sir Ralph Milbanke, through being rejected by another young lady. He had proposed to the latter, and as he held her letter of refusal in his hand he said to a friend, "It seems that it is to be Miss Milbanke after all." He sat down and wrote the fatal letter, handing it to his friend for perusal. "A very pretty letter," his friend remarked after reading it. "It is a pity that it should not go." "And it shall go!" exclaimed Byron, and thus opened one of the most tragic chapters of his checkered history.

THE BANNER, JULY 2nd, 1914.

THE RESULT IN DUFFERIN

In view of the fact that he did not enter the field until the eleventh hour, Rev. J. R. Bell has no reason to feel ashamed of the run he made in Dufferin. Mr. Bell entered the contest less than two weeks before the election date. He was without any effective fighting organization at his back. There was not time to organize properly and make arrangements to get at the indifferent vote. In every election there is a percentage of voters who have little or no choice between the two candidates. Some of these would not even take the trouble to go to the polls if left to themselves. Mr. McKeown's organization and auto service enabled him to capture practically the whole of this vote. The day preceding the election one of his active supporters made the statement that arrangements had been made to have an auto in every polling sub-division. This may not have been actually the case but it is nevertheless a fact that Mr. McKeown had many autos at his service throughout the day. There are 43 polling divisions in the county so that the securing of say eight careless voters in each division would make a great difference in the result. A platform campaign is important, but it will not win an election unless backed by organization. The record of the Whitney Government, its strong stand on the bilingual question and the faith the people have in Sir James himself were undoubtedly factors that influenced the result here and elsewhere. While keen, the Dufferin contest was good-natured. Both candidates showed excellent spirit on and off the platform. This is as it should be. There is no occasion for bitterness over election matters. All good citizens are sincerely anxious for good government, but it is not to be expected that all will seek to attain this end in the same way.

McKEOWN WON AGAIN

Defeated Rev. J. R. Bell by 520 Majority.

Quiet Contest in Dufferin on Monday—Temperance Candidate Ran Well in Orangeville, Shelburne and Grand Valley, but Fared Badly in Country.

So far as Dufferin was concerned the Provincial election on Monday was decidedly quiet. Not more than 75 per cent. of the available vote was polled. The percentage would not have reached this figure had it not been for the excellent organization of the McKeown men. They had autos at work in practically every polling division in the County and this enabled them to get out nearly the whole of their vote. On the other hand Mr. Bell had little or no organization in the country outside of his own town. Because of this many careless voters who were favorable to his cause did not go to the polls at all. The dull, murky day with occasional showers of rain was also a handicap to the poorly organized forces of the temperance candidate.

Due to the fact that both candidates were Conservatives, the contest was a difficult one to forecast. The light vote was much heavier than usual and it was impossible to tell which side of the balance would likely to be thrown. The McKeown men expected a majority of from 200 to 300 in Orangeville. They were considerably surprised when they found it was only 114. On the other hand they were prepared to concede Bell from 150 to 200 in Amaranth and at least another 100 in Melancthon. All he was able to get in the latter township was 101 and in Mulmur he gave him a paltry 27. The only return was from Camilla, where Bell a majority of 2. Mono followed by the four wards, Relessey and Rosemont all showing losses for Bell over the 1911 election. The Bell workers were growing jubilant and their joy was short lived. As the returns turned and in a short time it became evident that it was a question of how big the majority would be. While Mr. Bell's defeat was a foregone conclusion before the polls opened, the size of the majority which he entered the field, was a surprise to anything like as well as to the north of the county as due in part to the heavy vote in each of the Woods' votes which went to him, owing to the fact that he had not given Woods the support in 1911. A light vote was polled throughout Melancthon and the strong Woods' divisions to the north of Amaranth and Mulmur. The votes were polled as follows in 1911 and 4416 in 1914.

The returns, which are complete here, were nearly all in before 11 o'clock. The Provincial returns were received in the Opera House where quite a large audience gathered later on in the evening to hear the returns. Mr. C. R. McKeown, the member elect, presided.

THE MAYORALTY.

Mr. J. J. White Gives Reasons Why He Is a Candidate for the Chief Magistracy.

To the Electors of Orangeville.
Ladies and Gentlemen:

Owing to Mayor Island having accepted the office of Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace for the County of Dufferin, he has intimated his early retirement from the Chief Magistracy of the town of Orangeville. In that event I propose to tender my resignation as your reeve, to which honorable position you elected me in January last by a large majority, and offer myself as a candidate for the higher office of Mayor.

In doing so it is only proper to recount my experience and qualifications for the office to which I aspire, and why I, at this time, solicit your support.

The reeve of any town is the logical successor to the mayor on the latter's office becoming vacant. I am now in the eighth year of my municipal experience, having served under five mayors, as councillor, deputy-reeve and reeve, and during that period, at one time or another, have been a member of every committee appointed by council and chairman of several.

I first entered council over twenty years ago, in the year 1893, when Mr. Johnston Lindsay was mayor, and for six consecutive years was a member of the town council. In the years 1894-5, under Mayor Bailey, the present splendid water works system was installed. In that great undertaking I took no small part, and contributed in a large measure to its success. In 1896, under Mayor Endacott, several important works were consummated, and in the years 1896-7 I was elected deputy-reeve, when under Mayor Stevenson, the construction of cement sidewalks, under the present beneficent plan, was introduced. After a few years' retirement, I was again returned to the Council in 1913, and last January was elected your Reeve, as stated.

During my somewhat extended term of office, I have always advocated everything which would advance the town. My sympathetic attitude towards factories and my constant endeavor to attract new industries to our midst has, I trust, met with your approval. My work as Chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee has been arduous and entailed personal and constant attention.

I have considerable personal stake, no little pride and every confidence in the future of our beautiful and healthy town, and bespeak your votes and influence, confidently relying on my past record.

With the assurance that if elected as your Mayor it will be my constant effort to serve you to the best of my skill and ability and to see that all branches of our civic government are administered with EFFICIENCY and ECONOMY, I have the honor to be

Your obedient servant,
J. J. WHITE.

A SKATING RINK

Is an Urgent Necessity and Something Should be Done.

July 2nd, 1914.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Three months have gone since I wrote to you in connection with the very urgent necessity of providing a Skating Rink for the young people of our town. Since then I have heard from very many of our people that they are heartily in sympathy with the scheme, but Mr. Editor, sympathy and good wishes is no sort of mortar to hold bricks together with, nor will expressions of hopes that something may be done to buy a piece of land, and put a roof on the building.

I have been told to wait till Fall, but the end of the year is no time to BEGIN to put up a building. It may be alright to make ice then. Some private individuals INTEND to do something. May I ask WHEN, OH WHEN?

Our lacrosse boys have roused us up a little (very success to them) and Orangeville is at last coming into her own. Let us quit hoping and praying for something to turn up, as Micawber did, and DO something about this real necessity for our boys and girls.

I don't care whether it is a private venture, and there is money in such an investment, or whether it be built by a joint stock company, and there is money in it for the stockholders under good management, or whether it be by private subscriptions and donations (a Tag Day or Fall Fair Day would help some) but for the sake of our boys and girls let us get to work.

Yours Faithfully,
GEO. W. TEBBS.

The Baptist Church

Sunday next being the first in July Rev. Mr. St. Dalmas will preach a patriotic sermon in the morning. In the evening he will meet a number of objections that have been handed in "Why Men Do Not Go to Church." A special invitation extended to men who do not go to church. Everybody welcome.

On Saturday, June 27th, Rev. D. T. C. McKerroll, pastor of Victoria Presbyterian Church, West Toronto, solemnized the marriage of Mr. Andrew Mackenzie, of the Audit Department of the Toronto Electric Light Co. and Miss Sarah, Ferguson, third daughter of Mr. Joseph Ferguson, 29 Annette St., West Toronto, and formerly of Caledon. The happy couple were unattended and after the ceremony left for a brief honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and other parts of the peninsula, the bride travelling in a handsome navy blue dress.

Irvine-Taylor

One of the prettiest of June weddings was that solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Taylor, East Garafraxa, on Wednesday June 17th, at 5.30 o'clock, when their eldest daughter, Gertrude Emmeline, was united in marriage to Mr. Elwood C. Irvine, of East Garafraxa. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, assisted by Elder R. W. Tarswell, of Hillsburg, on the verandah under an arch of evergreens. The bride wore a graceful gown of ivory, brocaded satin trimmed with guipure lace and pearls, and wore the usual bridal veil, arranged in Juliet cap effect, and caught up with a spray of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley, and wore the groom's gift, a pendant set with diamond and pearls. The bride's only attendant was her little brother, Master Johnny J. Taylor, who made a charming page and was dressed in white, carrying the ring in a basket of pink carnations and maidenhair fern. During the bridal procession, Miss Eva Warden, niece of the groom, played Lohengrin's wedding march. The groom's gift to the pianiste was a pearl ring, and to the page a pearl tiepin. After the ceremony and usual congratulations, the guests adjourned to the dining room, which was artistically decorated with evergreens and white carnations, and there partook of a dainty wedding repast.

The bridal couple left later for their future home, lot 18, con. 13, East Garafraxa, and carry with them the best wishes of their many friends. — Star & Vidette.

Dudgeon-Bidwell

On Wednesday, June 24th, one of the prettiest weddings of the season was witnessed by about seventy invited guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Bidwell, "Balsam Grove," Amaranth, when their only daughter, Nettie Cora, became the bride of Mr. Irwin E. Dudgeon. As the piano pealed forth the wedding march from Lohengrin in response to the touch of Miss Maggie Fritchie, of Crombie, the groom, in an up-to-date suit of black cheviot, entered the drawing room and took his place beneath a canopy of pink and white roses, wedding bells and tissue netting with back ground of cedar and lace. The bride followed, looking handsome and graceful, robed in a stylish gown of white satin with overdress of silk tulle and venice lace spangled with seed pearls, the drapery caught up with orange blossoms. She wore an elaborate tulle veil crowned with orange blossoms to match and carried on her arm a large shower bouquet of American beauty roses, and lillies of the valley with fern foliage from which hung long streamers of wide white ribbon. She was accompanied by her father and preceded by her flower girl, little Audrey Fife, who looked sweet in pale blue silk under battenburg lace with cap to match and carrying a miniature brass basket filled with sweet peas in which rested the ring. The silken knot was tied by Rev. J. R. Bell, of Laurel, who has been pastor of the young couple from infancy until marriage. After receiving the congratulations of the friends, Miss Ritchie sang sweetly "O Perfect Love." The happy couple then led the way to the dining room where a sumptuous wedding repast was served beneath festooning of pink and white. Ribbons of the same color fell from a large white bell in the centre of the room to the corners of the bride's table at which twelve guests were seated. After breakfast, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all, several toasts were tendered and heartily responded to, one worthy of mention being the groom's reply to the toast tendered the bride by the pastor. A few minutes intermission followed. While jokes and fun ran high the bride slipped away, soon returning in a rich travelling suit of king's blue bedford cord with a lovely cornflowered hat trimmed with heavy French plumes to match. The bride and groom were then taken by automobile to the depot, where amid showers of confetti and other tokens of the good wishes of their friends they boarded the train for Buffalo, Rochester and other southern points, where they intend spending their honeymoon. The gifts, which were numerous and costly, testified to the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Their many friends unite in wishing them much happiness and prosperity during their voyage through life. The groom's gift to the bride was a substantial cheque, to the organist a set of gold blouse pins and to the flower girl a gold necklace. Among the guests present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, Toronto, Mrs. Koeppe, New York, Mrs. C. H. Bidwell, Batavia, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. J. Fife and Miss Muriel Fife, Hamilton, Miss May Braiden, Regina, and Miss M. King, Toronto.

Vote For Campbell

FOR MAYOR

Election Tuesday, July 7th, 1914

Conder-Murray

A quiet wedding took place at the Parsonage on Close Ave., Toronto, on Wednesday, June 24th, the contracting parties being Mr. Wesley Conder, of Burnhamthorpe, and Miss Harriet Murray, of Mono Mills. Rev. T. Campbell was the officiating clergyman. The bride, who was unattended, wore tan corded silk trimmed with French knots and chiffon. The happy couple left for Niagara Falls, Buffalo and other points on the noon train.

Married at Vancouver

Miss Nina Foley, youngest daughter of Mrs. Foley, of East Broadway, and sister of John Foley, editor of The Sun, was married at Vancouver on Friday, June 19th, to Mr. Andrew L. Peters, formerly of Council Bluffs, Iowa. The ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Father Connolly, took place at the church of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary and was witnessed by a few intimate friends. Mr. Peters is well known in mining circles in British Columbia. They will reside at Vancouver.

McCartney-Lindsay.

One of the happiest events of the season took place at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. William McCartney, near Charleston, on Tuesday of this week, when their second daughter, Olive Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert Lindsay, of Caledon East. At two o'clock the charming bride, gowned in shadow lace over silk crepe metier trimmed with pearls, entered the decorated drawing room on the arm of her father to the strains of the Lohengrin bridal chorus, played by the bride's sister, Miss Carrie McCartney, carrying a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank N. Bowes, of Alton, assisted by Rev. G. H. More, of Caledon East. Miss Marian McFarlane, of Toronto, niece of the groom, daintily dressed in shadow lace over silk trimmed with pearls and carrying a basket of sweet peas, performed the part of the flower girl.

After congratulations the pianiste played Mendelssohn's wedding march and during the signing of the register, Miss Jean Barber, of Alton, sang "Entreat me not to leave thee." The bride and groom led the way to the dining room which was decorated in pink and white. Here a sumptuous repast was served by caterer, Mr. Frank Arkell. Rev. Mr. Bowes proposed a toast to the bride, which was ably responded to by the groom, after which several other toasts were proposed and responded to. The presents were numerous and costly and included a cheque from the bride's father for a handsome sum and a purse of gold from the Caledon Methodist Church, of which the bride has been a faithful organist for some time. The groom's gift to the bride was a necklace set with peridots of whole pearls, to the pianiste a pendant, to the flower girl a gold bracelet and to the soloist a ring set with three whole pearls. Amid showers of confetti the bride and groom left Caledon on the evening train. The bride wore a travelling suit of Copenhagen blue with hat to match. The happy couple are taking their honeymoon trip to Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa and other points. Among the guests were friends from Toronto, Orangeville, Caledon East, Weston, Mono Road and Stratford. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay will take up their residence at Cosey Valley, 5th line, east, Caledon, and will be at home to their friends after August 1st. We join in congratulations and wish them a long and happy married life.

THE SUMMER FALLOW.

A good summer-fallow is expensive, but a poor one over-run with weeds of all kinds is far more costly. This is the season to get after the weeds growing on the dirty run-down field which is or should be given clean cultivation in preparation for winter wheat this fall. We agree that summer-fallowing is expensive farming but if a field is very dirty sometimes it is almost absolutely necessary to follow the practice in order to clean it and bring it up to suitable tilth to go ahead and produce profitable crops.

If it is not dirty it should not be summer-fallowed and if it is it must get frequent cultivation else the field is left bare of a crop to no purpose and weeds gain even a stronger foothold than if a spring cereal or hay crop had been grown upon the land. To be in the best condition the summer-fallow should be worked rather lightly, but frequently. We would cultivate it with the broad-share cultivator almost as frequently as corn ground is worked. It is necessary to retain moisture and it is absolutely imperative that weeds be kept below ground to weaken and destroy them. Many summer fallows are a disgrace to their owners and are not worthy of the name. They should be kept just as clean as the corn and other hoed crops are kept. If this is impossible it is not the wisest practice to summer-fallow. — Farmers' Advocate.

CAMILLA.

Camilla Women's Institute will meet at the home of Mrs. James White on Tuesday, July 7th. The Laurel Branch will take the meeting. A full attendance of the members is requested.

ROSEMONT.

Miss E. Pakenham, of Toronto, is spending a couple of weeks with her friend, Miss Lucy Irwin.

Mrs. Thomas Donaldson, of Manitoba, is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Donaldson.

The annual Convention of the Township of Caledon Sabbath School Association, which was held in the Presbyterian Church here last Thursday, was largely attended. Delegates were present from nearly every Sunday School in the township. Splendid reports were given of the past year's work. Rev. G. I. Burns, of Belfountain, and H. A. White, of Toronto, gave splendid addresses in the afternoon and evening, and short addresses were given by the local clergy and others.

Lost between Miss Shore's Millinery store and the G.T.R. tracks a valuable lady's watch. Finder will be handsomely rewarded upon leaving at the Post Office.

Mrs. Flynn, of Chicago, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. A. Cranston, for the last few months, has returned home.

The excitement caused by the election on Monday last has just about subsided.

Mr. Thos. R. Evans, who has been confined to the hospital with appendicitis for the last four weeks, has returned home. We hope Tom will soon be able to be around again.

Relief at Once
Cure Certain

Conclusive Evidence That Dr. Chase's Ointment Cures Itching Piles.

Mr. John G. McDonald, Pictou, N.S., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching piles, and found that the first application gave relief. After using a few boxes of the ointment I was completely cured, and can recommend it highly to all sufferers from this disease. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

Mr. James M. Douglass, Superior Junction, Ont., writes:—"For about six years I suffered from piles, and often could not work for two or three days at a time, so great was the suffering from pain and itching. Doctors treated me in vain, and I tried many treatments before I came across Dr. Chase's Ointment. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me, and for several months I have had no return of this annoying ailment."

There can be no doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the most effective treatment obtainable for every form of piles. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Higher Criticism In School.

The teacher had told the class how the waters of the Red Sea were divided for the Israelites and what became of the Egyptians who pursued them, says The Manchester Guardian. A little boy with an inquiring mind put up his hand and said, "Please, teacher, if divers were to go down into the Red Sea would they find the Egyptians' chariots?" Another little boy instantly burst out laughing. The teacher asked him why, "Please, teacher," he explained, "'e thinks it's true!"

Order Your Own Weather.

Soon we will be able to have any kind of weather we want. If we want fine weather all that is necessary is to send up positive electricity into the clouds, and if rain is wanted negative electricity is discharged and a shower will result.

Such is the suggestion made by Sir Oliver Lodge before the Institute of Electrical Engineers in London. The possibility of controlling the weather caused much interest among the engineers.

Essa council passed a transient traders by-law fixing the license fee at $100.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada. — "Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

PREPARE RASPBERRIES FOR NEXT YEAR.

There is one operation on the raspberry plantation that should be carried into execution immediately after the crop is harvested, and that is to remove the old canes. If disease and insects are in the patch at all they will likely be found on the wood that has borne the crop, and since it is of no further value it should be removed at once and burned. Anthracnose is becoming a common enemy and this system of control is the most practicable yet put into use. As for clipping back the young canes, it is optional whether it be done in the autumn or spring, and each time has its advocates for reasons based upon local conditions. However, the cleaning up of the old canes is a practice to be carried out as soon as possible after harvesting the crop and this followed by cultivation and fertilization will give a healthy well-nourished plantation for the succeeding year.

YOUR HAIR NEEDS PARISIAN SAGE

It Quickly Removes Dandruff

Just because your hair is full of dandruff, thin streaky, dull and never will do up to look pretty, do not despair. Beautiful hair, thick fluffy, lustrous and absolutely free from dandruff is only a matter of care.

Parisian Sage frequently applied will work wonders. Just one application stops itching head, removes dandruff and all excessive oil. It goes right to the hair roots and furnishes the nourishment needed—the hair becomes soft, fluffy, abundant and radiant with life.

Parisian Sage not only saves the hair but stimulates it to grow long and heavy. Get a 50-cent bottle from F. S. Pickering at once. There is no other "Just-as-good."

THE BIRKENHEAD.

Last Surviving Officer of Famous Vessel Passes Away.

The recent death in England of Captain G. A. Lucas has removed an officer who was believed to be the last survivor of the Birkenhead, a troopship that ran on the rocks off the coast of Africa sixty years ago. The story of the disaster is here reprinted:—

The Kaffir War was dragging on indecisively and ingloriously, when word was sent home for more soldiers. Immediately the Birkenhead—a failure as a steam frigate—was ordered to prepare for sea, and on Jan 7, 1852, she sailed from Queenstown with twenty-two officers and non-commissioned officers and 466 men of various regiments, twenty women and children, and some details of the medical service. The crew numbered 130; altogether there were 630 souls on board.

All went well until after leaving Simon's Bay, and then on the starlight night was borne the cry that the ship was ashore. Instantly the commander ordered the engines to go astern. The ship responded, and the water rushed into the gaping wound which had been made by the rocks on which she had struck. Then the brave vessel was carried again on the reef, and received further grievous injury; her bottom plates being crumpled up. The bulkheads tore asunder; the sea flooded the foremost compartments and engine rooms; a number of men met death while asleep in their berths. In the meantime, order amid chaos reigned on deck.

The soldiers, who had been mustered as for drill, went to the chain pumps — quite uselessly, as it happened; the women and children were placed in boats with as little excitement as though it were an evolution to test the efficiency of the crew.

Three boats with seventy-eight persons were thus got away.

At last the great ship broke in two, the forward part sinking out of sight, leaving the stern only afloat, crowded with officers and men and the crew. Was there dismay? The soldiers were drawn up as if they had been on the drill ground; they knew that they were face to face with death, but they stood firm — the champions of the race, cool, collected, resolute.

Around the doomed men the sea lapped in the moonlight, calm and inscrutable, the long swell of the waves against the ship's torn sides chanting a dirge; now and again the silvery surface was ruffled as a shark appeared; away in the distance could be described an inhospitable shore, guarded by a well-nigh impenetrable network of coarse seaweed. This was the setting of the drama.

Every soldier—even the least imaginative — must have realized the terrible fate which awaited him, yet not a man flinched. They were present at the last roll-call. Standing at attention, facing unmoved the enemy of humanity, and surrounded by some of the worst horrors of the sea in the shape of the fish of prey, these heroes went down with the Birkenhead. When the grey, dawn broke there remained only the memory of a splendid epic and a few score of survivors. By one miracle or another 194 lives were saved of the company on board the doomed ship, and of these Captain Lucas was one.

Found In a Glacier.

Sir Martin Conway has recently told this story of finding a lost ax in the Alps: Zurbiggen, one of the celebrated mountain climbers of the world, in scaling a peak of Les Anglaises, near Chamounix, accidentally let his ax fall near the summit of the peak. It fell some thousands of feet. In the normal course of things it was buried in snow and swallowed up in the glacier, being covered deeper and deeper each year, and at the same time being carried slowly downward as the ice flowed on. Seven or eight years afterward Hon. C. G. Bruce and Harkbir, a Sepoy chief, in descending a peak in the Alps just as night was falling, and a great crevasse barred the way, being unable to find the bridge over it, cut a path down to the bottom, where Harkbir stepped on an ax which had M. Z. Zurbiggen's initials on the handle. There could be no mistake as to the identity of the ax, as Harkbir had seen it and used it before.

A Little Mistake.

It is said of Archbishop Trench that he was "a man of singularly vague and dreamy habits," who "resigned the see of Dublin on account of advancing years and settled in London. He once went back to pay a visit to his successor, Lord Plunket. Finding himself back again in his old place, sitting at his old dinner table, and gazing across it at his old wife, he lapsed in memory to the days when he was master of the house, and gently remarked to Mrs. Trench, 'I am afraid, my love, that we must put this cook down among our failures'!"

To Look For Delicacies.

A dozen English epicures, active members of the Gourmands' League, have decided to organize a series of pilgrimages to all the towns and villages of France renowned for their cookery or whose names are enrolled on the scroll of fame by reason of some famous delicacy that is theirs exclusively. The first pilgrimage undertaken by the gourmands will occur in a few weeks—to the ancient town of Troyes, the home of the "andopilette," a small sausage.

Chinchillas, valuable fur-bearing animals, which inhabit high mountains in Chile, have been imported into England for breeding experiments on a farm.

Babylonian Legend Regarding Tower of Babel.

Explorer's Interpretation of Tablet Writing Gives Description of Famous Structure.

The Babylonians were rich in accounts of the first beginnings of things, and the religious man had a choice of beliefs without much danger of being regarded as heterodox, said Mr. T. G. Pinches, in an address in London recently on the latest discoveries in Babylonia.

Further information concerning these legends, as also of those concerning the Flood, have reached us from Philadelphia, said Mr. Pinches. In that city, at the University Museum, the opening of the cases containing the inscriptions discovered at Niffer (the Calneh of Genesis) had been resumed with gratifying results.

One if these documents, inscribed in three columns on each side, has, in the first column, instructions concerning the building of cities, which it seems, "were given by the gods to the first men."

Chaldean Noah.

The second column mentions some of the antediluvian cities of Babylon, which Enlil bestowed upon certain gods. There is a reference also to the city Larak, identified long ago with the Laranoba of Berosus, according to whom it was the seat of the prediluvian kings of the land — Amempsinus, who reigned 36,000 years, and Opartes, the father of Xisuthrus, whose reign lasted 28,800 years. Xisuthrus was the Babylonian Atra-hasis (the Chaldean Noah), the "exceedingly wise," the favorite of the gods, who saved mankind from destruction and attained to immortality without death.

Story of the Flood.

Other columns of the inscription, it appears refer to the Flood, of which Atra-hasis was the central figure, while Ziu-Giddu, "the long-lived," was king.

Babylonian stories of the Flood have already come to light, but the new text at Philadelphia, according to Dr. Poebel, the translator, is an entirely different account, the hero bearing a name different from that found in the other Deluge stories. It is probable, however, that all the versions of the Flood and the legends in general are much older than the time when they were written.

For those who prefer something of a less speculative character than the Creation and Flood legends, the third tablet was of greater importance. This portion, when complete, gave the history of the world from the time of the Flood to the reign of the king under whom the tablet was written. Not only are the names of the kings given, with the lengths of their reigns, but also in some cases there are historical details.

It seems not unlikely that this great Babylonian chronological document will prove to be a completion of that recognized by G. Smith, the Assyriologist, among the treasures of the British Museum in 1873. That scholar fully realized the value of this find, notwithstanding that its completeness fell far short of the new records just announced.

Tinge of Sadness.

Among the most recent discoveries are the sites of Drehem and Jokha, but of greater importance, because of Biblical reference, is the site of Erech, now known as Warka. The new inscriptions from Erech are mostly trade documents but in the matter of officials their names are not only important historically, but are likely to be so likewise chronologically, one of the inscriptions dating in the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar.

The history of the rediscovery of the description of the Tower of Babel at Babylon had an interest which was not without its sadness, as George Smith had in his hands this inscription, but died before being able to complete his examination of it. His description of this tablet was often quoted, but no one knew its whereabouts till last year it came to light in the hands of Rev. V. Schnell. This tablet is a beautifully written document, 7½ inches high by 4 inches wide.

Dimensions of Tower.

After descriptions of the temples and shrines, the writer turns to the Tower itself. This is the Tower's description:—

150 ft. square, 55 ft. high, of worked brick was the lowest stage.

130 ft. square, 30 ft. high, enamelled, the second.

100 ft. square, 10 feet high, recessed, the fourth.

70 ft. square, 10 ft. high, recessed, the fifth.

40 ft. long, a fraction under 35ft. wide, 25ft. high, variegated to the top, the seventh—the house Sahura.

And here we have in all its details, as nearly as we understand them the great Tower of Babel, the remains of which utilitarian Turkish contractors having removed from the face of the earth—all but the core of unbaked brick.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

BRIGHT AND GLADSTONE.

Why Men Often See Only One Side to the Question.

It is not always an easy matter for a man of strong convictions and positive views of character to see and respect another's point of view. W. E. Gladstone and John Bright were two of the strongest men that the last century produced, yet an anecdote from "The Life and Work of Frank Holl," by Mr. A. M. Reynolds, shows that these great men were quite unable—on one occasion, at least—to see more than one side of a question.

Soon after the break between Bright and Gladstone that followed a difference of opinion concerning the Government's foreign policy, the artist Holl was engaged to paint the portrait of Mr. Bright. He incidentally mentioned that he was about to paint a portrait of Mr. Gladstone also.

"It must be a very painful thing for you, Mr. Bright," he hazarded, "that after all these years you should have found cause to sever your friendly relations with Mr. Gladstone."

"Indeed it is," replied Bright, with a sigh. "To think that after we have trodden the same path together, shoulder to shoulder and hand in hand, we should be forced apart in the evening of our lives! And by what? By a bogey that is beckoning him away from duty and sense. Do you know, Mr. Holl, I seriously fear that my dear old friend's mind has become radically undermined!"

Later, when Holl was painting Gladstone, the subject of Bright's portrait came up.

"Ah!" said Gladstone, with much interest. "And how did you find him? It was a cruel blow that, after a lifetime of mutual esteem and of good work undertaken and carried through together, we should be divided on so clear a question! Tell me, Mr. Holl"—and here his mouth twitched, for he was evidently struggling with strong emotion — "tell me, did you notice anything in the manner of my old friend that would lead you to believe that his reason was becoming in any way unhinged?"

Where Wives Work.

Willesden, one of the suburbs of London, is a perfect paradise for a certain type of husband. There is no need for him to go out to work; his wife will see to that. All he needs do is stay at home and mind the baby. He has a job for life, and practically nothing to do.

This Gilbertian arrangement is due to the peculiar industrial conditions of Willesden, where there are many laundries and factories and female labor is much cheaper than male labor would be at the same class of work, the wages are good, considering that only five days a week are worked in the laundries, the women not being required on Mondays.

Consequently the women rule the industrial world of Willesden. The positions of man and wife are reversed. There is no need for the man to go to work. Not only would he be unsuitable for the job, but the labor and the wages would not suit him.

It was mentioned at the local police court a short time ago that a mother and her daughters who were at work allowed the father 5s. a week pocket money. In the end he tired of his job and revolted.

African Doctors.

Mr. Hylton-Simpson, whose anthropological investigations on the Congo are well known, has just returned from the Algerian hinterland, where he has for some years been studying the Bedouin and other tribes of the desert.

During his previous travels Mr. Hylton-Simpson had heard much of the wonderful skill of the tribal doctors, particularly in surgery. On this expedition he came into touch with a friendly Arab doctor, who helped him to a meeting with eight village surgeons. He has brought back for the learned societies a mass of valuable information and a large collection of native surgical instuments. These, consisting of fifty saws, lancets, and probes, are of the crudest description, but prove highly effective.

Armed Skeleton Unearthed.

Valuable discoveries of Roman and Saxon relics have been made at the excavations on the Roman site at Lowbury, on the Berkshire Downs, four miles west of Gordon-on-Thames. Under the guidance of the archaeological department of the University Reading a rectangular inclosure containing several barrows has been unearthed and seventy-two Roman coins, some as early as the second century, have been found.

The coins belong to the reigns of Trajan, Antonius and Marcus Aurelius. Other discoveries included a bronze signet ring, daggers and spearheads. The skeleton of a Saxon warder, fully armed, was found buried close at hand.

Curious Nesting Place.

A thrush has built its nest, laid three eggs, and in the natural course of events will, if undisturbed, rear its young on a scaffold pole at the secondary school for girls which is being erected in St. George's avenue, Northampton, Eng. The nest has been built at the junction of two poles. There are between fifty and sixty men working on the building, but the bird takes not the slightest notice of them. The men have taken a great interest in the bird, and will not have it disturbed.

The Prisoner Escaped.

Great excitement was caused in the city magistrate's court at Poona the other day. The court was crowded, while a theft case against a young Pathan was being heard, when the prisoner, whose police guards were paying more attention to the case than guarding him, escaped from the dock. His escape was not discovered until more than half an hour later, when a search was made. He to the

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Can Be Averted by Feeding the Starved Nerves With Rich, Red Blood.

Nourish your nerves—that is the only way you can overcome life's worst misery, nervous exhaustion. The fits of depression and irritation, the prostrating headaches, the weakness and trembling of the legs, the unsteady hand and the imperfect digestion that mark the victim of nerve weakness, must end in nervous breakdown if neglected.

Nourish your nerves by the natural process of filling your veins with rich, red, health-giving blood. Your nerves are crying out for pure blood and the mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is to make new, rich blood. This explains why these pills have proved successful in so many cases of nervous disease that did not yield to ordinary treatment. For example, Mr. W. H. Weldon, Annapolis, N.S., says: "In the strenuous life I have to follow the drain on my system was so great that my nerves became shattered, the blood impoverished and my whole system undermined. I tried a number of so-called remedies without deriving any benefit. Finally having read so much about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I decided to try them. The result was beyond my expectation. I regained my energy; the blood and nerves were rebuilt; I lost the sense of constant tiredness I had felt and was filled with new life and energy. I have since used the pills with beneficial results in my family and will always have a word of praise for them."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Has no greater Cooking Convenience than you can have on the Farm or in the Village

Cooking in a hot, stuffy kitchen on a sizzling hot wood or coal range in summer has probably made more women discontented with farm or village life than any one thing. She thinks of the stoves the city folk can cook on. We have a joyful sage for these women.

The "Detroit" Vapor Gasolene Stoves

Work just like a city gas stove, so you do not have to be without the convenience of a city gas stove any longer, no matter where you live. No storage or pressure tanks needed. You can put the stove in any part of the kitchen. Simply light the burners and the stove is ready to cook on. We invite you to look at them, and we will give you a little book showing the different styles and sizes.

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XIX.—continued.

"We are both of us trenching upon forbidden ground," she said. "It was perhaps my fault. You have not forgotten——"

"I have forgotten nothing?" he answered, enigmatically.

Anna hailed an omnibus. He looked at her reproachfully. The omnibus however was full. They fell into step again. More than ever a sense of confusion was upon Ennison.

"Last time I saw you," he reminded her, "you spoke, did you not, of obtaining some employment in London."

"Quite true," she answered briskly, "and thanks to you I have succeeded."

"Thanks to me," he repeated, puzzled. "I don't understand."

"No? But it is very simple. It was you who were so much amazed that I did not try—the music hall stage here."

"You must admit," he declared, "that to us—who had seen you—the thought of your trying anything else was amazing."

"At any rate," she declared, "your remark decided me. I have an engagement with a theatrical agent — I believe for the 'Unusual,'"

"You are going to sing in London?" he said quietly.

"Yes."

For a moment or two he did not speak. Glancing towards him she saw that a shadow had fallen upon his face.

"Tell me," she insisted, "why you look like that. You are afraid—that here in London—I shall not be a success. It is that, is it not?"

"No," he answered readily. "It is not that. The idea of your being a failure would never have occurred to me."

"Then why are you sorry that I am going to the 'Unusual'? I do not understand."

Their eyes met for a moment. His face was very serious.

"I am sorry," he said slowly. "Why, I do not know."

"I positively insist upon knowing," she declared cheerfully. "The sooner you tell me, the better."

"It is very hard to explain," he answered. "I think that it is only an idea. Only you seem to me since the time when I knew you in Paris to have changed—to have changed in some subtle manner which I find at times utterly bewildering. I find you an impenetrable enigma. I find it impossible to associate you with—my little friend of the Ambassador's. The things she said and did from—seem impossible. I had a sort of idea," he went on, "that you were starting life over again, and it seemed awfully plucky."

There was a long silence. Then Anna spoke more seriously than usual.

"I think," she said, "that I rather like what you have said. Don't be afraid to go on thinking it. Even though I am going to sing at the 'Unusual,' you may find that the 'Alcide,' whom you knew in Paris does not exist any more. At the same time," she added, in a suddenly altered tone, "it isn't anything whatever to do with you, is it?"

"Why not?" he answered. "You permitted me then to call you my friend. I do not intend to allow you to forget."

They passed a man who stared at them curiously. Ennison started and looked anxiously at Anna. She was quite unconcerned.

"Did you see who that was?" he asked in a low tone.

"I did not recognize him," Anna answered. "I supposed that he took off his hat to you."

"It was Cheveney!" he said slowly.

"Cheveney!" she repeated. "I do not know any one of that name."

He caught her wrist and turned her face towards him. Her eyes were wide open with amazement.

"Mr. Ennison!"

He released her.

"Good God!" he exclaimed. "Who are you—Annabel Pellissier or her ghost?"

"If it is a choice between the two," she answered, "I must be Annabel Pellissier, I am certainly no ghost."

"You have her face and figure," he muttered. "You have even her name. Yet you can look Cheveney in the face and declare that you do not know him. You have changed from the veriest butterfly to a woman — you wear different clothes, you have the air of another world. If you do not help me to read the riddle of yourself, Annabel, I think that very soon I shall be a candidate for the asylum."

She laughed heartily, and became as suddenly grave.

"So Mr. Cheveney was another Paris friend, was he?" she asked.

"Don't befool me any more," he answered almost roughly. "If any one should know—you should! He was your friend. We were only —les autres."

"That is quite untrue," she declared cheerfully. "I certainly knew him no better than you."

"Then he—and Paris—lied," Ennison answered.

"That," she answered, "is far easier to believe. You are too credulous."

Ennison had things to say, but he looked at her and held his tongue. They turned the last corner, and almost immediately a man who had been standing there turned and struck Ennison a violent blow on the cheek. Ennison reeled, and almost fell. Recovering himself quickly his instinct of self-defence was quickened by a recollection of Anna's presence. He

VITALITY REGAINED KIDNEYS CURED

Health Restored By "Fruit-a-tives"

HAGUENVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys and liver were not doing their work, and I became all run-down. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them.

Their effect, I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the results all that could have been expected.

My liver and kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever enjoyed, and I unhesitatingly give you this testimonial for publication if you wish"

B. A. KELLY.

In hundreds of letters received by the Fruit-a-tives Company, the same expression is used "Fruit-a-tives is the best kidney remedy in the world". At any rate, these tablets have proved the best to the hundreds of men and women who have been cured by taking them. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. struck out from the shoulder, and the man measured his length upon the pavement.

Anna sprang lightly away across the street. Breedon and Courtlaw who had been watching for her, met her at the door. She pointed across the road.

"Please go and see that—nothing happens," she pleaded.

"It is the first moment we have let him out of our sight," Breedon exclaimed, as he hastened across the street.

Hill sat up on the pavement and mopped the blood from his cheek. Ennison's signet ring had cut nearly to the bone.

"What the devil do you mean by coming for me like that?" Ennison exclaimed, glowering down upon him. "Serves you right if I'd cracked your skull."

Hill looked up at him, an unkempt, rough-looking object, with broken collar, tumbled hair, and the blood slowly dripping from his face.

"What do you mean, hanging round with my wife?" he answered fiercely.

Ennison looked down on him in disgust.

"You silly fool," he said. "I know nothing about your wife. The young lady I was with is not married at all. Why don't you make sure before you rush out like that upon a stranger?"

"You were with my wife," Hill repeated sullenly. "I suppose you're like the rest of them. Call her Miss Pellissier, eh? I tell you she's my wife, and I've got the certificate in my pocket."

"I don't know who you are," Ennison said quietly, "but you are a thundering liar."

Hill staggered to his feet and drew a folded paper from his pocket.

"Marriage certificates don't tell lies, at any rate," he said. "Just look that through, will you."

Ennison took the document, tore it half in two without looking at it, and flung it back in Hill's face. Then he turned on his heel and walked off.

CHAPTER XX.

The Marksmanship of Montague Hill.

"By the bye," his neighbor asked him languidly, "who is our hostess?"

"Usually known, I believe, as Lady Ferringhall," Ennison answered, "unless I have mixed up my engagement list and come to the wrong house."

"How dull you are," the lady remarked. "Of course I mean, who was she?"

"I believe that her name was Pellissier," Ennison answered.

"Pellissier," she repeated thoughtfully. "There were some Hampshire Pellissiers."

"She is one of them," Ennison said.

"Dear me! I wonder where Sir John picked her up."

"In Paris, I think," Ennison answered. "Only married a few months ago and lived out at Hampstead."

"Heavens!" the lady exclaimed. "I heard they came from somewhere outrageous."

"Hampstead didn't suit Lady Ferringhall," Ennison remarked. "They have just taken this house from Lady Cellender."

"And what are you doing here?" the lady asked. "Politics!" Ennison answered grimly. "And you?"

"Same thing. Besides, my husband has shares in Sir John's company. Do you know I am beginning to believe that we only exist nowadays by the tolerance of these millionaire tradesmen. Our land brings us in nothing. We have to get them to let us in for the profits of their business, and in return we ask them to—dinner. By-the-bye, have you seen this new woman at the Empire?" What is it they call her—Alcide?"

"Yes, I have seen her," Ennison answered.

"Everyone raves about her," Lady Angela continued. "For my part I can see no difference in any of these French girls who come over here with their demure manner and atrocious songs."

"Alcide's songs are not atrocious," Ennison remarked.

Lady Angela shrugged her shoulders.

"It is unimportant," she said. "Nobody understands them of course, but we all look as though we did. Something about this woman rather reminds me of our hostess."

Ennison thought so too half an hour later, when having cut out from one of the bridge tables he settled down for a chat with Annabel. Every now and then something familiar in her tone, the poise of her head, the play of her eyes startled him. Then he remembered that she was Anna's sister.

He lowered his voice a little and leaned over towards her.

"By-the-bye, Lady Ferringhall," he said, "do you know that I am a very great admirer of your sister's? I wonder if she has ever spoken to you of me."

The change in Lady Ferringhall's manner was subtle but unmistakable. She answered him almost coldly.

"I see nothing of my sister," she said. "In Paris our lives were far apart, and we had seldom the same friends. I have heard of you from my husband. You are somebody's secretary, are you not?"

It was plain that the subject was distasteful to her, but Ennison, although famous in a small way for his social tact, did not at once discard it.

"You have not seen your sister lately," he remarked. "I believe that you would find her in some respects curiously altered. I have never in my life been so much puzzled by any one as by your sister. Something has changed her tremendously."

Annabel looked at him curiously.

"Do you mean in looks?" she asked.

"Not only that," he answered. "In Paris your sister appeared to me to be a charming student of frivolity. Here she seems to have developed into a brilliant woman with more character and steadfastness than I should ever have given her credit for. Her features are the same, yet the change has written its mark into her face. Do you know, Lady Ferringhall, I am proud that your sister permits me to call myself her friend."

"And in Paris——"

"In Paris," he interrupted, "she was a very delightful companion, but beyond that—one did not take her seriously. I am not boring you, am I?"

She raised her eyes to his and smiled into his face.

"You are not boring me," she said, "but I would rather talk of something else. I suppose you will think me very unsisterly and cold-hearted, but there are circumstances in connexion with my sister's latest exploit which are intensely irritating both to my husband and to myself."

He recognized the force, almost the passion, which trembled in her tone, and he at once abandoned the subject. He remained talking with her however. It was easy for him to see that she desired to be agreeable to him. They talked lightly but confidentially until Sir John approached them with a slight frown on his face.

"Mr. Ennison," he said, "it is for you to cut in at Lady Angela's table. Anna, do you not see that the Countess is sitting alone?"

She rose, and flashed a quick smile upon Ennison behind her husband's back.

"You must come and see me some afternoon," she said to him.

He murmured his delight, and joined the bridge party, where he played with less than his accustomed skill. On his way home he was still thoughtful. He turned in at the club. They were talking of "Alcide," as they often did in those days.

"Heard the latest sensation, Ennison?" he was asked, on his entrance into the smoke room.

"I have heard nothing," Ennison answered. "I have been to a political dinner, and I am weary. Besides, I have lost all my money at bridge. Will some one stand me a whiskey and soda?"

Some one touched the bell. The man who had spoken to him first continued.

"You know the new woman at the Empire—'Alcide.' Sings musical little French songs—lots of go in a very smart way——"

"Yes, yes," Ennison interrupted. "What about her?"

"Shot at to-night on the stage. Man said he was her husband. The audience got hold of him and mauled him badly. They had to take him to the hospital."

The lighted match which Ennison was holding to his cigarette fell from his fingers unheeded to the ground.

"Ann—Alcide," he exclaimed. "Was she hurt?"

"Not a scrap. Bullet grazed her shoulder. She came back and finished her song, and the audience nearly brought the house down. If it hadn't been such a near squeak for her one would have thought it was a plant."

Ennison struck another match, lit his cigarette, and relapsed into an easy chair. They talked still of 'Alcide.'

"She has improved her style," one declared. "Certainly her voice is far more musical."

Another differed.

"She has lost something," he declared, "something which brought the men in crowds around the stage at the 'Ambassador's.' I don't know what you'd call it—a sort of witchery, almost suggestiveness. She sings better perhaps. But I don't think she lays hold of one so."

"I will tell you what there is about her which is so fetching," Drummond, who was lounging by, declared. "She contrives somehow to strike the personal note in an amazing manner. You are [illegible] promenade, you lean over the back, you are almost out of sight. Yet you catch her eye—you can't seem to escape from it. You feel that that smile is for you, the words are for you, the whole song is for you. Naturally you shout yourself hoarse when she has finished, and feel jolly pleased with yourself."

"And if you are a millionaire like Drummond," some one remarked, "you send round a note and ask her to come out to supper."

"In the present case," Drummond remarked, glancing across the room, "Cheveney strolled up, a pipe in his mouth.

"Cheveney wouldn't have anything to say about it, as it happens," he remarked, a little grimly. "Ungracious little beast, I call her. I don't mind telling you chaps that except on the stage I haven't set eyes on her this side of the water. I've called a half dozen times at her flat, and she won't see me. Rank ingratitude, I call it."

There was a shout of laughter. Drummond patted him on the shoulder.

"Never mind, old chap," he declared. "Let's hope your successor is worthy of you."

"You fellows," Ennison said quietly, "are getting a little wild. I have known Miss Pellissier as long as any of you perhaps, and I have seen something of her since her arrival in London. I consider her a very charming young woman—and I won't hear a word about Paris, for there are things I don't understand about that, but I will stake my word upon it that to-day Miss Pellissier is entitled not only to our admiration, but to our respect. I firmly believe that she is as straight as a die."

How's . . . Business?

Advertising, backed up by the right spirit, the right goods and the right service, can rescue a sinking business and will make a prosperous business more masterful in its own community.

When John Wanamaker, the Prince of Merchants, began business, he resolved to force matters. He was not content to WAIT to be found out—he DETERMINED TO BE found out. In short, he advertised. He threw on his business, small as it was, the light of publicity, and the public of Philadelphia entered the shop on which the light shone.

In this community the public is entering those shops on which the light of advertising is falling.

White and Campbell

Are in Field for Orangeville Mayoralty.

Candidates Spoke at Public Meeting in Opera House Tuesday Night.

Nominations for Mayor and Reeve of Orangeville took place in the Opera House at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning. The two offices became vacant through the resignations of Mayor Island upon his appointment to the office of Crown Attorney and of Reeve White who stepped out in order to contest the Mayoralty. There was a very slim attendance during the nomination proceedings which lasted from 10 until 11 o'clock. The only candidates nominated for Mayor were J. J. White and Dr. G. H. Campbell. Both gentlemen are standing. Ex-Reeve W. Fairbairn and Councillors A. B. Holmes and Thos. Henderson were nominated for the reeveship. All have withdrawn except Mr. Fairbairn, who gets the position by acclamation.

A public meeting was held in the Opera House at 8 o'clock Tuesday night for the purpose of giving the nominees an opportunity to express their views. Mr. A. A. Hughson presided and a goodly number of ratepayers turned out to hear the speakers. The meeting was very orderly and the candidates received a quiet and attentive hearing.

J. J. White, who was the first speaker, gave as his reason for contesting the mayoralty the fact that he was the oldest member of the Council in point of service and therefore most entitled to the honor of filling the Mayor's chair. He was also reeve of the town and as such was next in line for the higher office. Mr. White reviewed his municipal career under Mayor Lindsey in 1893, under Mayor Bailey in 1894 and '95, when the present waterworks system was constructed, under Mayor Endacott in 1896 and under Mayor Stevenson in 1897-98, when the frontage system of constructing and paying for cement sidewalks was introduced. He was elected again in 1913 and with other members of the Council was instrumental in securing the Dods knitting factory for the town. Altogether he had given the town almost eight years of municipal service and felt that his record entitled him to a term in the Mayor's chair. Mr. White praised the retired farmers of the town for their hearty support of the Dods by-law and criticised the oft heard statement that retired farmers will not support any measure for the improvement of the town if it is going to add a little to their taxes. The Dods factory he pointed out, was bigger and better than the town had bargained for. Mr. White discussed the House of Refuge question at some length, taking the position that the question would never have been raised in the County Council had it not been for his opponent, Dr. Campbell, and some of his friends. Personally he favored a plebiscite on two propositions, namely, the erection of an addition to the present county buildings at a cost not exceeding $7,000 or the purchase of a farm of 100 acres or less and the construction of an independent House of Refuge at a cost not exceeding $25,000. Discussing the charge that he had used earth removed from the streets to improve his own property in the North Ward, Mr. White pointed out that he had only done this after he had furnished earth to everyone else who wanted it. By using material that was not needed elsewhere he had converted an unsightly piece of ground into a desirable building property on which he hoped to erect some houses that would contribute their share in taxes to the revenue of the town. Mr. White added that he bought the property when the town could not sell it to anyone else even for the $85 back taxes that had accumulated. The speaker criticized Dr. Campbell for advocating the purchase of Idylwyld Park, taking the ground that small taxpayers should not be obliged to pay for pleasure grounds. He was in favor of buying the grounds by private subscription and stood prepared to subscribe for this purpose at any time. Mr. White discussed the improvement of the Town Hall and pointed with some pride to the improvements which his committee (Roads and Bridges) had made to the streets of the town. This work, he said, had all been done at the small cost of $308.27. As the oldest member of the Council he felt that he had reason to ask and expect hearty support in the present contest. If he was elected he would do his duty fearlessly and honestly and was prepared to give unsparingly of his time to the service of the town.

Mr. J. L. Island, late Mayor of the town, spoke briefly and thanked the people for their support and co-operation during his term in office. When he took office the streets and waterworks system were both in indifferent condition. Important improvements had been made largely through the energy of Mr. White. In the spring of 1913 the Council had nearly fifty complaints from citizens whose cellars had been flooded. All this had been remedied by grading the streets and opening up ditches. Mr. Island discussed the Dodds and other factory propositions and urged further development of the town along industrial lines. He had enjoyed his municipal work and was sorry that his appointment to the position of Crown Attorney had obliged him to step down and out before the completion of his term.

Dr. Campbell deprecated the fact that so few citizens took an active interest in municipal affairs. While Orangeville was in a fine agricultural district and enjoyed a large trade, he was satisfied that its future growth depended upon industrial development. The speaker discussed factory negotiations at some length and replied to Mr. White's charge that the Campbells opposed the Dods by-law, by stating that as a private citizen he had worked and voted for the by-law, but if he had been a member of the Council he would have opposed submitting the by-law to the people without certain alterations in the agreement. He thought the clauses relating to sewage disposal and the granting of free water to Mr. Dods did not protect the town as they should. Dr. Campbell told his audience that he was "the daddy of the electric pump" and did not care who knew it. The pump gave the town the best system of fire protection that it had ever enjoyed. He was in favor of more organization and system in the work of the Council. At the present time the standing committees appeared to have unlimited spending power. In his opinion every spending committee should get to work in the spring, map out its programme, estimate the cost of the work it contemplated doing and submit its plans to the council for amendment or approval. After an exhaustive review of the House of Refuge question, the speaker took up the matter of improved roads and advocated a policy of permanent improvement of the leading roads. He gave Mr. White credit for doing something to improve the roads, but criticised him for putting though the by-law which prohibits citizens from dumping ashes on the back streets. Coal ashes made excellent road material for back streets and lanes. As to Idylwyld Park, Dr. Campbell believed that it should be preserved as an athletic grounds. He was prepared to head a subscription list to raise money to buy the grounds, but thought if enough could not be raised in this way the town should contribute the balance and take charge of the grounds. Steps should be taken to provide a site for the Armoury that the Government had announced its willingness to build. The underwriters did not recognize an elevated tank as part of an adequate fire protection system. The Orangeville tank was at the wrong end of the system. Dr. Campbell advocated the extension of the fire hall reservoir south to the lane north of the bowling green. Instead of covering the reservoir with reinforced concrete, he would favor the erection of a one-story building, which could be used as a coal storage house. The town could then buy its coal by the car load and in that way get it considerably cheaper. Dr. Campbell found fault with last year's Council for dumping the debenture money which the people voted for the Town Hall and Public School improvements into current account and treating it as current revenue. He was a candidate because he felt he was entitled to the mayoralty and because it had been represented to him that if he entered the field he would probably be unopposed and there would be no break in the organization and work of the Council.

Walter Fairbairn made a hot attack on Mr. White whom he accused of misrepresentation in the reeveship campaign at last New Year. He objected to the unfairness of Mr. White's election circular, in which it was shown that his bill for expenses in connection with a trip to Toronto over the House of Refuge matter was larger than that of Reeve Falconer, of Shelburne, who had a greater distance to travel. There was a hint in the circular that he had been guilty of graft. His hands were clean of graft. His bill was larger than Mr. Falconer's because he had been appointed on a sub-committee to accompany Dr. McKenzie for the purpose of interviewing Dr. Bruce Smith respecting the plans which Dr. McKenzie had been engaged to prepare. Dr. Smith happened to be called out of the city and the Committee was obliged to remain over night and interview him the following day. Mr. Fairbairn blamed Mr. White for the $100 cut in the County grant to the Hospital and suggested that the County Council had declined to guarantee the Dods factory debentures because Mr. White was in wrong with the Councillors.

Thos. Henderson discussed town finances and criticised the practice Committees had fallen into of spending money without the sanction or authority of the Council. The fire protection system was in satisfactory shape. It would be a good idea to increase the water reserve, but he did not favor doing so by enlarging the reservoir under the fire hall. This would be a mistake as it would mean that there would be a large body of stagnant water which must necessarily impair the quality of the water used for domestic purposes.

Councillor A. B. Holmes was called on to speak, but was not in the hall.

DEATH OF MRS. JAMES LYONS.

After talking with neighbors and apparently in the best of health on Monday evening of last week, Mrs. James Lyons, of Ontario street, was found dead at her home on Tuesday morning. The old lady lived alone and although her neighbors kept constantly in touch with her, the physical disability which caused her death came at a time when no one was with her. Her body was discovered at an early hour Tuesday morning lying at the south side of her home beside some potted plants. Mrs. Lyons had apparently been taking her plants into the house because of the cool evening and was seized with apoplexy from which she soon expired, death having taken place some hours before the body was discovered. Mrs. Lyons, whose maiden name was Catharine Brett, had reached the seventy-first year of her age and had for many years been a resident of Alliston and district. She was born in Sligo, Ireland, and came to Canada in 1849, settling in Mono township. In 1865 she married Mr. Lyons, who predeceased her six years ago. She had resided in Alliston for twenty-two years and was one of the most highly esteemed old ladies in town. She was a member of the Methodist church and during her life had exemplified all the virtues of true christianity. A brother, John Brett, living in Alberta, survives; also one sister, Mrs. Anderson, in British Columbia, and an adopted daughter, Mrs. W. J. Ireland, of Tottenham. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon to the Union Cemetery, Rev. G. N. Grey conducting the service. The pall bearers were six nephews of deceased.—Alliston Herald.

VERY GOOD.

Her Father—Want my daughter, sir? Who are your ancestors?

Her Lover—I don't know. I've never had time to look them up.

Her Father—Take her. You'll be able to support her all right.

Incomplete Returns Give Government Majority of 57.

Hon. J. O. Reaume is Only Minister Who Was Defeated.

Both Parties Make Gains and Suffer Losses—Will be About Thirty New Members in House

TORONTO, June 30. — After a hard contest, in which the province evinced more enthusiasm on both sides than for many years, the voters of Ontario returned Sir James Whitney to power with a majority of fifty-seven seats. The latest returns indicate that the standing in the new House will be as follows:—

Conservatives	83
Liberals	26
Labor	1
Independent (Evanturel)	1
Total	111

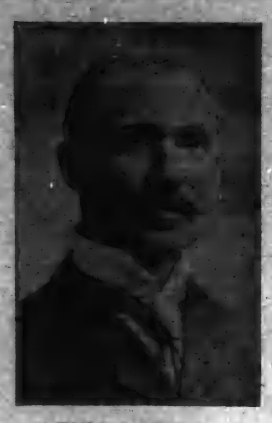
The standing in the last Legislature was:—

Conservative	85
Liberal	19
Labor	1
Vacant (Prescott)	1
Total	106

One Minister of the Crown was defeated in the person of Hon. J. O. Reaume, Minister of Public Works, who lost the convention nomination in the new riding of Windsor and ran as an Independent Conservative. The straight line candidate, O. E. Fleming, was defeated and the seat went to Rev. J. C. Tolmie.

All the other Ministers were re-elected with increased majorities.

The Liberal party shows a net gain of five seats in the old constituencies, and won three out of seven of the new constituencies.



The actual Conservative gains are: South Bruce, Haldimand, East Lambton, South Ontario, and North Wentworth—5.

The Liberal gains are: North Brant, South Brant, North Essex, South Essex, North Middlesex, East Ottawa, West Ottawa, West Peterboro, Prince Edward, and South Wellington—10.

The new constituencies which went Conservative are: Niagara Falls, Riverdale (Toronto), Parkdale (Toronto), and South Victoria.

The new constituencies which went Liberal are: Cochrane, Lincoln and Windsor.

One of the most surprising events of the election was the return by the electors of Prescott of Gustave Evanturel, the discredited Liberal who was read out of the party after the sensational episode of last session and who resigned his seat in the House.

HON J. O. REAUME
The Only Minister Who Went Down to Defeat.

For all the number of independent candidates, temperance, labor, socialist, and one anti-temperance, who appeared on nomination day, only two outside of party lines were returned, Evanturel and Allan Studholme (Lab., E. Hamilton)

There will be few changes of importance in the personnel of the House. Four of Mr. Rowell's followers in the last Legislature were defeated at the polls, namely: Dr. McQueen (North Wentworth), Messrs. McCormick (East Lambton), Anderson (North Huron), Sinclair (South Ontario). Mr. C. Kohler (Haldimand) did not go up for re-election.

The changes on the Ministerial side were much more extensive. Not a few prominent Conservatives retired voluntarily, and members like Messrs. McNaught (North Toronto), Pock (West Peterboro), Norman (Prince Edward), Gains (Parry Sound), and Ebbs (South Lanark), were defeated by the nominating conventions. Among those rejected at the polls yesterday were: Hon. J. O. Reaume, Minister of Public Works; Messrs. Anderson, South Essex; Weatherock, North Brant; Brewster, South Brant; Champagne and Ellis, Ottawa; and Schofield, South Wellington.

The elected candidates, with their approximate majorities are as follows:—

LEADER IS GRATIFIED.

Mr. Rowell Regrets, However, That Gains Were Not Greater.

WOODSTOCK, June 30.—Mr. N. W. Rowell received the results of the election at the Woodstock Young Liberal Club rooms, and, interviewed later in the evening, made the following statement:

"It is gratifying to find that, notwithstanding the whole weight of the Government forces, aided by the organised liquor interests, we have improved our position in the House. For the sake of the policy for which we were fighting I regret that our gains were not numerous. We were greatly handicapped by the short period we had to prepare for the election. It took up all our time to get candidates in the field.

"I desire to thank the electors of the province who gave us their support, and particularly the large body of volunteer workers who have freely given of their time in this contest. We have brought into the political affairs of the province a new spirit of public service, and hundreds of men who have not hitherto taken an active interest in political affairs will undoubtedly do so in the future. This is the guarantee of the ultimate success.

"Of the policy of misrepresentation persistently and systematically pursued in order to mislead the electors as to our position and policy, I shall not speak at present."

Many Are Parentless.

OTTAWA, June 30.—According to an official report to the Labor Department from its special agent, J. D. McNiven, who investigated the Hillcrest disaster, 86 married men and four widowers, leaving children, lost their lives. The fatherless children number 189.

POLL WAS RECORD ONE

Many Ridings Report Heaviest Vote in Their History.

Sir Adam Beck Secures Biggest Majority In His Career, as Does Col. Hendrie In Hamilton—Gustave Evanturel Surprises Province—Supporter of Carter In Guelph Drops Dead From Excitement.

TORONTO, June 30. — The vigor with which the election was fought throughout Ontario yesterday is attested by the fact that the vote was perhaps the heaviest ever polled in the province. From fragmentary reports now at hand records for high percentage of votes cast were made in nearly every riding.

Gustav Evanturel, who appealed from the condemnation of the Legislature to his constituents, comes back. He headed the poll in Prescott, defeating both Liberal and Conservative candidates. Mr. Evanturel's re-election came as a big surprise. He returns to the Legislature as an Independent.

In Toronto the poll was exceptionally large and the Tory metropolis repeated what it has done for years—returned a complete Conservative slate. The new faces in the Legislature from Toronto will be Wm. H. Price (Parkdale), Joseph Russell (ex-M. P.) (Riverdale), Mark Irish (Toronto, N.E.), and Thomas Hook (Toronto, S.E.). All, both new and old members, had ample majorities.

Sir Adam Beck Breaks Record.

LONDON, Ont., June 30. — Sir Adam Beck was accorded a record majority by the electors of London yesterday, defeating Dr. W. J. Stevenson, Liberal, by 1,496 votes. Sir Adam received 4,353 votes, Dr. Stevenson 2,857, and John D. Jacobs, Labor candidate, the third man in the contest, 416. The Minister of Power was given an acclamation in 1911, while in 1908 his majority over J. M. McEvoy, K.C., Liberal, was 1,404. The total number of votes polled yesterday was 7,626. There were 12,050 names on the voters' lists.

Carter Supporter Drops Dead.

GUELPH, June 30. — The Liberal temperance workers of this city held a big celebration last night in honor of the election of Sam Carter. The majority was somewhere in the neighborhood of one hundred, probably a little less, which was somewhat of a surprise even to his most confident supporters.

John Black, an aged retired farmer, of Extra street, this city, could not stand the excitement consequent upon the result of the elections. He was in Samuel Carter's committee rooms when it was announced that Mr. Carter was elected, and without a moment's warning he fell over on the floor and died. Death was due to heart failure.

Kingston Swept By Ross.

KINGSTON, June 30. — Dr. A. E. Ross (Con.) defeated Ald. T. F. Harrison (Lib.) in yesterday's contest by a majority of 1,466. The majority was a great surprise to both sides. All day long it was believed Dr. Ross would have a majority of about 600, but not one of the supporters of Dr. Ross dreamed of such a majority. Ross polled a majority in every subdivision in the city and at the village of Portsmouth as well.

Hamilton Backs Favorites.

HAMILTON, June 30. — In the West riding, Col. Hendrie polled the biggest vote of his career, receiving a majority of 1,628 over Ald. Dr. Davey, the Independent Liberal and Temperance candidate, never seemed dangerous.

In East Hamilton the figures for Allan Studholme were 4,472 while 3,482 votes were polled for Controller Thomas W. Jutten, the Conservative candidate, which gives the Labor candidate a majority of 990, nearly 300 more than he had in the last election.

Close In North Oxford.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., June 30.—N. W. Rowell was yesterday re-elected in North Oxford, but his majority of 560 received in 1911 was reduced to 115. While the city gave R. E. Butler (Con.) a majority, the country went strong for Rowell and the large city majority was overcome, giving the Liberal leader a lead in the riding.

Proudfoot Returned.

GODERICH, June 30.—Centre Huron yesterday returned Wm. Proudfoot with a majority of 316, an increase of 100 over his last election, and had it not been for very inclement weather, which retarded the country vote, it is estimated his majority would have been at least 400. The urban vote was the largest polled for many years.

"A GLORIOUS VICTORY."

So Says Sir James Whitney When Asked For a Statement.

TORONTO, June 30. — "'Twas a glorious victory—just what I expected," was the brief comment of Sir James Whitney last night when asked for a statement for the press.

The Prime Minister left his office early in the afternoon and received the election results at his home by telephone. He followed the returns from each constituency with keen interest and occasional expressions of satisfaction, but manifested no concern at any time as to the outcome During the latter part of the evening, when most of the returns were in, Sir James was literally deluged by telegrams of congratulation.

Beyond the brief expression quoted, however, Sir James declined to make any pronouncement last night. He retired early and will probably make a more extended statement today.

Walking into the waiting-room at Bonaventure Station at Montreal an unknown man shot himself in the head. Before dropping dead he replaced the weapon in his suitcase.

POLICEMEN ON STRIKE.

Once a Quarter of a Million Citizens Offered Themselves as Constables.

Short of a wholesale mutiny in our standing army—a quite unthinkable thing—it is difficult to imagine any more serious situation than that which would be created by a general strike amongst policemen, says a London paper.

Yet, such a thing, or something very like it at all events, has happened in the past; may happen in the future.

The trade union, formed only so recently as last October amongst the Metropolitan Police, is gathering strength daily, and its leaders openly proclaim their intention of starting a strike as soon as they are strong enough.

London may well be uneasy at the prospect, for past experience has shown what a police strike may mean.

When, for example, some 200 constables refused to go on duty at Bow Street police station one night in July, 1890, the rougher elements of the population in the slum areas immediately adjoining got to know about it almost immediately, and rioting broke out within an hour. It was suppressed by the Foot Guards, who were hastily summoned, but not before considerable damage had been done.

In September, 1882, however, following similar strikes at Cork, Limerick, and elsewhere in Ireland, the Dublin police came out in a body early one morning, and the city, already seething with political excitement and unrest, was left absolutely unguarded. Instantly the shopkeepers everywhere put up their shutters, the jarveys stabled their horses, the trams ceased running.

Nor were the fears that these measures indicated groundless. In a little while the streets were filled with howling mobs, bent upon mischief. But the Government promptly took a hand in the game, and showed, too, that it meant business.

Battalion after battalion of infantry, each man carrying in his pouch forty rounds of ball ammunition, was lined along the principal streets, and later on, when dusk fell, violence was necessarily met by violence, the soldiers charging the rioters, with fixed bayonets. So was the city saved.

Next day thousands of angry citizens came forward to enroll themselves as special constables, and shortly afterwards the strike collapsed. The police authorities, however, took a stern view of what had happened, and of all the many hundreds who refused duty at the beginning, only a paltry 208 were reinstated.

A somewhat similar result attended a yet earlier strike of the Metropolitan Police in October, 1872. That is to say, numbers of the strikers were prosecuted under the Police Acts, and fined, while 109 constables were summarily dismissed, and sixty-five were reduced in rank.

It is difficult, indeed, to see how any police strike can end otherwise than in failure, no matter how great inconvenience, and even danger, it may inflict upon the community for the time being.

And for this very good reason; that experience has shown that private citizens are always ready to come forward and act as special constables on an emergency. It only remains, then, to swear them in, and serve out to them truncheons and armlets, and they are able to fulfil at once, and fairly efficiently, practically all the duties that fall to the lot of the ordinary uniformed policeman.

Argentina is today the greatest source of Europe's food supply.

Dufferins Hold Toronto Maitlands Down to a Tie.

The best lacrosse match played in Orangeville for many years was witnessed on Idylwyld Park yesterday afternoon when the Dufferins crossed sticks with the Toronto Maitlands. The visiters came here flushed with their victory over the New York Crescents and figured that they would have an easy win in Orangeville. Instead of that they were behind for more than three-quarters of the game and it was within a few minutes of the finish when they managed to pull even. The game was fast, clean and exciting. The locals surprised the spectators with their speed and skill. They demonstrated that Orangeville has a really good lacrosse team this year. All that is needed is experience and this the boys are rapidly acquiring in the exhibition games they are playing. Every man on the team did well. Keith and Stevenson are a pair of speedy, hard-working fielders and kept the home well fed. On the home end Ewing and Burnside were very effective. Patterson's shooting was deadly and he was responsible for several goals. Morrison, Densmore, Dedrick and Scott made a strong, heady defence and kept the Maitlands home closely checked. Booth in goal was a tower of strength to the team. The Maitlands have a fast team. The players know all the fine points of the game and in this respect had the better of the locals. Mr. A. A. Smith made a satisfactory referee. The match attracted a large crowd. The players :—

Maitlands—Goal, Thornton ; point, Newell ; coverpoint, Ross ; 1st defence, O'Rouke ; 2nd defence, Johnston ; centre, Stevenson ; 1st home, Sanderson ; 2nd home, Wright ; outside home, Chapman ; inside home, Semple.

Dufferins—Goal, Booth ; point, Morrison ; coverpoint, Densmore ; 1st defence, Dedrick ; 2nd defence, Scott; centre, Stevenson ; 1st home, Keith ; 2nd home, Ewing ; outside home, Patterson ; inside home, Burnside.

Jos. Corneilius Dead

Mr. Jos. H. Corneilius, an old and widely known resident of this town, died at Caldwell, Ont., on Monday at the age of 74 years. The remains were brought to Orangeville for interment, the funeral taking place from the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. James Hunter, Elizabeth St., to the Forest Lawn cemetery at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Deceased was a prominent Orangeman having been identified with Purple Valley L.O.L. No. 84 for many years. He was buried with Orange honors. There was a large attendance of the brethren at the funeral.

Mrs. Sobina South.

Mrs. Sobina South, an old and much respected resident of this town, passed away at her home on First St., about eight o'clock on Monday night. Deceased, who had reached the advanced age of 84 years and 6 months, was the widow of the late George South, who in his day was a well-known resident of Mono. Mr. and Mrs. South, who were married about 65 years ago, lived on lot 12, Centre Road, Mono, for many years. Mrs. South had made her home with her son, Wesley, in Orangeville since the death of her husband 12 years ago. She was a member of the Anglican Church and a kind-hearted woman who was always ready to do a good turn. She is survived by six sons and one daughter, namely, William, of Minneapolis, Robert, Ira and Henry, of Mono, Wesley, of Orangeville, and Mrs. H. Danby, of Toronto. The funeral was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Thursday afternoon.

Lawn Social.

A Lawn Social will be held on Mr. Alex. Dick's grounds in Alton on Wednesday evening, July 8th, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of Alton Presbyterian Church. A good programme of music, addresses, etc. will be provided by Miss McGhie, of Toronto, violinist, Mr. Clarkson, of Alton, and other local talent, the Alton orchestra, the resident ministers and other speakers. Supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock. Refreshment booth. Admission 25c and 15c. Everybody is cordially invited to come.

St. Mark's Garden Party

The annual garden party held in the orchard of Mr. Thos. Dawson, West Broadway, was successful in every way. In spite of the threatening appearance of the weather a large crowd gathered to enjoy the good things provided by the ladies of the congregation, and did ample justice to the splendid supper and programme provided. The feature of the programme was the Toronto entertainer, Mr. Le Roy Kenney who had an excellent repertoire, which was greatly appreciated. St. Mark's orchestra supplied the music, and the choir, with Miss Bernice Leighton, provided other varied items. Violin solos were given by Miss Clara Hulse and Mr. Willie Haslam, and a cornet solo by Mr. Russell Morrow. The "Goodbye Mary" girls received much applause. Short addresses were given by Messrs. C. R. McKeown, J. J. White, Dr. Campbell, Revs. G. W. Robinson, A. E. de St. Dalmas and Mr. Brown of the Clinton Auto Truck Co. J. L. Island, K. C., Crown Attorney, occupied the chair. The proceeds amounted to over $210.

For selling liquor without a license at Port Severn, where Government work is going on, John Ladue of that place was fined $100 and costs.

To the Electors of the Town of Orangeville :

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN :—

I am offering myself as a candidate for the office of Mayor recently made vacant through the resignation of Mr. Island. I am doing so at the request of a number of ratepayers, who felt that the experience I have gained while serving in both the town and county councils in recent years might be of considerable use to the town at this particular time. It was pointed out to me that if I offered myself to fill out the balance of the year it should be possible to avoid an election and the organization and work of the council would therefore be uninterrupted.

When asking for your support I feel that I may point with satisfaction to my past record as one of your representatives. I have sought at all times to serve the interests of the town and county and not my own and have never pushed myself forward for the sake of position. I have given up a great deal of my time to the town and feel that I should secure some consideration at your hands.

If elected I promise to fulfil at all times the duties of the office to the best of my ability and with justice to all.

Sincerely yours,

G. H. CAMPBELL

HOME FROM CAMP.

Orangeville Soldiers Had an Excellent Outing at Niagara.

Members of Local Company Stood Camp Life Well.

The Orangeville Company of the 36th Regiment arrived home from the Niagara Camp on Friday afternoon by special train. The boys report one of the most pleasant outings in years. All of the members of the company had a delightful time. On the whole the drill and camp routine did not prove particularly arduous, although there were times when it bordered on the strenuous. The time during the last week in camp was partly taken up with shooting for efficiency pay, which all members of the local company secured. On Tuesday a review of all the troops took place. The inspection was made by Major General Lessard, the Camp Commandant. In the evening a military tattoo was held, in which all the bands in camp took part. Fireworks added to the brilliancy of the event.

Wednesday morning all the forces entrained for Stamford, where tactical manoeuvres were held lasting until Thursday. The long march from Stamford to Thorold was very trying on the boys, but they all stood the ordeal bravely. The troops bivouaced at Thorold and early morning found the 36th, the advance guard, in the enemy's territory. The country in that neighborhood is ideal for military manoeuvres. The sham fight lasted all morning and proved rather severe on a few of the boys, on account of the excessive heat. With two exceptions, however, the Orangeville boys stood it throughout. After the sham fight was declared over the troops marched to St. Catharines and there entrained for Camp via Niagara Falls.

The Minister of Militia was an interested spectator at all the manoeuvres. The troops marched past the Minister on their way to St. Catharines. Capt. (Rev.) A. L. Burch, the Chaplain of the Regiment, was in camp again this year and on Sunday last delivered a very impressive sermon to the soldiery. The members of "H" Company are all very enthusiastic over their camp experience and are unanimous in stating their willingness to go out again next year.

The officers of the 36th entertained their lady friends at Niagara Camp on Review Day. The ladies were met at the boat and driven to the officers' mess and afterwards to the Review on the Commons. A very dainty dinner was served at 7 p.m., at which the regimental band furnished excellent music. Among the ladies present were Mrs. G. F. Gabriel, Shelburne, Miss Lowrie Reid and Miss Ruth McGuire, Orangeville, Miss Jessie Clarke, the Misses Booth, Mrs. Kempthorne, Mrs. McCausland, Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Hamilton, of Toronto.

Hospital Notes

A deputation from the Daughters of the Empire waited on the County Council during the recent session following a letter asking for an increase in the grant to Lord Dufferin Hospital, which this year was $100 less than in 1913. The deputation did not meet with the success expected. This was a disappointment to the ladies as they have undertaken to build verandahs and need every assistance.

The Chapter thankfully acknowledges a donation of $5 from the Chosen Friends towards the maintenance of their ward; also a gift of china from the W.C.T.U. These two Societies are always willing to assist when called upon.

During the month of June eight patients were admitted into the hospital. Thirteen were discharged. There were two births and two deaths.

Mr. Alf. Reed, of Kincardine, who has sold his milk business, has gone to Owen Sound to run the bus business which he purchased from Mr. Chris. Brock.

For the Housekeeper

Use a funnel in filling a hot water bottle if you would save the rubber.

The best way to mend linen is to stretch it smoothly over an embroidery frame.

Two or three slices of lemon in a cup of hot tea is said to be a cure for sick headache.

For inflamed eyes the white of an egg beaten to a froth is soothing.

New patchwork designs show large pink tulips on a neutral ground.

A palatable way to serve cold, boiled potatoes is to put them through the sieve. Season them well with butter and salt; form into cones and brown in the oven.

When pressing tucks in crepe de chine use a piece of tissue paper between the iron and the right side. The tucks can be seen and at the same time protected.

A paper blanket folded over the outer edge and top of ice in the refrigerator will save the iceman's bill.

Tomatoes are delicious broiled. Cut them in thick slices and broil them over a hot fire; when they are done, butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

It is a good idea to rinse muslin hangings, children's dresses and pinafores in alum water. It will render them non-inflammable.

ROMANISM IN BOLIVIA.

The Sentinel always tries to believe the best about Romanism, and for that reason it has been cautious about using figures as to degeneracy in South American republics. This is what we found in the annual report of the Judge of the Superior Court of Oruro for the year 1913 :

"If we were to go to the parish registers, we should soon be painfully convinced that, in one county, more illicit relations exist than marriages, and that these illicit relations can never form a solid basis for the organization of families and homes. Fifty per cent. of the infants taken to the baptismal font are illegitimate, and in many cases the fathers are unknown."

A few months ago, Rev. Mr. Vining, a Baptist clergyman in Toronto, was shamefully abused by the Roman press because he described conditions in Bolivia. Rev. Dr. Speer was similarly attacked for the same reason. Assuming that these outsiders have a motive for making misrepresentations, why should this Bolivian judge heap calumny on his own country? And the worst of it is that he says conditions are becoming worse.—Orange Sentinel.

The wages of the 87,535 men and 3,926 women in the trade unions of Missouri increased $1,245,984 during the year ending June 30, 1913.

Grape Float

Make plain lemonade in the usual way, allowing one lemon to each glass, strain and fill the glasses two-thirds full, and drop in a lump of ice, add grape juice to within an inch of the top of the glass, pouring it in very carefully on the ice, so that it will float on top. This makes a pretty beverage for a "color" luncheon.

Good flour adheres to the hand, and when tightly pressed, remains in shape and shows the imprint of the lines of the hand.

To strain soup, pour it through a cloth which has just been wrung out of ice water. When it has all been strained, heat again and serve.

An Anti-Swatter

Alas for the poor fly! He has few friends nowadays. One of the last to be kind to him was the dear old Countess of X.

"Julia," said her ladyship, who noticed one buzzing round the window and giving himself a headache butting the glass. "Julia, open the window and let that poor fly out."

"But, madam, it is pouring rain."

"You are very thoughtful, Julia. Show the fly into the ante-room and let it sit down until the shower is over."

Orangeville Presbytery.

Two calls and one resignation were dealt with by the Orangeville Presbytery at its meeting in St. Andrew's Church on Tuesday. One of the calls was from Waldemar to Rev. Peter Jamieson, of Queensville, offering a stipend of $900 a year, three weeks' vacation and a manse. The call will be prosecuted before Mr. Jamieson's Presbytery. Rev. J. G. Cheyne, pastor of Claude and Mayfield congregations, tendered his resignation to accept a call to Morningside in the Presbytery of Toronto. The resignation was accepted and Rev. Mr. Thornloe was appointed moderator of the vacant charges. Rev. W. C. Mercer, pastor of Singhampton and Maple Valley churches, has resigned on account of an affection of the throat. Rev. R. B. Stevenson, of Shelburne, was appointed moderator.

St. Mark's Sunday School Picnic.

The annual Sunday School Picnic will be held on Wednesday, July 8th to Stanley Park, Erin. A special train will leave Orangeville at 1.30. A hearty invitation is extended to all citizens of Orangeville to join the excursion and have a good time. Adult tickets 40 cents; children 20 cents.

WOMEN EDIT NEWSPAPER

Club and Society Leaders Turn Editors and "Get Out" the Passaic Daily News.

Women prominent in society and club activities in Passaic, N.J., turned editors yesterday and "got out" the Passaic Daily News, an evening newspaper. Arguments for equal suffrage filled several columns, although the general news of the day was so thoroughly covered that a rival paper failed to get any "scoops."

City officials found young women reporters hard to dodge when called upon for interviews. One achievement of the women was in getting the paper out a few minutes earlier than usual on Saturday.

According to the returns of Assessor S. Martin, Bradford's population is now 955, an increase of 68. The total assessment is $405,507, an increase of $51,768.

ORANGEVILLE MAYORALTY

As I understand that Mayor Island will resign shortly, I desire to announce that I will be a candidate for the Mayoralty whenever the position is vacant. I am taking this step in compliance with the expressed wishes of a large number of ratepayers, and respectfully solicit your hearty support should I have any opposition.

Yours Faithfully
DR. G. H. CAMPBELL

ORANGEVILLE MAYORALTY

I desire to inform the electors of Orangeville that I will be a candidate for the position of Mayor, when the office becomes vacant through the expected resignation of Mayor Island. I have had eight years' municipal experience as a member of the Orangeville Council and have served under no less than five Mayors. I feel that my long record gives me a right to aspire to the Mayoralty. Now that the position is about to be thrown open. I shall be grateful for your hearty support.

Yours Very Truly

WHERE CANADA LAGS.

Technical and Industrial Education Performs Wonders in Europe.

Dr. J. W. Robertson, who investigated technical schools and industrial training for the Dominion Government as chairman of the commission which looked into these matters abroad, states that the claim that Canada has yet the best schools in the world "is tommyrot of the rottenest kind." Dr. Robertson leaves no doubt as to his opinion on the subject by quoting scores of cases wherein the Dominion is hopelessly behind many of the European countries.

In Canada, on virgin soil, the western grain grower is proud of a maximum of 20 bushels per acre, but in Britain, Dr. Robertson points out, farmers raise 35 bushels on soil under cultivation for over 30 years. This is due to industrial training and the system of technical education in vogue in the Old Country. And as confirmatory of this a published report on conditions in Russia may be employed. This report will prove a surprise to Canadians who have been so accustomed to look upon the Czar's country as a backward and unenlightened state. In the ten years from 1898 to 1908 Russia's population increased from 130 millions to 171 millions, a higher birthrate being shown than in any other country in Europe. Not only has Russia's population thus grown, but her productivity has increased in proportion. From 1902 to 1912 exports of wheat rose from 7[illegible] lions to 139 millions—an [illegible] 98 per cent. This agricultural advance, says the report, [illegible] ed by the state, "which has instituted technical schools in [illegible] places through the country. [illegible] these already have some 10,000 pupils; agricultural banks have also been established to care for the needs of the farmers, and of these latter there are now 17,000."

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

The latest whole wheat product is whole wheat macaroni.

Beet tops should be used, roots and all, discarding only the leaves that are defective.

If the children are wakeful and restless when put to bed, try giving them a glass of good milk.

To clean glass toilet bottles, put a little vinegar and salt into the bottle, allow to stand for two hours, and then rinse out in clear warm water.

It is a good plan to pepper a carpet thickly just where any heavy piece of furniture has to rest on it, as this helps to keep moths, etc., away.

To prevent the skin from discoloring after a fall or blow, take a little dry starch, moisten it with cold water, and lay it on the injured part.

Never put parsley into water, where it quickly decays. It will keep much fresher if placed in an air tight can or canister.

If linings of unbleached muslins are made for clothes baskets and tied into place each laundry day, they will be a real help in keeping the clothes clean.

Dry all the food for frying as much as possible. Moisture causes the hot fat to splutter and spoils the color and crispness of the food when cooked.

[illegible] washing small boys overalls you [illegible] it far easier to scrub than [illegible]. Soap and roll them up for [illegible] then lay them on a washboard [illegible] scrub them with a scrubbing [illegible] brush.

White clothes not in constant use can be kept white by using borax powder freely. Put it on the tops of window frames, on top and under the surface of closets and every crack.

There is no more efficacious way of brightening and cleaning materials with a pile, such as velvet and plush, than giving them a salt bath. Rub the salt well into the material and let it remain there for a time; then brush it with a soft brush back and forth until all the tiny particles—no longer white—are removed.

Under the new law no person under 18 years of age is allowed to drive a motor car.

Milton's debenture by-law guaranteeing bonds of the Imperial Foundry Co., to the extent of $7,000, was carried by 129 to 7. The Company agrees to employ 20 hands after January 1st, 1915.

Of European invention is a new life boat for ocean going vessels that will right itself if capsized and carry 100 persons and which is equipped with a gasoline motor and wireless apparatus.

Good, Sleep Good Health

Exhausted Nerves Were Fully Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When the nerve forces expended in the day's work and in the act of living is not replenished by restful sleep at night you have cause to be alarmed, as physical bankruptcy stares you in the face. This letter directs you to the most satisfactory cure for sleeplessness.

Mr. Dennis Mackin, Marton, Sask., writes:—"I have just finished using the sixth box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I must say that when I commenced using it my nerves were so bad that I could scarcely get any sleep. I would lie in bed nearly all night without sleep, and anyone who has this trouble knows the misery of sleepless nights. The Nerve Food helped me from the start, and has built up my nervous system wonderfully. I now enjoy good, sound sleep, and instead of feeling tired in the morning I am stronger and healthy, and well fitted for my daily work."

SOME CLEVER FAMILIES

ANNALS FULL OF INSTANCES OF BRILLIANT BROTHERS.

The Butlers Have Produced Some Remarkably Clever Men and the Asquiths Are Notable In England's Academic Circles — The Lytteltons and Cecils and the Bensons Are Also Notables.

When the scholastic history of the British people comes to be written, the name of Butler will figure largely in the records, for no family has displayed such classical genius as the Butlers, the eldest member of which, Mr. Spencer Butler, celebrated his golden wedding a few weeks ago.

Mr. Spencer Butler, who is a second son of the Very Rev. George Butler, Senior Wrangler of 1794 and head master of Harrow from 1805 to 1829, won high academic distinction in his early days, taking a first-class in classics at Trinity College, Cambridge. He is the elder brother of Cambridge's G.O.M., Dr. Butler, Master of Trinity, whose three sons have already proved themselves classical scholars of the highest distinction. The eldest, Mr. J. R. M. Butler, swept the board of prizes at Cambridge, and his list of triumphs is unprecedented. Mr. Spencer Butler has nine sons, five of whom have won honors at Cambridge.

It is an interesting fact that Mr. Butler's grandfather was the Rev. Weeden Butler, with whom the intellectual distinction of the family began. He was born in 1742, and was a classical master at Chelsea. Thus for a century and a half the Butlers have maintained their reputation as being the most remarkable classical family in the country.

The achievements of the Butlers naturally recall those of the Prime Minister, his brother, Mr. W. W. Asquith, the late head master of Clifton College, and the Premier's sons, Mr. Raymond and Mr. Cyril Asquith. All four have appeared in the "Greats" list at Oxford. Indeed, the scholastic abilities of the Asquiths lend some justification to a "gag" which has long been current among undergraduates at Oxford. When working for a university prize or a scholarship, the question is often asked, "Is there an Asquith in for it?" If so, every other aspirant is advised to give up hope and close his books.

The Premier won a classical scholarship at Balliol in 1870, his son Raymond achieved a similar distinction in 1897, and Cyril in 1909. A first-class in Classical Moderations, a Craven Scholarship, and first-class in "Greats," are among other classical honors which the father and his two sons have won.

The Lytteltons and the Cecils are interesting examples of clever families. The Cecil family has produced an almost unbroken sequence of clever men for more than a century, not the least notable of whom have flourished in our time—the late Marquess of Salisbury, Mr. A. J. Balfour, Lords Hugh and Robert Cecil, and others of great ability if of less fame.

The recent death of the Right Hon. Alfred Lyttelton caused a gap in a circle of clever brothers. The best known, perhaps, are the Rev. Edward, the well-known head master of Eton, and Sir Neville Lyttelton, who is one of Britain's cleverest generals. Altogether there were eight brothers, all more or less famous in the intellectual and athletic world.

Then there is the Benson family—sons of the late Archbishop Benson—whose mother was a Miss Sidgwick, sister of the brilliant family of brothers, Prof. Henry Sidgwick, and Mr. Arthur and Mr. Alfred Sidgwick. Mr. A. C. Benson, Mr. E. F. Benson, and Father Benson carry on the intellectual reputation of the family, and are shining lights in their respective spheres.

Sir George Laurence Gomme, formerly clerk of the London County Council, has good reason to be proud of the achievements of his sons. One of them, Mr. Allan Gomme, some time ago gained the Siemens gold medal for electricity at South Kensington and secured one of the scientific appointments in H.M. Patent Office, coming out sixth on the examination, while his younger brother, Mr. E. E. C. Gomme, gained an historical scholarship at Trinity Hall, Cambridge. In the meantime, at the Merchant Taylors School two younger brothers had gained distinctions — A. W. Gomme, a scholarship at Trinity College, Cambridge, and R. E. Gomme, the Senior School Scholarship.

In the distinguished Irish family of Plunket brains are hereditary. The first Lord Plunket was a barrister. Mr. Gladstone declared him to be the most eloquent orator he ever listened to. Lord Plunket's son became Bishop of Tuam one grandson Archbishop of Dublin, and another Lord Rathmore. The Hon. Dunbar Plunket Barton, who became Solicitor-General for Ireland in 1895, and has since been raised to the Irish Bench, is a nephew of Lord Rathmore. He had a brilliant career at Oxford, and is one of the very few men who have been twice president of the Oxford Union.

The brilliancy of the famous Dr. Arnold, at one time head master of Rugby, descended to his son, Matthew Arnold, the famous poet and essayist, and in turn passed to grandchildren—to Mrs. Humphry Ward, daughter of Dr. Arnold's second son, Thomas, and to the late Mr. H. O. Arnold-Forster, son of William Arnold, another son of the great head master.

The Most Famous Song.

What's the world's most famous song?

A London paper recently asked this question and then proceeded to make an unexpected answer—namely, that it is not Auld Lang Syne, Annie Laurie, Home, Sweet Home, God Save the King, The Watch on the Rhine, The Marseillaise or The Last Rose of Summer, all of which would seem to be probable candidates for the honor. What is it, then? The answer is Malbrook, whose refrains, We won't go home till morning, and For he's a jolly good fellow, are equally familiar in Europe and in America.

The air of the song has been sung in Europe since the time of the crusades, when it was carried to the east and so became familiar to Turks and Arabs. The modernisation of the song dates from some time after the battle of Malplaquet, when it was first sung by a French muse at Versailles, whence it spread to Paris and throughout France, and, as has been said, gave the great Duke of Marlborough more celebrity than all his victories. The words were printed on fans and screens, and were sung in palaces and on the streets. The still further modernization for the exigencies of roistering melody was the last touch which insured the song universal popularity. Incorporated in opera bouffe by Bizet, sung by Marie Antoinette in the Tuileries, introduced by Beaumarchais in The Marriage of Figaro and by Beethoven in his symphony, and hummed by the great Napoleon whenever he entered a battle, the air of Malbrook has literally sung itself into the heart of the world.

And Du Maurier understood its infinite possibilities when he had Trilby transform it into a great lyric tragedy.

A Great Painter's Love Story.

Turner's love story is tragic. Somewhere about the year 1797, while the great painter was still at school at Margate, Eng., he fell deeply in love with the sister of one of his school fellows. The intimacy grew and continued, and a few days later Turner proposed and was accepted. Then he went away for a couple of years to pursue his art studies, and during all that time not a message or a letter came from him. The young lady was hurt and offended at such cruel treatment, and under the smart of neglect and pressure from an unkind stepmother she accepted another suitor. Within a week of the day fixed for the wedding Turner returned. He obtained an interview and pleaded his cause passionately, but the girl refused to listen to any explanation.

Accomplished Miner.

At Tylorstown, in South Wales, lives a most versatile miner. For the last seven years, so the story goes, he has lived entirely on milk, fruit, and eggs, with a little fish occasionally, and he has the finest muscular development imaginable. He makes his own clothes, plays the 'cello and four other musical instruments, and is an extremely clever black and white artist. Each day he goes down the pit, taking with him only a pint bottle of cold water, which while he works is all that passes his lips. The ambition of his life is to become an actor.

Concrete walks need no repairs

THEY are not only best at first but are cheaper in the end than any other kind of walk. They are clean, permanent and safe. There is nothing to become loose nor are they slippery. They improve the general appearance of a house and are a source of great satisfaction to every housewife because they keep children out of the mud, prevent colds from wet feet and prevent dirt from being "tracked in" on floors and carpets. Equally important is the fact that they never wear out and never need repairs.

This free book "What the Farmer can do with Concrete" tells all about concrete walks and how to build them, and a score of other things needed on every farm. Write for it to-day.

HOT WEATHER AILMENTS

A medicine that will keep children well is a great boon to every mother. This is just what Baby's Own Tablets do. An occasional dose keeps the little stomach and bowels right and prevents sickness. During the hot summer months stomach troubles speedily turn to fatal diarrhoea or cholera infantum and if Baby's Own Tablets are not at hand the child may die within a few hours. Wise mothers always keep the Tablets in the house and give their children an occasional dose to clear out the stomach and bowels and keep them well. Don't wait till baby is ill—the delay may cost a precious life. Get the Tablets now and you may feel reasonably safe. Every mother who uses the Tablets praises them and that is the best evidence that there is no other medicine for children so good. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Co., Brockville, Ont.

EVEN AS YOU AND I

(With Apology to Kipling)

A fool there was and he made his lair
(Even as you and I)
On a bag of feathers and bunch of hair
(If he only knew what else was there)
But the fool to the subject gave no care
(Even as you and I)

Oh the sleep he lost and the rest he lost
Yet wondered his health was poor
Tho' a third of his life was spent in bed
It never had entered his foolish head
To think of Ostermoor.

A fool there was and his nights he spent
(Even as you and I)
On a mattress that looked so innocent
But he always arose in any event
Tired, unrested and discontent
(Even as you and I)

And it isn't the shame and it isn't the blame
That burns the heart to the core
It's the coming to know the comfort we lost
Seeing at what a trifling cost
We could get an Ostermoor!

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, JULY 9th, 1914.

ORANGEVILLE KNITTING FACTORY.

A Substantial Building Fitted Up with Modern Machinery—Room for 200 Employees

A large, solidly constructed, attractive but business like and permanent looking building is that which has been completed, and is now being rapidly fitted up with modern machinery, by Mr. J. M. Dods, the well known manufacturer of underwear and hosiery. While many of our citizens have been diligently amusing and, perhaps, slightly boring themselves with politics, both municipal and provincial, others have been working like beavers to finish up this block and get the wheels adjusted that will furnish steady employment for scores of men, women and youngsters in their teens; and a BANNER reporter took sufficient time to glance over the premises and make a few notes on the progress made and the prospects for an early turnout of the knitted goods which will be the exclusive product of this promising establishment.

The building, which is located on Mill street, on the direct road to the depot, is in itself an ornament and, with its machinery whirring, will undoubtedly prove to be a live wire in the industrial life of the town. It is four stories high, is 110 feet long and 80 feet wide, with an annex for engine and picker rooms 36x34 feet. This latter is constructed wholly of steel and concrete and is fireproof in every sense of the word. In the construction of the plant not less than 500,000 brick were used. The walls run from two feet thick at the bottom to fourteen inches at the top; the floors are made up of five inches of pine and one inch of maple and are so supported by heavy timbers, capped with iron, as to be equal to any weight to which they may be subjected. The whole interior will be as light almost as the open day, the windows being exceptionally large and as numerous as space will permit. A wide and particularly safe stairway leads from the basement to the top floor and every modern convenience is provided for the health, as well as the safety, of the employees. Taken all in all, the building may be classed as an up-to-date factory, with all the latest improvements and it will stand the test of the most exacting government inspector.

At present writing much of the machinery, which is the most modern that can be procured, is in hand and it is being placed as rapidly as expert mechanics can handle it. It will, of course, take some time, a couple of months possibly, to get things in running order, but when completed Orangeville can boast of having one of the most perfect factories of the kind in the province, and our industrial population will be so much increased as to greatly encourage those progressive men who advocate "aid to industries" and who believe that money so invested will return an hundred fold.

Mayor Campbell can continue on the lines he has always advocated and the town councillors can back him up with the heartiest accord, knowing that the people of the town will endorse every honest effort to improve the industrial standing of the community.

The success of the Dods venture is assured.

New York-Bermuda Trip.

Yesterday morning the Editor of The Banner had the pleasure of greeting a bevy of northern-grown beauties, who were on their way from Owen Sound to New York and Bermuda under the conductorship of Mr. Howard Fleming, of the Owen Sound Printing Company. The young ladies were winners in a circulation contest, and started out with spirits elate and rose-colored complexions that will startle the habitants of the semi-tropical isle, which they visit in this glorious month of July. The trip will extend over two weeks and arrangements have been made to ensure a pleasant and profitable time. The party includes Miss Jessie McGillvray, Chatsworth, Miss Hilda Hardie, Owen Sound, Miss Alice Beatty, Tara, Miss Lily Sheffield, Owen Sound, Miss Florence Nicholson, Holland Centre, Miss Gladys Gardner, Owen Sound, Miss Anna Munro, Owen Sound, Miss Helen Bowie, Annan, Miss Ethel Campbell, Owen Sound, Mrs. Howard Fleming, Owen Sound, Howard Fleming, Owen Sound.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

Mr. C. W. Norton, of Brampton, Appointed County Agent.

A meeting of the Executive of the County of Dufferin Children's Aid Society was held in the Carnegie Library on Friday afternoon last, with Police Magistrate Pattullo in the chair. The Executive decided to appoint Mr. Charles W. Norton, of Brampton, County Agent of the Society. Mr. Norton has been engaged in this work for many years and has the oversight of the counties of Peel and Halton as well as Dufferin thereby reducing the cost of the work in Dufferin. He has been in town for the past week and has made a personal investigation of several cases of youthful delinquency and neglect. He has not yet completed all the cases reported to him. A small committee was appointed to confer with similar committees from Halton and Peel with a view to consolidating the work.

The Secretary, Rev. Geo. W. Tetlow will be glad to receive donations of money and children's clothing for the work in this County. There are at present 39 wards of the Society in Dufferin. Mr. Launcelot Strothers, of Hornings Mills, gave a short address at the meeting and promised a very munificent donation toward the work of the Society. It is estimated that $400 will be needed to finance the work in this County. Mr. D. McCallum, manager of the Sterling Bank, is the Treasurer, Mr. C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., President, and His Honor, Judge Fisher, the Honorary President.

A $5000 black fox escaped from a fox farm in Moncton, N.B., and has been pursued by the majority of citizens.

PILES Do not suffer another day with Itching, Bleeding, or Protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as certainly cure you. 60c. a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. CARD OF THANKS

To the Electors of Orangeville:

I take this opportunity to most heartily thank the electors of Orangeville, one and all, for having elected me Mayor of the town by a vote which would be an honor to a much wiser head and a much more profound municipal student than myself.

I shall endeavor to continue to hold the good opinion of my fellow citizens, and again thanking you, I remain, yours most respectfully,

G. H. CAMPBELL.

FOR THE WOMEN

The hot weather is with us now and cooking becomes almost a hardship. To stay in a hot kitchen when it is around 90 in the shade, bending over the oven, is trying to the strongest constitution. And not only that—after all one's efforts to provide the family with a good dinner often meals in the summer with hot roasts do not seem to give entire satisfaction.

There is nothing more aggravating to the housewife, after hours of preparation to see but half the meal eaten. Do not always blame the members of your household. You must know how the hot weather affects one—too tired to talk — too much exertion to eat.

I have often wondered why the housewife does not make a rule of changing the diet for summer meals, just as she changes into thinner underwear the minute the warm weather commences.

It seems necessary in the summer that everything should be served dainty and appetizingly—and nothing served in large quantities. I have often found that salads for the midday meal are much appreciated, and far better than so much meat.

Red ball salad is easily and quickly made and always looks most tempting. Some of you might like to try it, so I give you below the recipe:

Cut tomatoes in half, and take out most of the centre; chop very small equal quantities of celery, cucumber, and radishes, and place in centre of tomatoes, covering the top with salad dressing.

Now that the marriage month is over, there are a number of young people commencing a most eventful period of their lives. Usually the first year is not one of perfect bliss during that time each is learning the different little whims and dislikes of the other which are often impossible to learn during the days of courtship and it depends to a great extent on the first twelve months how the future life will continue.

It is amusing to watch young married couples. To see the strong, somewhat selfish young man, and the sweet, rather spoiled doll-like girl, both trying to live the same easy life they had been used to before they married.

One of them must give way. Which will it be? Will the man turn his self- into thoughtfulness. Or will he leave her in his way. But he cannot expect her to forget that she is a woman who promised to "love, honor and obey."

On the other hand, the little girl who has had a doting mother, who really loves her and she imagines her husband is going to let her have her own sweet way. But in this she is mistaken. He is inclined to be domineering and she, rather than have any unpleasantness, gives in to him. What the future life is to be is impossible to foretell. Just at the present time they are blindly, very blindly, happy. Unless, however, the wife can forget she was ever spoiled, and can prove to husband that she has a will of her own, and is determined to use it, there is trouble ahead for this little home.

Each wife has her own petty troubles. Every day these are bound to occur, every one, and it is only natural that these worries should be discussed with the husband. But how many there are that know the proper time to take these troubles.

Just a minute of how your husband has spent his time—no doubt the day at his work in the office, factory or shop. Anything has seemed to go wrong. At last it is over and he comes home to a cheerful welcome.

Supper was very long, just enough time to smoke and reading the paper, having a well earned rest, and then John, the cook gave notice, or "It is no use expecting any dinner tonight, the fire would not burst and everything is spoiled. I told you it should have attended to before, etc., etc.

Don't tell the troubles as soon as he comes home. Let him enjoy his meal, and his smoke, let him have a rest from his worries. Then, at an opportune opportunity, and then tell of something did go wrong with the stove, and you were not able to cook the dinner you intended. Be sure and have something nice in its place. Tell him after the spoiled dinner after he has eaten and enjoyed the meal you prepared. Remember it is good policy always to "feed the brute."

Argyll Leaves Papers.

The late Duke of Argyll left a great mass of papers of various descriptions and, it is believed, ample material will be found therein to compile the story of his life when the time comes for this work to be taken in hand.

He also left several unpublished essays, and these ultimately may be published in volume form.

An authorized biography, however, is not likely to make its appearance for two or three years.

Cable Seventy-Nine Miles Long.

The telephone cable which is to connect Aldeburgh, Eng., with Walcheron, Netherlands, is to be seventy-nine nautical miles in length, making it the longest submarine telephone cable in the world. It will furnish telephone communication between London and Berlin. The cable is to be of the four-core pupin loaded type.

The Thunder.

ANIMALS IN SLEEP

All Sorts of Odd Postures, From Heads Down to Heads Up.

ONLY MAN LIES ON HIS BACK.

Standing During Slumber Is Not Uncommon Among Animals, and Sometimes One Leg Serves as a Support. Poses of the Sloths and the Lemurs.

Sleep indeed is a "gentle thing." It is the supremest form of rest. Our notions of rest during sleep, however, are likely to be a little upset when we come to survey the different postures assumed by various animals during sleep.

To begin with the human race. The majority of mankind probably sleep lying upon the right or left side of the body and with the knees drawn up toward the chin. But certain African tribes, for example, lie upon the back with the head, or rather the back of the neck resting on a bar of wood supported on two short pillars.

The elephant, apparently invariably, and the horse commonly sleep standing. This is really astonishing. Aside from the apparent difficulty of maintaining the balance of the body during these long periods of unconsciousness, one would have supposed that a recumbent position in the case of both these animals was imperative. Cattle and their kind commonly sleep lying down and during many hours of the day they lie down, as when chewing the cud.

More curious still there are creatures which invariably sleep hanging head downward suspended by their hind feet. The bats afford a case in point. Among the birds we meet with the same strange habit in the little hanging parrots of India and the Malayan region. In this they differ from all other birds, which invariably sleep with the head turned tailward over the back and the beak thrust in among the feathers between the wing and the body, not under the wing, as is commonly believed. No explanation has ever been offered to account for this strange habit. It is followed even by the penguins, wherein the feathers are so short as to fail completely to cover even the back. Owls are, perhaps, the only exception to the rule.

And, by the way, the only other animals which thus turn the head backward after this fashion during sleep are certain peculiar tortoises known as "side necked" tortoises. Certain birds sleep while resting on one leg. This curious pose is well seen in long legged birds like storks and gulls. Ducks generally sleep on open water, and to avoid drifting southward, and therefore into the danger zone, they keep constantly paddling with one foot, so that the body always is circling round the chosen sleeping area.

The sloths sleep suspended by their feet and the head tucked in between the forelegs. The no less remarkable African pottos, or slow lemurs, assume a similar pose, but they attach themselves to a vertical instead of a horizontal bough, so that the body rests with the head upward. No animal save man sleeps on his back.

Some animals are said never to sleep and this because the eyes are never closed. The hares, snakes and fishes are commonly supposed to enjoy this unenviable distinction. The notion is, however, quite erroneous. Whale and their kin are often quoted as sleepless creatures. It is supposed that if they made this mistake they would promptly drown!

As a rule darkness induces sleep. With many animals, however, the reverse is the case, as with the bats and owls, for example. This reversal of the usual order has been brought about by the nature of the feeding habits.

Finally one comes to the question, Where does sleep begin? This is by no means easily answered. One is inclined to draw the line at the insects. But since all living things—plants as well as animals—display periodical states of quiescence, perhaps we shall be near the truth in regarding sleep as universal among living things. In the case of plants it is enforced by darkness, save in the case of many bacteria and fungi, which, like evil deeds, grow under the cover of darkness.—Illustrated London News.

Pleasant For the Mistress.

Mistress (discussing housemaid who has given notice)—Well, of course if she wants to go she must. But it seems foolish of her if her only reason is that she wants a change. She won't get a better place than this. Cook—That's just what I tell the silly girl, ma'am. "Depend upon it," I says to her, "you'll only be going out of the frying pan into the fire."—London Punch.

Solemn Faced George.

Our one grievance against George Washington is that he never let the artists know that he could smile. Looking at the solemn visaged portraits of the great man creates the feeling that the batting average of the joy of living was mighty low in his day.—Toledo Blade.

Old Gentleman—Well, my boy, and when does your birthday come? Boy (who has been cautioned not to fish for presents)—Oh, it passed by a long time ago—a year next Saturday.—Life.

WAR AND DRINK.

World Learning the Lesson That Alcohol in Any Form Lessens Efficiency.

Whether in war or in single combat the use of alcohol in some form used to be almost universal; but, not so today, as the following excerpt from the "Mail & Empire" demonstrates.

"It used to be the custom on British ships of war to serve out a double ration of rum when the ships were going into action. This practice has long been done away with, and when there is fighting to be done, neither officers or men are allowed a drink of anything but oatmeal water. It is too well recognized that a modern man of war is too complicated a piece of machinery to be risked in the hands of a man whose pulse has been quickened by alcohol. The modern conning-tower has its walls literally covered with electric switches and buttons. To press the wrong one at a critical moment might cause the destruction of the ship and the loss of thousands of lives. Moreover the sighting of modern guns is something that demands the greatest nicety, and Lord Charles Beresford has told us that the prize gunners in the Mediterranean Fleet, which established a wonderful record for gunnery, when he was in command, were without exception total abstainers.

"The officers know that any yielding to the temptation of alcohol would be fatal to success in their profession, for there is the sternest discipline, and an officer who showed any sign of intoxication would be court-martialed in any navy."

The world is rapidly learning that alcohol in any form lessens efficiency. All the great industrial organizations find that in order to compete successfully their employees must be sober.

LUDICROUS ARGUMENTS.

Alcohol Does Cause Drunkenness and Other Evils.

To the Editor:—

Some of the arguments used in defence of the liquor traffic are very ludicrous. One argues that alcohol does not cause drunkenness and other evils, that it is only the abuse of it, and consequently argues for moderation in its use. Let us see how much truth there is in the statement that the moderate use of alcohol is harmless.

What are the highest authorities to which we can appeal? Surely Government reports and the findings of the highest scientists. Now we find that Government reports in England and several other countries all agree that the continued use of quantities so small as never to cause drunkenness will, if persisted in, cause chronic poisoning, and many of the children of such parents are liable to be weaklings or worse. The reports of great scientists, the action of great employers of labor, and the example of athletes all go to show that even the 'moderate' use of alcohol is known to be harmful. So much for moderation.

Another argues that all the evils of drink are caused by distilled liquors, and suggests that these be prohibited, and the free use of beer and wine be permitted. Here again we appeal to Government reports which class "beer, wine and spirits" as all positively harmful if frequently used, even in so-called moderation. Many great railroad corporations also suspend or dismiss a man for indulging in a simple glass of beer. Indeed it is becoming pretty generally known that beer drinkers do not live as long as whiskey drinkers on account of its ruinous effects on the kidneys. More-over France, Italy, Germany, Belgium and other countries have found when it is almost too late that beer and wine have a most disastrous effect on the national health and vigor.

Another declares that if all restrictions were removed and liquor allowed to be sold as freely as any other commodity, there would be little trouble from it. If so, why not apply that plan to morphine, cocaine and other poisonous drugs? In certain parts of France and Belgium there is a saloon for every twenty of the inhabitants and the people are besotted and degenerated to a degree almost beyond belief. Indeed there is not a word that can be honestly said in favor of the use of alcohol, unless it can be its occasional use as a medicine.

LEFT HIM IN IGNORANCE.

No Wonder the Shade of Sir Isaac Newton Was Disgusted.

Augustine Birrell, author and statesman, at a newspaper men's dinner told a unique ghost story.

"I have been haunted ever since I was almost a boy," he said, "by the constant repetition of one and the same dream. It comes to me again and again. It is this: I dream I am walking about somewhere in some plain or desert, and I suddenly encounter the agitated ghost of Sir Isaac Newton. He approaches me, his eyes almost starting out of his head; he tells me who he is and how ignorant he is of all that has happened in the world of science since he left.

"'Now,' he says, 'I want you to tell me in a few words, for I have only a quarter of an hour left, all that has happened to the race—the progress. How is it? I know what it was when I left it. What is it now?' My heart sinks, and, covered with confusion, I stumble, I stutter, I stammer, I become more and more involved, my ignorance becomes more and more apparent, and at last the unhappy ghost, throwing up his hands, leaves me with dismay.

"That dream constantly comes to me. The only difference is that the moment the unhappy Sir Isaac Newton sees me now he says, 'Oh, that old ignoramus!' and departs."—Pall Mall Gazette.

FORCE OF VIBRATION.

A Musical Chord That Shattered a Huge Glass Bowl.

Discussing the proposition that a wineglass can be broken or shattered to pieces by a musical chord, Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"I had a huge glass bowl one foot in diameter resting on its glass stand. The flint glass was from one-quarter to three-quarters of an inch thick. I rosined a violin bow, drew it across the edge, and the entire hemisphere of solid glass disintegrated into hundreds of small pieces. The sound of breaking into fragments was entirely unknown to me, a crackling or grinding, and the bits of glass flew far apart.

"I had used this same bowl before classes for several years with violin bows. But on this particular day the students as well as I were surprised at the breaking and unearthly noise.

"The fact is I happened to vibrate the bowl with its key note—that is, set harmonic rate, which means the precise rate with which it was able to vibrate to send forth that note, for notes are rates of vibration, and they all obey rigid and beautiful harmonic mathematical laws, and these agree with other set and fixed laws."

The Great Leveler.

A well known New York millionaire and his wife went to a trottery one afternoon with the idea of doing a little incognito dancing. One of the professional partners approached.

"May I have the pleasure?" he said. The lady was gracious, and they whirled off into a lively onestep. When the number was over the rich man's wife complimented the professional on his dancing.

"Thank you, Mrs. Blank," he murmured, calling her by her real name. The husband pricked up his ears. "How the deuce did you know who we were?" he asked.

"Why, don't you remember me?" said the professional cavalier, straightening his beautifully tailored figure. "I was your chauffeur two years ago."—New York Post.

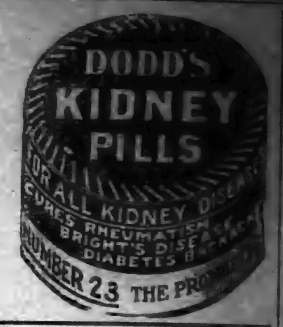
Europe In Africa.

The Africa of today is partitioned off among the following nations: Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Belgium and Spain. Great Britain has the fairer portions, her South African possessions having a fine climate and being in every way perfectly adapted to the white race. The French and Italian possessions along the Mediterranean are also well enough as regards climate, but are lacking along agricultural and other lines. It is exceedingly doubtful if much of German, Belgium and Portuguese Africa will ever become the seats of white civilization.

Bismarck's Appetite.

Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor, had an enormous capacity for eating and drinking. He once told a friend that the largest number of oysters he ever ate was 175. He first ordered twenty-five; then, as they were very good, fifty more, and, consuming these, determined to eat nothing else and ordered another hundred, to the great amusement of those present. Bismarck was then twenty-six and had just returned from England.

Slow Death.



In a certain literary club years ago one of the members, in proposing the name of a candidate for membership, mentioned among his qualifications that he could speak several dead languages. To this an opponent replied that he never heard the gentleman in question speak but one language and he murdered that as he went along.—San Antonio Express.

Mrs. Henrypeck looking up from her reading)—This writer says that the widows make the best wives. Mr. Henrypeck—But really, my dear, you can hardly expect me to die just in order to make a good wife of you.—Stray Stories.

War In the Air.

A striking forecast of the future war in the air was made at the United Services Institution recently by Col. L. C. Jackson, late Royal Engineers, in dealing with our defence against possible aerial attack. We might, he said, assume that in 1917 France and Germany would each have fleets of forty or fifty airships, with a carrying capacity of forty tons, a calm weather speed of sixty miles, and a range of 1,500 miles. These vessels would be able to drop a ton of explosive in one charge. Military aeroplanes in 1917 would probably have a speed of not less than 75 miles an hour, a range of at least 500 miles, be armored to resist small-arm fire, and have a crew of three with a machine-gun or bomb-dropping arrangements. If those assumptions were correct, in three years' time our vulnerable points—dockyards, magazines, and stores, ammunition factories, oil reservoirs, wireless stations, and great centres of population—would be exposed to attacks from the air. Col. Jackson thought the gun would be the most effective defence against aerial attack.

England's Maximum Wage.

England knew the maximum wage long before the minimum was thought of. It came about after the plague of 1348 had swept away half the population. Work was at a standstill for want of workers and wages went up so enormously that the state thought it necessary to fix a limit. The state ordered that the laborer should not merely accept gratefully what was offered him, but that he must not leave his parish in search of another master on pain of having the letter "F" (for fugitive) branded on his forehead. Statutes of this kind were popular up to Queen Elizabeth's time, when the last of the series was passed, "in the hope that it should banish idleness, advance husbandry and yield unto the hired person, both in the time of scarcity and in the time of plenty, a convenient proportion of wages."

Hotel 400 Years Old.

Very shortly the George Hotel, Reading, Eng., more than 400 years old, will be sold by auction. The George was doing business in the days when the Abbot of Reading was one of the great men in the land, and it stands in dignified repose in a busy street, not far from the gaunt ruins of the great abbey. High over its arched entrance, on a little shield, is the date of its foundation, 1506. Reading was then a village of 2,000 inhabitants

HEALTHY HAIR—NO MORE DANDRUFF

Use Parisian Sage.

It's entirely needless to have unsightly, matted, thin or faded hair. A little care is all that is needed to make it thick, soft, pretty, perfectly healthy and free from dandruff.

Use Parisian Sage—it supplies hair needs and is absolutely harmless. It quickly stops itching head and falling hair, and is one of the best tonics to invigorate the scalp and make the hair grow long and beautiful.

Get a bottle of Parisian Sage today from F. S. Pickering or at any drug counter. It costs but 50 cents. Rub it into the scalp—all dandruff disappears—your head feels fine—the hair is pretty and perfectly healthy.

COWED THE CHINESE.

The "Foreign Devil" Used a College Yell as a Battle Cry.

On board a launch on which I was sailing up the Yangtze river were about thirty Chinese soldiers of such a ragamuffin appearance as to excite my suspicions, but fortunately without their rifles. As evening of the first day came on they crowded around the small deck house and demanded of the native agent to know what the "foreign devil" was doing here. Now, I had been cleaning and oiling the various parts of my sample machine gun during the day.

Before nightfall I drew the blinds of the deckhouse and, quickly assembling the gun, slipped in a loaded belt. I now told the agent, who was white with fear, to tell these fellows that this "foreign devil" "belong crazy" and also "bun lehi" (very fierce) and as a sort of warning to "keep off the grass" I opened the door and let off a string of about fifty shots into the air, at the same time giving the Yale college yell, which was the handiest warcry I could think of at the moment.

Whether it was the information imparted by the agent, Chen, the shots or the Yale cheer I cannot say, but all hands crowded to the other end of the launch and remained at a respectful distance until Nanchang was reached, to the great amusement of the Chinese captain and engineer, who, however, had deemed it good policy to allow the passengers to settle their own disputes without interference. This incident is pleasant to remember, but at the time I was badly scared.—From "Drumming Revolutionary China," by Bartlett G. Yung, in World's Work.

ORIGIN OF BANK CHECKS.

Dense London Fogs, It Is Said, Forced Their Introduction.

It is claimed that the business world owes the idea of the bank check to nothing else than London's fogs.

These fogs are sometimes of such a density that the pedestrian can see but a few feet ahead of him. Something over a hundred years ago, it is said, the attacks of thieves and highwaymen in the British capital upon bank messengers and tradesmen going through the streets to settle their bills became so frequent in times of heavy fog as seriously to interfere with the conduct of London's business.

It was easy for the thief to ambush his victim, club him into insensibility, rob him and then disappear into the murky atmosphere, with little likelihood of apprehension or identification or that passersby would witness the commission of the crime or be of any assistance in the chase.

In these circumstances bankers, tradesmen and others set their wits to working, with the result that the bank check was devised for the payment of debts. Soon the highwaymen found that a few pieces of paper were all the booty they were likely to get from a "holdup" of even a wealthy tradesman. Accordingly the activities of the daylight robbers soon came to an end, but the convenience of the bank check proved so great that it survived not only in London, but was adopted throughout the civilized world.—Washington Star.

Raw Sponges.

To persons who know sponges only as they appear ready for sale and use the animal as it comes from the sea would be unrecognizable. It is a solid looking, rather slimy, fleshy body, varying in color from light grayish yellow through a range of browns to black and in form it is cup shaped, spheroidal or cake shaped, according to the species, its age or the environment in which it grew. In general, in appearance and consistency and the manner in which it cuts with a knife, a living sheep's wool sponge is not unlike a piece of beef liver perforated with holes and canals. The sponge of the markets is merely the skeleton, the supporting framework which gives strength and form to the soft, gelatinous tissue of the living animal.

Imaginary Whys of Celibacy.

Curious how when a man remains a bachelor people will speculate concerning his celibate state:

"Well, he has had an unfortunate affair some time or other. No man as attractive as he has gone this long without a tender memory to accompany him."

Of a woman:

"Funny she never married. Now, you'd think she'd be attractive to the men, wouldn't you?"—New York Sun.

Good News For Papa.

"Paw!"

"Well?"

"When I promise to marry him do you want him to come and ask your consent?"

"No, not my consent, but I would like to have him trot in and tell me the good news. I sort of feel like I needed cheering up."—Houston Post.

Suddenly Tired.

"Good gracious, what a sight you are! What have you been doing?"

"The barber had just lathered me when some one came in and told him that he had won the big prize in a lottery and he retired at once."—Filecende Blatter.

Hard Luck.

Hard luck is when a man who does not like oysters eats one for politeness, discovers a $100 pearl and then keeps on eating them indefinitely to find another.—Chicago News.

Men had not a hammer to begin, not a syllabled articulation. They had it all to make—and they made it.—Carlyle.

SEA LINGO.

Marine Phrases Drawn From All Over the World.

Practically every recognized language has been called upon at some time to help in building up the vocabulary of the sea.

"Davy Jones," for instance, might be taken to refer to some dead and gone Welshman, but the name is derived from quite another source. One should speak of "Duffy Jonah's locker," for that was the original, "Duffy" being the West Indian name for a spirit or ghost, and "Jonah" referring to the prophet.

Another expression gradually corrupted out of its original form is the "dog watch." It was originally the "dodge watch" because it lasts only two hours, and was intended to ensure that the same men shall not be on duty ever day during the same hours.

The "jury mast" has nothing in common with the "twelve good men and true" except its derivation from the same French word "jour," meaning "one day." The jury-mast is erected temporarily "for a day," just as the jury, in its legal sense, meant a tribunal summoned for a short time.

The "sheet anchor," the largest anchor carried by a ship, should really be the "shote anchor," and is so called because of its great weight, which allows it to shoot out in cases of emergency.

"Port" is a comparatively new expression. In the old days they used to refer to "larboard" and "starboard." "Starboard" has nothing in common with the twinkling stars of the heavens, it is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "steer-board" or "steer-side." In Viking times the galleys were steered by an oar, which the helmsman held with his right hand. "Larboard" was probably a corruption of "lower-board," the larboard side being inferior to the other.

The word "admiral" is Arabic springing from "emil el bagh," or "lord of the sea." "Captain" comes from the Latin "caput," but "mate" is Icelandic, and means "companion" or "equal." "Coxswain" had a curious origin. The "coxswain" was a man who pulled the last oar in the captain's boat, which was described as the "cock-boat." This, in turn, was a corruption of a small, round boat found on the rivers Usk and Wye, and known as a "coracle." Coxswain is therefore a Welsh name.

To Save Rob Roy Birthplace.

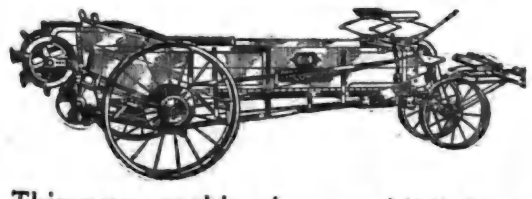
The birthplace of Rob Roy, the celebrated Highland freebooter, the place where he died, and his grave have been saved by a decision of the House of Lords denying the city of Glasgow a right to draw a water supply from Loch Voil and Loch Doine. If Glasgow's request had been granted it would have been necessary, since these lakes are a part of the eastern watershed, to raise the level of the lakes some 50 feet, which would have submerged the Rob Roy landmarks.

These sentimental considerations were laid before the House of Lords in petition after petition, but the decision of that body, sitting in its judicial capacity, was not based upon any of these points. The ancient riparian regulations read that water from an eastern watershed shall not be diverted to western uses, and it was decided that Glasgow must forego its water supply for the prosaic reason that the city is on the wrong side of the watershed.

Struggles of an Inventor.

Sir Henry Bessemer, who was born 101 years ago, was one of those inventors that ill luck pursued, and from whose clutches he finally escaped by indomitable perseverance. In 1833 the British Government was losing $500,000 a year by the fraudulent misuse of embossed deed stamps. Bessemer rendered this impossible by the use of perforated dies which dated the stamps. He presented the invention to the Government, which forgot its promise of a permanent appointment, but thanked him. His great invention in the manufacture of steel so impressed the ironmakers that they paid him $125,000 for licenses, and "wanted their money back." He had forgotten the proportion of fools to wise men. It took him two years to render the process "fool proof," and he pressed his point home by the setting up of his factory in Sheffield.

Cannot Sit In Commons.



A peer of the realm cannot sit in the British House of Commons; his place is in the Upper House, and there he must sit, no matter how anxious he may be to occupy a seat in the Commons. Being a peer, Lord Rosebery, when Premier, had no voice in the doings of the Lower House, but was compelled to sit in the House of Lords. He could, of course, attend the Commons and watch the proceedings from the Peers' Gallery, but he could not address the House or take part in the debates or votes.

Has no greater Cooking Convenience than you can have on the Farm or in the Village

Cooking in a hot, stuffy kitchen on a sizzling hot wood or coal range in summer has probably made more women discontented with farm or village life than any one thing. She thinks of the gas stoves the city folk can cook on. We have a joyful message for these women.

The "Detroit" Vapor Gasolene Stoves

Work just like a city gas stove, so you do not have to be without the convenience of a city gas stove any longer, no matter where you live. No storage or pressure tanks needed. You can put the stove in any part of the kitchen. Simply light the burners and the stove is ready to cook on. We invite you to look at them, and we will give you a little book showing the different styles and sizes.

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Ennison's voice shook a little. They were his friends, and they recognised his unusual earnestness. Drummond, who had been about to speak, refrained. Cheveney walked away with a shrug of the shoulders. Ennison looked around him and swore softly under his breath. After all, what a fool he was!

"I believe you are quite right so far as regards the present, at any rate," some one remarked, from the depths of an easy chair. "You see, her sister is married to Ferringhall, isn't she? and she herself must be drawing no end of a good screw here. I always say that it's poverty before everything that makes a girl skip the line."

Ennison escaped. He was afraid if he stayed that he would make a fool of himself. He walked through the misty September night to his rooms. On his way he made a slight divergence from the direct route and paused for a moment outside the flat where Anna was now living. It was nearly one o'clock; but there were lights still in all her windows. Suddenly the door of the flat opened and closed. A man came out, and walking recklessly, almost cannoned into Ennison. He mumbled an apology and then stopped short.

"It's Ennison, isn't it?" he exclaimed. "What the devil are you doing star-gazing here?"

Ennison looked at him in surprise. "I might return the compliment, Courtlaw," he answered, "by asking why the devil you come lurching on to the pavement like a drunken man."

Courtlaw was pale and dishevelled. He was carelessly dressed, and there were marks of unrest upon his features. He pointed to where the lights still burned in Anna's windows.

"What do you think of that farce?" he exclaimed bitterly. "You are one of those who must know all about it. Was there ever such madness?"

"I am afraid that I don't understand," Ennison answered. "You seem to have come from Miss Pellissier's rooms. I had no idea even that she was a friend of yours."

Courtlaw laughed hardly. His eyes were red. He was in a curious state of desperation.

"Nor am I now," he answered. "I have spoken too many truths tonight. Why do women take to lies and deceit and trickery as naturally as a duck to water?"

"You are not alluding, I hope, to Miss Pellissier?" Ennison said stiffly.

"Why not? Isn't the whole thing a lie? Isn't her reputation, this husband of hers, the 'Alcide' business isn't it all a cursed juggle? She hasn't the right to do it. I——"

He stopped short. He had the air of a man who has said too much. Ennison was deeply interested.

"I should like to understand you," he said. "I knew Miss Pellissier in Paris at the Ambassador's, and I know her now, but I am convinced that there is some mystery in connection with her change of life. She is curiously altered in many ways. Is there any truth, do you suppose, in this rumoured marriage?"

"I know nothing," Courtlaw answered hurriedly. "Ask me nothing. I will not talk to you about Miss Pellissier or her affairs."

"You are not yourself to-night, Courtlaw," Ennison said. "Come to my rooms and have a drink."

Courtlaw refused brusquely, almost rudely.

"I am off to-night," he said. "I am going to America. I have work there. I ought to have gone long ago. Will you answer me a question first?"

"If I can," Ennison said.

"What were you doing outside Miss Pellissier's flat to-night? You were looking at her windows. Why? What is she to you?"

"I was there by accident," Ennison answered. "Miss Pellissier is nothing to me except a young lady for whom I have the most profound and respectful admiration."

Courtlaw laid his hand upon Ennison's shoulder. They were at the corner of Pall Mall now, and had come to a standstill.

"Take my advice," he said hoarsely. "Call it warning, if you like. Admire her as much as you choose—at a distance. No more. Look at me. You knew me in Paris. David Courtlaw. Well-balanced, sane, wasn't I? You never heard anyone call me a madman? I'm pretty near being one now, and it's her fault. I've loved her for two years. I love her now. And I'm off to America, and if my steamer goes to the bottom of the Atlantic I'll thank the Lord for it."

He strode away and vanished in the gathering fog. Ennison stood still for a moment, swinging his latchkey upon his finger. Then he turned round and gazed thoughtfully at the particular spot in the fog where Courtlaw had disappeared.

"I'm d——d if I understand this," he said thoughtfully. "I never saw Courtlaw with her—never heard her speak of him. He was going to tell me something—and he shut up. I wonder what it was."

CHAPTER XXI.

"My Pseudo Husband"

"I don't understand what it all means," Anna said wearily, as she threw open her furs, and sank into a low chair. "It was very horrid too. Such a stuffy little room, and a most impertinent lawyer—the person who got up and asked me all those questions."

REMARKABLE CURE OF RHEUMATISM

Supt. Of Sunday School in Toronto Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

R. A. WAUGH, Esq.

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 1st, 1912.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known. I suffered from Rheumatism especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH,
55 Dovercourt Road.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure even the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism because it is the greatest blood purifier in the world and acts on the bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c, or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Brendon stood opposite to her, upon the hearth-rug. His sudden affluence seemed scarcely to have contributed to his well-being. He looked older, and there were lines about his eyes. His speech too seemed to have become more grave and measured.

"He was bound over to keep the peace," he said. "On the whole I don't think that you can complain of the proceedings. The magistrate stopped that fellow who tried to cross-examine you."

"Does being bound over to keep the peace mean that he is to leave me alone altogether?" Anna asked.

"Not exactly that," Brendon answered. "There is nothing to prevent his speaking to you."

"He can still follow me about, then? pester me with his letters, glower at me from street corners, hang about my door?"

"There is nothing," Brendon said, "to prevent him from doing all these things. They are annoying enough, but they do not constitute an offence under the law."

Anna kicked a footstool from under her feet viciously.

"Then it is a very silly law," she declared. "Is there no way that I can get rid of him, Walter?"

"Yes," Brendon answered, "there is one way."

She looked up eagerly.

"Don't keep me in suspense. Do tell me how."

"Marry me!" Brendon said slowly.

Anna's face fell. She looked at him thoughtfully.

"That is impossible," she said. "You know that it is impossible."

"I do not," he answered firmly. "I know that you do not love me, if that is what you mean. Why should you? But then I do not believe that you have a very large capacity for sentimental affection. I can give you all the things which make life pleasant and I can free you from this madman."

The old instincts reasserted themselves. Her lips curved into a smile.

"He would have me arrested for bigamy," she exclaimed. "What a muddle it would be!"

"I can only repeat what I have just said," he went on earnestly. "Whatever means I had to use I would keep my promise. I would free you from this man."

She shook her head.

"I would rather believe that you are only half in earnest," she said. "Please do not say anything more about it. I cannot afford to lose another friend."

"Friends are a help," he said doggedly, "a husband would be absolute protection. I am rich. You know that. We would live where you like, how you like. And I would never ask you for more than you are prepared to give."

"It is impossible," she said firmly. "Last night I lost my best and oldest friend in the same manner. Why will you not believe me when I say that at present I do not intend to marry? There will come a time in my life, I suppose, when I shall feel differently about it. At present nothing would move me. "Walter," she added, stretching out her hand towards him, "do forget about this. I am human enough, at any rate, to hate solitude, and I have so few friends. Do not let me lose you too."

He took her fingers and pressed them ever so slightly.

"You will not lose me," he answered. "I shall be always at your call."

A maid interrupted them. She carried a card upon a silver salver. Anna glanced at it and hesitated.

Mr. Montague Hill.

"You can show him in," she said suddenly. "Walter, you will stay, please. I am so thankful that you are here. You will stay, will you not? It is my pseudo husband."

"If you wish it," he answered gravely.

Mr. Montague Hill came in. He was dressed with obvious, too obvious care, according to his conception of the prevailing fashion. His trousers were a little light, and the diamond pin in his tie twinkled mercilessly. He carried a very glossy hat in his hand, and his manner was apparently intended to be conciliatory. When he saw Brendon he scowled.

"Well," said Anna good-humouredly. "You wished to see me. I hope that you have come to apologize for your ridiculous behaviour."

"I wanted to see you," he said, slowly, "alone."

"Thank you," Anna answered, "but your previous deportment towards me has been such that I beg to be excused. You know Mr. Brendon. He is my friend. Anything you have to say you can say before him."

"I don't want to say things before him, or any one else," Mr. Hill answered shortly. "I want to talk to you, and to you alone. I don't see what any one wants interfering between a man and his wife."

"You will see me," Anna remarked calmly, "under the present conditions, or not at all."

Mr. Hill set down his hat upon the table.

"Very well," he said. "I came here determined to keep my temper, and I will. I will say what I have to say before Mr. Brendon. If you don't mind, I don't see why I should."

"That is sensible," Anna said. "Won't you sit down?"

"No, thanks," Mr. Hill answered. "I'm more at my ease standing. First of all I want to finish what I began to say just before the accident."

Anna opened her mouth and shut it again.

"Go on," she said quietly.

"I know," he continued, "that I was guilty of a shabby action in letting you believe that I was Meysey Hill. It wasn't altogether my fault. I was led into it. I was mistaken for him so often that I got tired of correcting people. And then Mademoiselle Celeste found out, and she only laughed. She advised me to keep it up. She told me that it was my only chance of getting you to look at me. And you know how I was about you. Every one knew. It was the sort of thing I'd heard of, but never understood. The thought of you was like a fever in my blood. I couldn't sleep or eat or rest for thinking about you. It's hard to talk about—and before him," he pointed to Brendon, "but as I was then so I am now. I know that I was a cad to let you marry me, believing I was Meysey Hill. I can't help it now. It's past and done with. What I want to say to you is this. We're man and wife, bound hard and fast. We can't get away from it. Won't you let bygones be bygones, and make the best of it? I'm not a rich man. I'm traveller for a firm of brewers and wine merchants, but I don't do badly, and you could keep on your show at the music halls if you wanted to. I'd do anything for you in reason. I—I'm not a bad sort really, though that Meysey Hill business was shabby. Come, what do you say?"

He was nervous. His twitching features showed it. There were drops of perspiration upon his forehead. His hand was extended half doubtfully. Anna did not take it, but there was something of pity as well as contempt in her steady regard of him.

"Is that all?" she asked.

"All!" he repeated vaguely.

"All that you want to say to me," she explained. "I should like to have this matter settled up, now that we are here face to face."

"It depends," he said, "upon your answer."

"Very well," Anna said. "Now my whole answer to you is exactly what it has always been. You seem to be sane. I can only conclude that you are the victim of some extraordinary hallucination. I do not know you. I never even saw you in Paris. I never was married to you."

He drew a step nearer to her. She did not flinch.

"Say it again," he muttered. "Let me look at you while you say it."

"I never saw you in my life before that evening in Montague Street," she repeated calmly. "As to my having been married to you, the whole story is an absolute and absurd fabrication."

The man was shaking with nervous fury. Brendon came closer to him.

"Your name," he cried, "Do you deny that. You are Annabel Pellissier. I could bring a hundred to prove it."

"You are 'Alcide.' You sang last night at the 'Universal' the same song that I have heard you sing at the 'Ambassadors.'"

"I was certainly singing last night at the 'Universal,'" Anna answered. "You simply mock me, then," he cried. "It's a damned silly way to deal with a man. We know the truth, you as well as I. Yet you keep the bluff up, even when we are here alone. Is it because Brendon is here? If so, by God I'll throw him down the stairs."

Brendon was standing now by Anna's side. He was taller than Hill, but Hill was very powerfully built and he was beside himself with passion. The veins stood out on his forehead like purple cords. He spoke in little jerks.

"I came to talk the matter over—reasonably," he said. "I was willing to be fair and square about it. But I won't be bluffed to my face. I won't be treated as though I were a fool or a madman. Once more, are you my wife or are you not?"

"I am most certainly not your wife," she answered calmly. "As to your threats, well, I have had quite enough of them, and of you. I have given you an opportunity to speak, and you have spoken. So have I."

She rang the bell. Hill swayed upon his feet as though about to spring either at her or at Brendon, who was watching him closely. The maidservant appeared.

"The door, Mary, to this gentleman," Anna said.

There was a moment's dead silence. Then Hill took up his hat. He made a groping movement towards the door. He seemed crushed. The carnation in his coat seemed to have lost its vivid colour, his diamond pin to have gone dull. A curious negativeness seemed to have spread over the man and his glossy clothes, extending even to the utterly emotionless tone in which he spoke his last words to Anna.

"I came," he said, "prepared for peace. I would have listened to anything reasonable from you. You have chosen war. You think perhaps that this is the end. It is not even the beginning."

Brendon interposed, speaking for the first time since the man's entrance.

"One moment," he said. "Of the matter which lies between this lady and you, I know nothing. But whether your story is true or false you had better remember this. Miss Pellissier's friends will see that you are not allowed to annoy her. You can take this from me. If you make the slightest attempt to force your presence upon her I will thrash you first, and have you up before the magistrates afterwards."

The Price of Success

Big business is not an accident—it is a result. It is the fruit of purpose, persistency and ADVERTISING.

You know the story of Rip Van Winkle—the man who went to sleep for 20 years and who, when he awoke, expected to find the world the same as it was when he entered slumberland.

There are men to-day very much like Rip Van Winkle—their point of view and their practices are those of a generation past. They do not believe in advertising.

To succeed in these modern days one must be in accord with the spirit of to-day. For a merchant this means that he must advertise, if he would prosper.

A WORD TO THE PUBLIC

Where are you served best and most pleasingly? The answer is almost sure to be—"Where we are invited and made welcome. At those shops which prize our custom enough to seek it, and who ask for it every week through the medium of advertisements in THE ORANGEVILLE BANNER."

ADVICE TO SWIMMERS.

T. W. Shelfield, hon. member of the Royal Life Saving Society, gave out the following :

The many drowning fatalities recorded by the press during the summer seasons call for more care being taken by the average swimmer and beginner generally, and it is earnestly desired that the following don'ts for swimmers and pointers for non-swimmers be posted up in a conspicuous place at the bathing place or summer resort the reader visits, thus helping to minimize all undue risk being taken by followers of sport.

Don't bathe shortly after dinner : wait at least two hours.

Don't swim far after a hard day's work, or over exertion after other forms of exercise.

Don't bathe alone if subject to giddiness or faintness.

Don't dive into water without first ascertaining the depth.

Don't take fright if you fall into the water with your clothes on ; remember clothes float, and assist you to float. Make for shore, swimming with the tide or stream.

Don't swim too far out in the lake unattended by a boat or an expert swimmer.

Don't take fright if seized with cramp ; keep cool ; turn on the back and endeavor to rub the place affected. If the leg is drawn up with pain, swim slowly with the arms only. All swimmers should practice this.

Don't swim without some recognized signal to give your fellow swimmers, if subject to cramps, such as lifting one arm or shouting for help. Don't abuse this ; leave the water as soon as possible.

Don't dive out of or try to get into a boat from the side ; dive from the stern, and get in from the stern, but only from a boat with large beam.

Don't swim near dams, waterfalls or where reeds are growing.

Don't swim away from shore, always along the shore.

Don't swim without company if you have a weak heart and only then after consulting a doctor.

Don't swim against stream if you come across weeds.

Don't swim without protecting your ears if you are subject to ear trouble.

Some don'ts and pointers to beginners and non-swimmers are thus given :—

Don't go beyond the depth of your lips if you can't swim.

Don't throw the hands or arms out of the water.

Don't grasp any person who approaches you ; do what he tells you.

Don't attempt to get into a boat coming to your rescue ; catch hold of the stern until assisted to get in.

Tread water by keeping the legs going up and down as in walking upstairs. Hold an oar or canoe paddle, plank or branch of tree in the middle when thrown to you ; an oar or paddle with the blade flat on the water will keep you up if you don't struggle. Take in long breaths through the nostrils ; this makes the body more buoyant and keeps the body warm.

If you follow these directions when in distress in the water you will help yourself and others coming to your assistance.

When canoeing take a life belt if you are not an expert.

The steamer Nascopie sailed yesterday from Montreal for points on the Labrador coast with provisions for the Hudson Bay posts, and on board was a Miss Anderson, who is going to Cartwright, Labrador, to be married.

Carter-Groskurth.

The wedding took place at Waldemar, on Wednesday, of Gladys B. Groskurth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Groskurth, and Ralph F. Carter, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Carter, 311 Indian Road, Rev. E. J. Adams, of Huntsville, the bride's uncle, officiating, assisted by Rev. A. J. Johnston, B.A., of London, and Rev. C. L. Poole. Her father gave away the bride, who wore ivory duchesse satin, shadow lace and seed pearls. The little flower girl, Evelyn Groskurth, niece of the bride, wore shadow lace over pink satin. Miss B. H. Groskurth, A.T.C.M., cousin of the bride, played the Mendelssohn wedding march and the bridal chorus from Lohengrin. The bride's travelling dress was of midnight blue, her French hat to match trimmed with tiny pink roses.—Star & Vidette.

Duffy-Gear.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Gear, East Garafraxa, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 24th, when their daughter, Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Duffy, by Rev. C. G. Cole, of Orton. The ceremony took place on the beautiful lawn under an archway trimmed with white roses and peonies and the wedding march was played by Miss Minnie Gear.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was charmingly gowned in white satin and pearls, with bridal veil arranged as Juliet Cap with orange blossoms. She carried a shower of white rosebuds and wore a pearl sunburst the gift of the groom. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Leila Wood, of Fergus, who was gowned in pale blue satin with shadow lace trimmings and carried a shower of pink roses. Little George Gear acted as page and Mr. Geo. Cummington, of Toronto, attended as best man. The house decorations were artistic soft yellow tones prevailing. A hundred guests joined in congratulations after which a dainty dejeuner was served. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a carved bracelet, to the pianist a cameo bar pin set with pearls, to the page a stick pin set with pearls, and to the best man cuff links. The bride was the recipient of many costly gifts among them being several cheques. The bride's going away gown was blue silk, cream coat with blue trimmings, and white hat with blue Prince Albert plume. Both bride and groom are popular in the community and a host of good wishes are theirs. They will reside on Mr. Duffy's farm near Grand Valley. —Star & Vidette.

Potter-Townsend.

At 1.30 p.m., Wednesday, June 25, "Hillcrest Farm," East Luther township, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Ella Jean Townsend, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Townsend, became the bride of Mr. Stanley A. Potter, of Bowling Green. To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Stella Legate, the groom took his place under an arch of evergreens on the lawn. The bride looked very pretty, leaning on the arm of her father. She was wearing a gown of cream silk, trimmed with venetian lace and pearls. Her veil was worn back from the face. It was of Irish tulle lace and caught with orange blossoms. The service was read by the Rev. G. S. Cassmore. Miss Hazel Townsend, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. After the responses had been given, the company adjourned to the dining room where a dainty repast was served. The many presents testified to the high esteem in which both bride and groom were held by their relatives and friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, while to Miss S. Legate, who played the wedding march, he gave a gold bar pin. The guests included : J. Simpson, Welland ; Mrs. J. M. Stuart, Terra Cotta ; Mrs. G. McArthur, Inglewood ; Mr. W. Kennedy, Grand Valley ; Mr. and Mrs. Willis Potter, Miss Elsie and Mr. Ivan Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Potter, Mr. and Mrs. W. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. A. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. L. Potter, Bowling Green ; Mr. and Mrs. E. Townsend, Mrs. J. Townsend, Mr. Albert, Miss Edna, Miss Alvin Mrs. Oscar Townsend, Toronto ; Miss Louise Beaton, Miss Mary Stuart. Mr. and Mrs. Potter motored to the 5 o'clock train and left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and Welland.—Star & Vidette.

Fines-McCague

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. McCague, Mono Centre, on Wednesday, July 1st, when their daughter, Miss Violet Mae, was united in marriage to Mr. John Alfred Fines, son of Mr. Richard Fines, Granger.

Promptly at the hour of 6 o'clock, the bridal party entered the drawing room to the strains of the wedding chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Susie Kirkpatrick, of Whitfield.

The contracting parties took their places under an artistically constructed evergreen arch, prettily draped and strewn with carnations banked with foliage and centred with large wedding bells.

The Rev. J. W. Dudgeon, of Rosemont, performed the ceremony. The bride was handsomely gowned in ivory satin with trimmings of shadow lace, prettily draped and caught with satin rosebuds, and wore the regulation tulle veil prettily adorned with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. Miss Coral Irwin, of Orangeville, who attended the bride, looked charming in a gown of pink satin striped voil trimmed with shadow lace and seed pearls and carrying a bouquet of pink carnations with streamers. Miss Alta Strongman, of Toronto, who made a very dainty maid of honor, looked demure in pink satin fashioned very effectively and having a finish of rosebuds with bouquet of beauty roses. The bridegroom was supported by his brother, Mr. Herb. Fines. While the register was being signed, Miss Kirkpatrick, who was attired in blue satin with lace trimmings, played, while Mr. Herb. McCague and Miss Strongman sang "Because." The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid an old gold jewel case, to the groomsman a watch fob, to the maid of honor a brooch set with pearls, to the soloist a pearl set tie pin and to the organist a crescent set with pearls. After the ceremony and congratulations to the newly wedded couple the guests, who numbered about sixty, adjourned to the dining room where the wedding dejeuner was served. The young couple were the recipients of many pretty and costly gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Fines left for a trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls before taking up their residence in their future home at Granger. The bride's travelling costume was a frock of black satin, with spring coat and hat. The Banner joins their many friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Fines a long, happy and prosperous journey through life.

World's Longest Poem.

A crony at the club the other night demanded to know which was the longest poem on record. Nobody knew. Well, isn't it "The Faerie Queene?" For, as a fragment, a quarter of the original plan, it is as long as Homer's "Iliad" and "Odyssey" and Vergil's "Aeneid" put together, twice as long as Dante's "Divina Commedia" or Tasso's "Gerusalemme Liberato" and three times as long as Milton's "Paradise Lost" and "Paradise Regained" in one. Had Spenser attained his object his twenty-fourth book, with "The Faerie Queene," he would have outdistanced all the others put together.—London Spectator.

What the Duke Meant.

His grace the Duke of Argyll was once addressing a select company in a London drawing room on the present state of things in South Africa. "I look forward to the time," he said, "when the Englishman will marry the Boer girl and have an English wife as well!" Respectable dowagers looked their surprise, and the men began to smile. Then the duke carefully explained that he meant, of course, that the Boer girl should become an Englishwoman to all intents and purposes.

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Abram Buhr, Herbert, Sask., writes:—"I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three boxes more, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convinced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Buhr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

RINGS OF AIR.

How to Blow Out a Lighted Candle Twelve Feet Away.

The distance from which an average man can blow out a candle rarely exceeds three feet. If he is an adept at blowing smoke rings, however, a candle may be extinguished at twelve feet. Of course the smoke isn't necessary. An ordinary air ring will do and has the added advantage of being invisible. Simply pucker the mouth as you would to blow a smoke ring and expel air in a quick, sharp manner. It takes a good deal of practice to do it.

An easier way to show the effect if one is doubtful is to place a sheet of cloth or canvas over the open side of a box otherwise closed, making a small, round hole in another side. Then tap in a sharp manner on the canvas and invisible air rings will be produced. If the hole is pointed at a person's face and the rings are made he will feel them as they strike his face. Only a few trials are necessary to extinguish a candle at twelve feet. To render the rings visible a smudge may be burned in the box, or a small dish of ammonia may be placed side by side with a small dish of hydrochloric acid, the combined fumes of these liquids making a dense smoke.

The explanation why one can put out the candle at twelve feet is that the energy of expulsion is conserved and practically all retained in the smoke ring, while a simple blowing has to set in motion a whole stream of air and is therefore wasteful.—Chicago Record-Herald.

BOTH SIGNED THE NOTE.

A Financial Formality That Puzzled Both Clay and Webster.

The men in official Washington seem to have less of a halo about them than in the good old days, when the towering form of Webster or Henry Clay would attract more attention on Pennsylvania avenue than a brass band or a tango dancer in 1914. In a bank the other day I saw a note indorsed jointly by Henry Clay and Daniel Webster. The story is told that Clay asked Webster to indorse a note with him for $500.

"All right," said the studious and thoughtful Webster, "I'll do so, Clay, if you'll make it $1,000 and give me half." Clay agreed to the compact, and the two set out for Banker Riggs, signed the note with due solemnity and secured the proceeds. As they swung across the threshold out again on the avenue and divided the money Webster in his ponderous voice remarked to Clay, "Henry, why do you suppose Mr. Riggs wanted our names on that note?"

"It baffles me, Daniel," responded Clay. "Perhaps he desired some memento to hand down to posterity, for I cannot at this moment conceive how it is going to be paid for the present generation."

The canceled note is today a valued souvenir, worth many times its face, because of the illustrious signers.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

Twain's Rate.

Mark Twain went to just one automobile show in his life. He went with a Detroit friend. After he had been shown the cars and other sights the friend said: "Come on over here. The greatest salesman in the automobile business is working, and I want you to hear him."

They went to a place where the salesman was talking to a possible customer about the merits of his car. He was rattling outward so fast that Twain gasped.

"Sakes alive," said Twain in his slowest drawl, "if my publishers ever heard me talk as fast as that man does they wouldn't pay me 30 cents a word or even 2 cents. They'd make me produce words about a hundred for a nickel."—Saturday Evening Post.

Scandal.

How is it that the evil which men say spreads so widely and lasts so long, while our good, kind words don't seem somehow to take root and bear blossom? Is it that in the stony hearts of mankind these pretty flowers can't find a place to grow? Certain it is that scandal is good brisk talk, whereas praise of one's neighbor is by no means lively hearing. An acquaintance grilled, scored, devilled and served with mustard and cayenne pepper excites the appetite, whereas a slice of cold friend with currant jelly is but a sickly, unrelishing meat.—Thackeray.

Well Acquainted.

An American girl was taking a Liverpool girl home to the States with her and toward the end of the journey remarked: "It is delightful to feel that one is so near home. We ought to sight Sandy Hook this afternoon."

"Shall we?" exclaimed her friend. "That will be nice. Don't tell me which one he is. I can always pick a Scotsman out of a crowd."—Chief Steward.

Strong Presumption.

Lawyer—You say that the defendant ran his automobile into the show window of a millinery store; but that doesn't show he was intoxicated, does it? Officer—Well, no; but when I arrested him he was trying on the hats!—New York Globe.

A Hard Case.

"His wife earns her own money."

"Indeed! I did not know she was employed."

"Oh, yes; hard at it all the time."

"What does she do?"

"Works him to give up."—New York Journal.

HISTORY AND A PICTURE.

Cornwallis and His Sword After the Fall of Yorktown.

Art is not always true to history. Schoolboys of several generations are familiar with the picture of Cornwallis surrendering his sword to Washington after the fall of Yorktown. Lord Cornwallis is revealed in the act of passing over his beautiful sword to the hand of his conqueror. The inference is that Washington took the sword and kept it as a trophy of victory. The facts are quite otherwise.

Cornwallis, proud even in defeat, declined to put in a personal appearance on the occasion of his surrender. The allied forces, American and French, who had besieged him for thirteen days, were drawn up in two columns along the road leading to Hampton Rochambeau, on a fine bay horse, was at the head of the French column. On his white charger sat Washington at the head of the American troops. The surrendered British and Hessians marched out of their intrenchments and passed down between the two columns.

Many thousands of Virginia citizens were gathered to watch the scene, all eager to get a glimpse of Lord Cornwallis. But they were disappointed in that. Cornwallis pleaded indisposition and stayed in his quarters. He sent his sword by one of his officers, General O'Hara, to be delivered up to Washington. General O'Hara offered the sword to Washington, who directed him to General Lincoln, the officer whom Washington had appointed to conduct the surrender. Lincoln took the sword from O'Hara's hand and then politely handed it back, to be returned to Cornwallis.

TREES FULL OF FAT.

Some of Them Yield a Pretty Fair Substituta For Butter.

There are several trees that yield an oily substance much resembling butter and making a good substitute for it. Some of these grow in Europe, but the best known species are natives of Africa and South America.

The Bassia butyracea, or the "shea butter," as it is commonly called, grows wild on the west coast of Africa. The butter obtained from this tree is derived by pounding and pressing the seeds, which are three inches long. When extracted the oil assumes the consistency of butter and smells like chocolate. Not only is it an excellent article of food, but it is used extensively for the making of soap and candles.

The seeds of the crab tree of Brazil and Guiana are 70 per cent fat, and the "crab wood tallow" derived from them is excellent for the manufacture of candles and soap. When boiled the tallow turns out yellow butter which contains a small quantity of strychnine. The latter, however, is easily removed by prolonged boiling.

From the nutmeg a useful fat is obtained. The nutmegs which have been broken or damaged by insects are roasted, ground and pressed for the fat, which is used for cosmetic and medicinal purposes.

A tree abounding in the forests of Africa and called by Kaffirs "chignite" yields (from the fruit or bark, the exact source being unknown) a white butter-like substance which constitutes an important article of commerce on that continent.—New York World.

Labouchere's Complaint.

If people banished from their tables all the commodities which, like salt, have been condemned in print their diet would be decidedly monotonous. "Food faddists are most aggressive persons," Henry Labouchere once complained. "In my time I have known them to preach that we should give up meat, tobacco, soup, starch (including bread and potatoes), salt, tomatoes, bananas, strawberries and bath buns. I have also witnessed movements for giving up boots, waistcoats, hats, overcoats, carpets, feather beds, spring mattresses, cold baths, linen clothes, woolen clothes, sleeping more than six hours, sleeping less than nine hours and lighting fires at the bottom."

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm is faith in action. "Faith believeth all things." Enthusiasm puts that belief to the test. The enthusiast believes that the thing can be done; he has faith to believe that it ought to be done; he has enthusiasm to do it. To the unthinking enthusiasm is but the foam on the deeply stirred waters. In truth it is the striving of the waters themselves. It is the very life of effort. —From "The Power of Mental Demand," by Herbert Edward Law.

Achill Island.

There are few people who once having seen the island of Achill can forget its beauty. The island lies close to the west coast of Ireland. When the skies are blue, mountains green and smiling, bogs clad in purple and pink heather and the whole picturesque island in sunshine, the place is a wonderland.

How She Made Him.

"He says his success is due entirely to his wife."

"But his wife divorced him!"

"Yes, but he had to hustle so hard to earn the alimony the court granted her that he became the business success you now see."—Houston Post.

Both Bluffers.

She—If you don't go away at once I shall call my husband. Peddler—I called on him first, and he threatened me with you.—Fliegende Blatter.

The real man is one who always finds excuses for others, but never excuses himself.—Henry Ward Beecher.

DOGS IN ALASKA.

Carry Great Loads Over Snow That Would Not Hold a Man.

Dogs are surely the real thing for "mushing" in the cold country. To my mind they beat reindeer a mile. Most of them weigh less than 100 pounds, and they distribute their weight over their four feet, so that they can trot over a weak snow crust where a man would sink out of sight by breaking through the crust into the soft snow below. On a good, level, smooth trail ten dogs can trot along with a ton of freight behind them, and 500 or 600 pounds is a fair load on poor trails.

A peculiar thing is that a twelve foot sled, twenty-two to twenty-four inches wide, with runners two and one-quarter inches wide, bearing a load of 600 to 800 pounds, will not sink through a snow crust that will not bear a man. This occurs because two runners two and one-quarter inches wide and twelve feet long give a large area of bearing on the crust. This, coupled with the motion that keeps the sled passing over all the time, accounts for the remarkable fact I am speaking of.

One of the greatest dangers in "mushing" is encountering water under the snow on the river ice in very cold weather or breaking through into hollow places where the stream has sunk away from under the ice. This is the most dangerous of all, and often when it happens a man is frozen to death before he can get to shelter or get up his tent and start a fire.—B. S. Rodey in Albuquerque Herald.

THE STUDY OF WORDS.

It's a Helpful Scheme to Use Your Dictionary Every Day.

Writing an article, "Treasure In Books," in the Woman's Home Companion, Laura Spencer Portor gives the following excellent advice about the advantages to be gained from the study of words:

"The study of words—it may sound to you a dry thing, yet I promise you it is not; very far from it.

"And this brings me to suggest that the habit of one of the great writers of studying carefully from a good dictionary five words each day is one from which we might all of us get a good deal of profit. Or take a good book of synonyms, for instance, and learn from it each day five words somewhat similar, comparing and weighing carefully the meanings and values of them.

"Notice the degrees of force in the following: To dislike, to hate, to loathe, to detest, to abhor. Each note struck is a little stronger, higher, we might say, like an ascending crescendo scale. So to instruct, to teach, to educate, are each quite different in meaning, with a great nicety of difference. So, rebuke, reprimand, censure, blame, are all of one color, but of how different shades of meaning. So, too, misfortune, calamity, disaster; so, weak, feeble, decrepit, and what delicate difference between fame and renown or feminine and womanly and womanish."

Kindness of the Boss.

Little Tommy, who was about knee high to a half pint, was employed by a busy broker. One afternoon the broker was sitting at his desk trying to collect his thoughts as well as some coin when he suddenly looked up and signaled Tommy to draw near.

"Tommy," said the boss, digging down into his jeans, "here's a fifty cent chunk of silver. Take it and hustle off to some vaudeville show."

"Thank you very much, sir," gratefully responded Tommy, freezing fast to the coin. "That's what I call being some good to a poor kid."

"Don't think that I'm being good to you," was the quick rejoinder of the boss. "I want you to learn a new tune. I can't stand the one you've been whistling for two months any longer."—Exchange.

Water Power.

Few would expect to find any connection between a modern hydroelectric plant and a prayer. The connection is indeed remote, but not undiscoverable. The first application of water power to mechanical purposes was made by Buddhist priests when they employed the energy of running streams to the work of turning prayer wheels. That, then, may be said to constitute the origin of the application of water power to perform man's labors, the foreshadowing of the great industrial development now in progress for the harnessing of the world's waterfalls, rivers and streams.

Sure of Herself.

"Do you think," asked the widower, "you could learn to love my children as you would if they were your own?"

"Oh, yes," replied the anxious maiden. "I think I should care more for them really than if they were my own, because I shouldn't have to worry so much about them if they got hurt or were sick."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not.

"Shall we marry, darling, or shall we knot?" was the short and witty line an ardent lover dispatched to the idol of his heart.

But where the strangeness of the matter comes in, the girl replied: "I shall not. You may do as you please."

Malicious Hint.

"Can you tell me where I am most likely to get a good collection of fairy tales?"

"Ask any married man."—Baltimore American.

ARMY POST HAZING

A Very Raw Recruit Who Got a Very Warm Reception.

HIS CLASH WITH "OLD BULL."

After the Quite Informal Introduction to the Colonel Was Effected the Tables Turned and "Corporal Suds" Got a Dose of His Own Medicine.

General E. V. Sumner, who was long colonel in command of the "Fighting Seventh" cavalry, was known to the rank and file of his regiment as "Old Bull." His gruff manners may have had something to do with the nickname, but it came to him fairly by inheritance. His father, General Sumner, bore it before him.

When the Seventh was stationed at Fort Grant, Arizona, a very raw recruit was sent on from Kansas City. As usual, the men persecuted him from the start. He returned meekly from the ordnance stores with the information that "left handed ramrods" were all gone; without batting an eyelash he reported that the sergeant in charge of the post exchange swore at him when he applied for his "butter checks." They took his last two bits away from him in the canteen in some hocus pocus game. After supper he was "blanket tossed" until the arms of the tossers grew weary, and three times that night his bunk collapsed amid roars of merriment. The recruit then gave up the struggle and lay shivering upon the floor until morning.

He neither murmured nor complained. In fact, he seemed to be so unsophisticated that when he asked his room corporal where he could have some washing done the corporal, with a jerk of his thumb, indicated the commanding officer's house on the corner of the parade. "Go over to that big house," the corporal directed. "Take your bundle with you and ask for Old Bull. He takes in all the washin' at this post."

Grasping his little bundle, the green lad from Kansas City shambled across the parade, mounted the colonel's front stoop and innocently pulled the doorbell. The joke was an old one, as Old Bull had never been known to answer the bell in person, and more than one recruit had learned the way to "Soapsuds row" after a tongue lashing from the commandant's dusky maid of all work. And as she had threatened to scald the next man who bothered her about his washing the lip was passed along from troop to troop, and the men swarmed out on the verandas to see the fun.

But just as the recruit pulled the bell who should step out but Old Bull himself, booted and spurred for his morning ride.

"What do you want here?" he thundered, surprised to see an enlisted man at his front door.

"I—I—I wanted to see about gettin' these sh-shirts and socks done up, m-mister," stammered the frightened recruit. "They told me to come over here and ask for Old Bull," he added.

"Well, I'm Old Bull!" roared the colonel. "You come along with me and point out the man that sent you over here," he went on as he grasped the astonished youth and hurried him toward the troop quarters.

The crowds upon the verandas melted away as Colonel Sumner approached, but the guilty corporal was found lurking in the troop barber shop. Some heated language ensued, and then at the end of the painful interview Old Bull delivered himself thus:

"Corporal, I ought to have you court martialed. I could have your stripes taken away and see that you got about thirty days into the bargain or I could have you fined. But you've been one of my best noncoms. You're always sober and a good shot, and so I'm not going to take your chevrons, your liberty or your money away from you. But since you're such an expert on laundry matters I order you to do this man's washing on the front porch of these quarters every Monday morning at guard mount.

"And you," he bellowed, turning to the recruit and shaking his gauntlets at him, "you see that you have at least two suits of underclothes and seven pairs of socks for him every week. And if he don't wash 'em clean you report to Old Bull, that's me!"

And thereafter for several months, until a band of Tonto basin Apaches went on a rampage and gave them more serious things to think about, the men of the Seventh looked forward happily to Monday morning guard mount. The noncommissioned laundryman became known as "Corporal Suds" and was teased about the affair until the day a piece of Spanish shrapnel cut short his existence.—Youth's Companion.

ADVICE TO SWIMMERS.

T. W. Shelfield, hon. member of the Royal Life Saving Society, gave out the following :

The many drowning fatalities recorded by the press during the summer seasons call for more care being taken by the average swimmer and beginner generally, and it is earnestly desired that the following don'ts for swimmers and pointers for non-swimmers be posted up in a conspicuous place at the bathing place or summer resort the reader visits, thus helping to minimize all undue risk being taken by followers of sport.

Don't bathe shortly after dinner : wait at least two hours.

Don't swim far after a hard day's work, or over exertion after other forms of exercise.

Don't bathe alone if subject to giddiness or faintness.

Don't dive into water without first ascertaining the depth.

Don't take fright if you fall into the water with your clothes on ; remember clothes float, and assist you to float. Make for shore, swimming with the tide or stream.

Don't swim too far out in the lake unattended by a boat or an expert swimmer.

Don't take fright if seized with cramp ; keep cool ; turn on the back and endeavor to rub the place affected. If the leg is drawn up with pain, swim slowly with the arms only. All swimmers should practice this.

Don't swim without some recognized signal to give your fellow swimmers, if subject to cramps, such as lifting one arm or shouting for help. Don't abuse this ; leave the water as soon as possible.

Don't dive out of or try to get into a boat from the side ; dive from the stern, and get in from the stern, but only from a boat with large beam.

Don't swim near dams, waterfall's or where reeds are growing.

Don't swim away from shore, always along the shore.

Don't swim without company if you have a weak heart and only then after consulting a doctor.

Don't swim against stream if you come across weeds.

Don't swim without protecting your ears if you are subject to ear trouble.

Some don'ts and pointers to beginners and non-swimmers are thus given :—

Don't go beyond the depth of your lips if you can't swim.

Don't throw the hands or arms out of the water.

Don't grasp any person who approaches you ; do what he tells you.

Don't attempt to get into a boat coming to your rescue ; catch hold of the stern until assisted to get in.

Tread water by keeping the legs going up and down as in walking upstairs. Hold an oar or canoe paddle, plank or branch of tree in the middle when thrown to you ; an oar or paddle with the blade flat on the water will keep you up if you don't struggle. Take in long breaths through the nostrils ; this makes the body more buoyant and keeps the body warm.

If you follow these directions when in distress in the water you will help yourself and others coming to your assistance.

When canoeing take a life belt if you are not an expert.

The steamer Nascopie sailed yesterday from Montreal for points on the Labrador coast with provisions for the Hudson Bay posts, and on board was a Miss Anderson, who is going to Cartwright, Labrador, to be married.

Carter-Groskurth.

The wedding took place at Waldemar, on Wednesday, of Gladys B. Groskurth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Groskurth, and Ralph F. Carter, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Carter, 311 Indian Road, Rev. E. J. Adams, of Huntsville, the bride's uncle, officiating, assisted by Rev. A. J. Johnston, B.A., of London, and Rev. C. L. Poole. Her father gave away the bride, who wore ivory duchesse satin, shadow lace and seed pearls. The little flower girl, Evelyn Groskurth, niece of the bride, wore shadow lace over pink satin. Miss B. H. Groskurth, A.T.C.M., cousin of the bride, played the Mendelssohn wedding march and the bridal chorus from Lohengrin. The bride's travelling dress was of midnight blue, her French hat to match trimmed with tiny pink roses.—Star & Vidette.

Duffy-Gear.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Gear, East Garafraxa, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 24th, when their daughter, Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Duffy, by Rev. C. G. Cole, of Orton. The ceremony took place on the beautiful lawn under an archway trimmed with white roses and peonies and the wedding chorus was played by Miss Minnie Gear.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was charmingly gowned in white satin and pearls, with bridal veil arranged as Juliet Cap with orange blossoms. She carried a shower of white rosebuds and wore a pearl sunburst the gift of the groom. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Leila Wood, of Fergus, who was gowned in pale blue satin with shadow lace trimmings and carried a shower of pink roses. Little George Gear acted as page and Mr. Geo. Cunnington, of Toronto, attended as best man. The house decorations were artistic soft yellow tones prevailing. A hundred guests joined in congratulations after which a dainty dejeuner was served. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a carved bracelet, to the pianist a cameo bar pin set with pearls, to the page a stick pin set with pearls, and to the best man cuff links. The bride was the recipient of many costly gifts among them being several cheques. The bride's going away gown was blue silk, cream coat with blue trimmings, and white hat with blue Prince Albert plume. Both bride and groom are popular in the community and a host of good wishes are theirs. They will reside on Mr. Duffy's farm near Grand Valley. —Star & Vidette.

Potter-Townsend.

At 1.30 p.m., Wednesday, June 25, "Hillcrest Farm," East Luther township, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Ella Jean Townsend, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Townsend, became the bride of Mr. Stanley A. Potter, of Bowling Green. To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Stella Legate, the groom took his place under an arch of evergreens on the lawn. The bride looked very pretty, leaning on the arm of her father. She was wearing a gown of cream silk, trimmed with venetian lace and pearls. Her veil was worn back from the face. It was of Irish tulle lace and caught with orange blossoms. The service was read by the Rev. G. S. Cassmore. Miss Hazel Townsend, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. After the responses had been given, the company adjourned to the dining room where a dainty repast was served. The many presents testified to the high esteem in which both bride and groom were held by their relatives and friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, while to Miss S. Legate, who played the wedding march, he gave a gold bar pin. The guests included : J. Simpson, Welland ; Mrs. J. M. Stuart, Terra Cotta ; Mrs. G. McArthur, Inglewood ; Mr. W. Kennedy, Grand Valley ; Mr. and Mrs. Willis Potter, Miss Elsie and Mr. Ivan Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Pottee, Mr. and Mrs. W. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. A. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. L. Potter, Bowling Green ; Mr. and Mrs. E. Townsend, Mrs. J. Townsend, Mr. Gilbert, Miss Edna, Miss Alvin Mrs. Oscar Townsend, Toronto ; Miss Louise Beaton, Miss Mary Stuart. Mr. and Mrs. Potter motored to the 5 o'clock train and left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and Welland.—Star & Vidette.

Fines-McCague

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. McCague, Mono Centre, on Wednesday, July 1st, when their daughter, Miss Violet Mae, was united in marriage to Mr. John Alfred Fines, son of Mr. Richard Fines, Granger.

Promptly at the hour of 6 o'clock, the bridal party entered the drawing room to the strains of the wedding chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Susie Kirkpatrick, of Whitfield.

The contracting parties took their places under an artistically constructed evergreen arch, prettily draped and strewn with carnations banked with foliage and centred with large wedding bells.

The Rev. J. W. Pudgeon, of Rosemont, performed the ceremony. The bride was handsomely gowned in ivory satin with trimmings of shadow lace, prettily draped and caught with satin rosebuds, and wore the regulation tulle veil prettily adorned with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. Miss Coral Irwin, of Orangeville, who attended the bride, looked charming in a gown of pink satin striped voil trimmed with shadow lace and seed pearls and carrying a bouquet of pink carnations with streamers. Miss Alta Strongman, of Toronto, who made a very dainty maid of honor, looked demure in pink satin fashioned very effectively and having a finish of rosebuds with bouquet of beauty roses. The bridegroom was supported by his brother, Mr. Herb. Fines. While the register was being signed, Miss Kirkpatrick, who was attired in blue satin with lace trimmings, played, while Mr. Herb. McCague and Miss Strongman sang "Because." The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid an old gold jewel case, to the groomsman a watch fob, to the maid of honor a brooch set with pearls, to the soloist a pearl set tie pin and to the organist a crescent set with pearls. After the ceremony and congratulations to the newly wedded couple the guests, who numbered about sixty, adjourned to the dining room where the wedding dejeuner was served. The young couple were the recipients of many pretty and costly gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Fines left for a trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls before taking up their residence in their future home at Granger. The bride's travelling costume was a frock of black satin, with spring coat and hat. The Banner joins their many friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Fines a long, happy and prosperous journey through life.

World's Longest Poem.

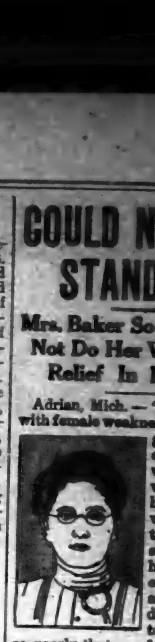
A crony at the club the other night demanded to know which was the longest poem on record. Nobody knew. Well, isn't it "The Faerie Queene?" For, as a fragment, a quarter of the original plan, it is as long as Homer's "Iliad" and "Odyssey" and Vergil's "Aeneid" put together, twice as long as Dante's "Divina Commedia" or Tasso's "Gerusalemme Liberato" and three times as long as Milton's "Paradise Lost" and "Paradise Regained" in one. Had Spenser attained his object his twenty-fourth book, with "The Faerie Queene," he would have outdistanced all the others put together.—London Spectator.

What the Duke Meant.

His grace the Duke of Argyll was once addressing a select company in a London drawing room on the present state of things in South Africa. "I look forward to the time," he said, "when the Englishman will marry the Boer girl and have an English wife as well!" Respectable dowagers looked their surprise, and the men began to smile. Then the duke carefully explained that he meant, of course, that the Boer girl should become an Englishwoman to all intents and purposes.

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.



Mr. Abram Buhr, Herbert, Sask., writes:—"I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three boxes more, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convinced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Buhr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to go and lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, women should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

RINGS OF AIR.

How to Blow Out a Lighted Candle Twelve Feet Away.

The distance from which an average man can blow out a candle rarely exceeds three feet. If he is an adept at blowing smoke rings, however, a candle may be extinguished at twelve feet. Of course the smoke isn't necessary. An ordinary air ring will do and has the added advantage of being invisible. Simply pucker the mouth as you would to blow a smoke ring and expel air in a quick, sharp manner. It takes a good deal of practice to do it.

An easier way to show the effect if one is doubtful is to place a sheet of cloth or canvas over the open side of a box otherwise closed, making a small, round hole in another side. Then tap in a sharp manner on the canvas and invisible air rings will be produced. If the hole is pointed at a person's face and the rings are made he will feel them as they strike his face. Only a few trials are necessary to extinguish a candle at twelve feet. To render the rings visible a smudge may be burned in the box, or a small dish of ammonia may be placed side by side with a small dish of hydrochloric acid, the combined fumes of these liquids making a dense smoke.

The explanation why one can put out the candle at twelve feet is that the energy of expulsion is conserved and practically all retained in the smoke ring, while a simple blowing has to set in motion a whole stream of air and is therefore wasteful.—Chicago Record-Herald.

BOTH SIGNED THE NOTE.

A Financial Formality That Puzzled Both Clay and Webster.

The men in official Washington seem to have less of a halo about them than in the good old days, when the towering form of Webster or Henry Clay would attract more attention on Pennsylvania avenue than a brass band or a tango dancer in 1914. In a bank the other day I saw a note indorsed jointly by Henry Clay and Daniel Webster. The story is told that Clay asked Webster to indorse a note with him for $500.

"All right," said the studious and thoughtful Webster, "I'll do so, Clay, if you'll make it $1,000 and give me half." Clay agreed to the compact, and the two set out for Banker Riggs, signed the note with due solemnity and secured the proceeds. As they swung across the threshold out again on the avenue and divided the money Webster in his ponderous voice remarked to Clay, "Henry, why do you suppose Mr. Riggs wanted our names on that note?"

"It baffles me, Daniel," responded Clay. "Perhaps he desired some memento to hand down to posterity, for I cannot at this moment conceive how it is going to be paid for the present generation."

The canceled note is today a valued souvenir, worth many times its face, because of the illustrious signers.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

Twain's Rate.

Mark Twain went to just one automobile show in his life. He went with a Detroit friend. After he had been shown the cars and other sights the friend said: "Come on over here. The greatest salesman in the automobile business is working, and I want you to hear him."

They went to a place where the salesman was talking to a possible customer about the merits of his car. He was rattling outward so fast that Twain gasped.

"Sakes alive," said Twain in his slowest drawl, "if my publishers ever heard me talk as fast as that man does they wouldn't pay me 30 cents a word or even 2 cents. They'd make me produce words about a hundred for a nickel."—Saturday Evening Post.

Scandal.

How is it that the evil which men say spreads so widely and lasts so long, while our good, kind words don't seem somehow to take root and bear blossom? Is it that in the stony hearts of mankind these pretty flowers can't find a place to grow? Certain it is that scandal is good brisk talk, whereas praise of one's neighbor is by no means lively hearing. An acquaintance grilled, seored, deviled and served with mustard and cayenne pepper excites the appetite, whereas a slice of cold friend with currant jelly is but a sickly, unrelishing meat.—Thackeray.

Well Acquainted.

An American girl was taking a Liverpool girl home to the States with her and toward the end of the journey remarked: "It is delightful to feel that one is so near home. We ought to sight Sandy Hook this afternoon."

"Shall we?" exclaimed her friend. "That will be nice. Don't tell me which one he is. I can always pick a Scotsman out of a crowd."—Chief Steward.

Strong Presumption.

Lawyer—You say that the defendant ran his automobile into the show window of a millinery store; but that doesn't show he was intoxicated, does it? Officer—Well, no; but when I arrested him he was trying on the hats!—New York Globe.

A Hard Case.

"Indeed! I did not know she was employed."

"Oh, yes; hard at it all the time."

"What does she do?"

"Works him to give up."—New York Journal.

HISTORY AND A PICTURE.

Cornwallis and His Sword After the Fall of Yorktown.

Art is not always true to history. Schoolboys of several generations are familiar with the picture of Cornwallis surrendering his sword to Washington after the fall of Yorktown. Lord Cornwallis is revealed in the act of passing over his beautiful sword to the hand of his conqueror. The inference is that Washington took the sword and kept it as a trophy of victory. The facts are quite otherwise.

Cornwallis, proud even in defeat, declined to put in a personal appearance on the occasion of his surrender. The allied forces, American and French, who had besieged him for thirteen days, were drawn up in two columns along the road leading to Hampton. Rochambeau, on a fine bay horse, was at the head of the French column. On his white charger sat Washington at the head of the American troops. The surrendered British and Hessians marched out of their intrenchments and passed down between the two columns.

Many thousands of Virginia citizens were gathered to watch the scene, all eager to get a glimpse of Lord Cornwallis. But they were disappointed in that. Cornwallis pleaded indisposition and stayed in his quarters. He sent his sword by one of his officers, General O'Hara, to be delivered up to Washington. General O'Hara offered the sword to Washington, who directed him to General Lincoln, the officer whom Washington had appointed to conduct the surrender. Lincoln took the sword from O'Hara's hand and then politely handed it back, to be returned to Cornwallis.

TREES FULL OF FAT.

Some of Them Yield a Pretty Fair Substitute For Butter.

There are several trees that yield an oily substance much resembling butter and making a good substitute for it. Some of these grow in Europe, but the best known species are natives of Africa and South America.

The Bassia butyracea, or the "shea butter," as it is commonly called, grows wild on the west coast of Africa. The butter obtained from this tree is derived by pounding and pressing the seeds, which are three inches long. When extracted the oil assumes the consistency of butter and smells like chocolate. Not only is it an excellent article of food, but it is used extensively for the making of soap and candles.

The seeds of the crab tree of Brazil and Guiana are 70 per cent fat, and the "crab wood tallow" derived from them is excellent for the manufacture of candles and soap. When boiled the tallow turns out yellow butter which contains a small quantity of strychnine. The latter, however, is easily removed by prolonged boiling.

From the nutmeg a useful fat is obtained. The nutmegs which have been broken or damaged by insects are roasted, ground and pressed for the fat, which is used for cosmetic and medicinal purposes.

A tree abounding in the forests of Africa and called by Kaffirs "chignite" yields (from the fruit or bark, the exact source being unknown) a white butter-like substance which constitutes an important article of commerce on that continent.—New York World.

Labouchere's Complaint.

If people banished from their tables all the commodities which, like salt, have been condemned in print their diet would be decidedly monotonous. "Food faddists are most aggressive persons," Henry Labouchere once complained. "In my time I have known them to preach that we should give up meat, tobacco, soup, starch (including bread and potatoes), salt, tomatoes, bananas, strawberries and bath buns. I have also witnessed movements for giving up boots, waistcoats, hats, overcoats, carpets, feather beds, spring mattresses, cold baths, linen clothes, woolen clothes, sleeping more than six hours, sleeping less than nine hours and lighting fires at the bottom."

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm is faith in action. "Faith believeth all things." Enthusiasm puts that belief to the test. The enthusiast believes that the thing can be done; he has faith to believe that it ought to be done; he has enthusiasm to do it. To the unthinking enthusiasm is but the foam on the deeply stirred waters. In truth it is the striving of the waters themselves. It is the very life of effort. —From "The Power of Mental Demand," by Herbert Edward Law.

Achill Island.

There are few people who once having seen the island of Achill can forget its beauty. The island lies close to the west coast of Ireland. When the skies are blue, mountains green and smiling, bogs clad in purple and pink heather and the whole picturesque island in sunshine, the place is a wonderland.

How She Made Him.

"He says his success is due entirely to his wife."

"But his wife divorced him!"

"Yes, but he had to hustle so hard to earn the alimony the court granted her that he became the business success you now see."—Houston Post.

Both Bluffers.

She—If you don't go away at once I shall call my husband. Peddler—I called on him first, and he threatened me with you.—Fliegande Blatter.

The real man is one who always finds excuses for others, but never excuses himself.—Henry Ward Beecher.

DOGS IN ALASKA.

Carry Great Loads Over Snow That Would Not Hold a Man.

Dogs are surely the real thing for "mushing" in the cold country. To my mind they beat reindeer a mile. Most of them weigh less than 100 pounds, and they distribute their weight over their four feet, so that they can trot over a weak snow crust where a man would sink out of sight by breaking through the crust into the soft snow below. On a good, level, smooth trail ten dogs can trot along with a ton of freight behind them, and 500 or 600 pounds is a fair load on poor trails.

A peculiar thing is that a twelve foot sled, twenty-two is twenty-four inches wide, with runners two and one-quarter inches wide, bearing a load of 600 to 800 pounds, will not sink through a snow crust that will not bear a man. This occurs because two runners two and one-quarter inches wide and twelve feet long give a large area of bearing on the crust. This, coupled with the motion that keeps the sled passing over all the time, accounts for the remarkable fact I am speaking of.

One of the greatest dangers in "mushing" is encountering water under the snow on the river ice in very cold weather or breaking through into hollow places where the stream has sunk away from under the ice. This is the most dangerous of all, and often when it happens a man is frozen to death before he can get to shelter or get up his tent and start a fire.—B. S. Rodey in Albuquerque Herald.

THE STUDY OF WORDS.

It's a Helpful Scheme to Use Your Dictionary Every Day.

Writing an article, "Treasure In Books," in the Woman's Home Companion, Laura Spencer Portor gives the following excellent advice about the advantages to be gained from the study of words:

"The study of words—it may sound to you a dry thing, yet I promise you it is not; very far from it.

"And this brings me to suggest that the habit of one of the great writers of studying carefully from a good dictionary five words each day is one from which we might all of us get a good deal of profit. Or take a good book of synonyms, for instance, and learn from it each day five words somewhat similar, comparing and weighing carefully the meanings and values of them.

"Notice the degrees of force in the following: To dislike, to hate, to loathe, to detest, to abhor. Each note struck is a little stronger, higher, we might say, like an ascending crescendo scale. So to instruct, to teach, to educate, are each quite different in meaning, with a great nicety of difference. So, rebuke, reprimand, censure, blame, are all of one color, but of how different shades of meaning. So, too, misfortune, calamity, disaster; so, weak, feeble, decrepit, and what delicate difference between fame and renown or feminine and womanly and womanish.

Kindness of the Boss.

Little Tommy, who was about knee high to a half pint, was employed by a busy broker. One afternoon the broker was sitting at his desk trying to collect his thoughts as well as some coin when he suddenly looked up and signaled Tommy to draw near.

"Tommy," said the boss, digging down into his jeans, "here's a fifty cent chunk of silver. Take it and hustle off to some vaudeville show."

"Thank you very much, sir," gratefully responded Tommy, freezing fast to the coin. "That's what I call being some good to a poor kid."

"Don't think that I'm being good to you," was the quick rejoinder of the boss. "I want you to learn a new tune. I can't stand the one you've been whistling for two months any longer."—Exchange.

Water Power.

Few would expect to find any connection between a modern hydroelectric plant and a prayer. The connection is indeed remote, but not undiscoverable. The first application of water power to mechanical purposes was made by Buddhist priests when they employed the energy of running streams to the work of turning prayer wheels. That, then, may be said to constitute the origin of the application of water power to perform man's labors, the foreshadowing of the great industrial development now in progress for the harnessing of the world's waterfalls, rivers and streams.

Sure of Herself.

"Do you think," asked the widower, "you could learn to love my children as you would if they were your own?"

"Oh, yes," replied the anxious maiden. "I think I should care more for them really than if they were my own, because I shouldn't have to worry so much about them if they got hurt or were sick."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not.

"Shall we marry, darling, or shall we knot?" was the short and witty line an ardent lover dispatched to the idol of his heart.

But, where the strangeness of the matter comes in, the girl replied: "I shall not. You may do as you please."

Malicious Hint.

"Can you tell me where I am most likely to get a good collection of fairy tales?"

"Ask any married man."—Baltimore American.

ARMY POST HAZING

A Very Raw Recruit Who Got a Very Warm Reception.

HIS CLASH WITH "OLD BULL."

After the Quite Informal Introduction to the Colonel Was Effected the Tables Turned and "Corporal Sude" Got a Dose of His Own Medicine.

General E. V. Sumner, who was long colonel in command of the "Fighting Seventh" cavalry, was known to the rank and file of his regiment as "Old Bull." His gruff manners may have had something to do with the nickname, but it came to him fairly by inheritance. His father, General Sumner, bore it before him.

When the Seventh was stationed at Fort Grant, Arizona, a very raw recruit was sent on from Kansas City. As usual, the men persecuted him from the start. He returned meekly from the ordnance stores with the information that "left handed ramrods" were all gone; without batting an eyelash he reported that the sergeant in charge of the post exchange swore at him when he applied for his "butter checks." They took his last two bits away from him in the canteen in some hocus pocus game. After supper he was "blanket tossed" until the arms of the tossers grew weary, and three times that night his bunk collapsed amid roars of merriment. The recruit then gave up the struggle and lay shivering upon the floor until morning.

He neither murmured nor complained. In fact, he seemed to be so unsophisticated that when he asked his room corporal where he could have some washing done the corporal, with a jerk of his thumb, indicated the commanding officer's house on the corner of the parade. "Go over to that big house," the corporal directed. "Take your bundle with you and ask for Old Bull. He takes in all the washin' at this post."

Grasping his little bundle, the green lad from Kansas City shambled across the parade, mounted the colonel's front stoop and innocently pulled the doorbell. The joke was an old one, as Old Bull had never been known to answer the bell in person, and more than one recruit had learned the way to "Soapsuds row" after a tongue lashing from the commandant's dusky maid of all work. And as she had threatened to scald the next man who bothered her about his washing the tip was passed along from troop to troop, and the men swarmed out on the verandas to see the fun.

But just as the recruit pulled the bell who should step out but Old Bull himself, booted and spurred for his morning ride.

"What do you want here?" he thundered, surprised to see an enlisted man at his front door.

"I—I—I wanted to see about gettin' these sh-shirts and socks done up, m-mister," stammered the frightened recruit. "They told me to come over here and ask for Old Bull," he added.

"Well, I'm Old Bull!" roared the colonel. "You come along with me and point out the man that sent you over here," he went on as he grasped the astonished youth and hurried him toward the troop quarters.

The crowds upon the verandas melted away as Colonel Sumner approached, but the guilty corporal was found lurking in the troop barber shop. Some heated language ensued, and then at the end of the painful interview Old Bull delivered himself thus:

"Corporal, I ought to have you court martialed. I could have your stripes taken away and see that you got about thirty days into the bargain or I could have you fined. But you've been one of my best noncoms. You're always sober and a good shot, and so I'm not going to take your chevrons, your liberty or your money away from you. But since you're such an expert on laundry matters I order you to do this man's washing on the front porch of these quarters every Monday morning at guard mount.

"And you, he bellowed, turning to the recruit and shaking his gauntlets at him, "you see that you have at least two suits of underclothes and seven pairs of socks for him every week. And if he don't wash 'em clean you report to Old Bull, that's me!"

And thereafter for several months, until a band of Tonto basin Apaches went on a rampage and gave them more serious things to think about, the men of the Seventh looked forward happily to Monday morning guard mount. The noncommissioned laundryman became known as "Corporal Suds" and was teased about the affair until the day a piece of Spanish shrapnel cut short his existence.—Youth's Companion.

Consistent.

A Man's Income.

"At what period in life should a man's income be largest?"

"It is usually reported to be largest at the period of his life in which his wife tries to show the court how much alimony he could pay."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE VOTE FOR MAYOR.

Dr. G. H. Campbell Elected by Fair Majority—A Large Vote Polled.

The mayoralty election on Tuesday was about as quiet as a five o'clock tea. Apparently little interest was taken in the result, but underneath the surface there was a quiet determination and a keen rivalry which resulted in a very good vote being polled, and while it was a little one sided, giving Dr. Campbell 485 to Mr. White's 218, there was nothing in the shape of ill-feeling and the day passed off as pleasantly as the average July sizzler. There was nothing of world-wide importance to be decided, and the people evidently concluded that it was the doctor's turn to occupy the gilded chair with the ram's horns and the goat skin seat. Both gentlemen have occupied prominent positions in the council and both have worked exceptionally well in the town's interests, and each no doubt thought he was entitled to the golden crown that sometimes rewards faithful labor; but the public is a fickle employer and is about as likely to nail a man to the cross as to crown him with violets, and we believe that in this instance each candidate was prepared for the best or the worst, as the case might be. At anyrate, Mr. White goes down to defeat with a smiling face and will doubtless turn up in the not distant future to receive the plaudits of the multitude, as he now retires with the best wishes of, and towards, everyone. As for the mayor-elect, he has received honors enough for the time being, and THE BANNER unites with the citizens at large in wishing him success in the position to which he has been elected by such a flattering majority. The following is the return by wards:—

	Campbell.	White	Maj. for Campbell
East Ward ... 95	56		—39
North Ward .104	57		—47
West Ward ... 97	33		—64
South Ward .139	72		—67
	435	218	217

Total vote polled, 653.

Orange Service.

The brethren of L.O.L. 427 and L. O.L. 635, Orangeville, will march to the Methodist Church on Sunday morning next, July 12th, and will be addressed by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Robinson. Members of the Order are asked to meet at L.O.L. 427 Hall on West Broadway not later than 10.30 a.m. Members of neighboring lodges are given a cordial invitation to parade with the local brethren.

Class in Embroidery.

Mrs. E. J. Ellis purposes starting a class in all kinds of fancy embroidery in Mr. W. M. Green's store, commencing the second Thursday in July and continuing every Thursday during July and August. Any person who is desirous of doing this kind of work should attend these classes. A small fee will be charged per lesson. Mrs. Ellis will be at her own home on Tuesday afternoons.

Scout Training Camp.

A large Training Camp for Boy Scout Masters will be held on the grounds of St. Andrew's College, Toronto, next week. A large number of officers will be in attendance from all parts of the Province. Rev. Geo. W. Tebbs has been requested to deliver three lectures during the Course on "How to Conduct a Hike," "Character Building in Connection with the Scout Movement" and "Swimming and Life Saving," the last to be demonstrated by the Lecturer.

Lacrosse at Idylwyld.

Wednesday next will be a great day in local lacrosse circles. On the 15th the husky Winghamites play the Orangeville stalwarts at Idylwyld Park, and it is dollars to a doughnut that the best team wins, barring accident. The teams played an exhibition game in the northern town yesterday, and this will give zest to the game here next week, which is for the championship of the two towns. A rattling game may be looked for, and lacrosse lovers will doubtless turn out in large numbers to witness the home boys play tag with their opponents.

Business Change.

Mr. Russell Morrow, a well-known Orangeville young man, has bought the jewellery and watch making business of the late A. M. Harkness and will continue the business in the old stand. Mr. Morrow was with Mr. Harkness for several years, leaving his employ about last New Year to accept a position with a large firm in Detroit famed for its excellent stock and fine watch repairing department. Mr. Harkness' successor is a courteous and obliging young man with a thorough knowledge of the jewellery and watch making business and we have no hesitation in predicting that he will make a success of his venture.

MONO MILLS.

The members of L.O.L. No. 427 will attend divine service in St. John's Church, Mono Mills, on Sunday next, July 12th, at 10.30 a.m. Brethren of neighboring Lodges are cordially invited to attend the service.

—Prince of Wales L.O.L. 339 will attend divine service in Herald Angel Church at Cardwell on Sunday next, July 12th, at 11 a.m.

CAMILLA.

Mrs. E. Cobeen, of Toronto, is visiting her brother, Mr. W. A. Henry.

Miss Florence Brock, of Paterson, N.J., is spending a few weeks as the guest of Mrs. A. Brenner.

Misses Winnifred and Ida Canning, of Violet Hill, visited at Mr. Jos. Howard's, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, of Toronto, are spending a couple of weeks with relatives here.

Mrs. (Dr.) R. N. Kyles, Orangeville, is visiting Mrs. Jas. Kyles.

Messrs. Peter and Ralph Brenner, of Toronto, were home over the week end.

Miss Mary Aldcorn is vacating at her home in Prieeville.

Mr. Fred Turner, of Toronto, spent last week here.

St. Andrew's annual picnic on Dominion Day was a decided success despite the numerous attractions in the neighboring towns. The chief attraction was a baseball match between Camilla and Whittington resulting in a victory for the home team. The line up was :—

Camilla—		Whittington—
Jackson	point	Lyons
White	cover	McConnell
Canning	1st base	Cruikshank
Bremner	2nd base	Howard
Scott	3rd base	White
Curtis	s.s.	South
Thompson	r. f.	Turner
Little	c. f.	Irwin
Lanktree	l. f.	Smith

The proceeds of the day were something over $100.

UNEXPLORED ISLANDS.

Some Places From Which Adventurers Have Never Returned.

News has just come that still another explorer has met his fate on Tiburon Island. His name is Wayne, and he is said to have been a clever mining engineer.

Wayne went across to Tiburon in October last, and not a trace has since been seen of him. Nor is it likely that his fate will ever be known.

He was warned of the dangers that were before him. In spite of offers of double pay, he could not get a soul to accompany him. So he crossed Hell's Passage alone—and like all others who have preceded him—has never come back.

Tiburon is no lonely island in savage Melanesia. It lies in the Gulf of California, separated from the Mexican mainland by only a few miles of salt water.

Yet it remains one of the world's black spots. It has never yet been explored by white men. Its only inhabitants are a tribe of Indians who, armed with bows and arrows, dipped in some unknown but deadly poison, shoot down all who try to land.

The expedition of 1879 vanished into the interior and was never seen again, and the same fate befell the party headed by Professor Millies in 1904.

There is only one other island in all the world which can match Tiburon, and that is Malayta in the Solomons. Match it, that is, in the way of savagery. And even in Malayta there are white men on the coast. Valuable plantation of cocoanuts and other tropical produce have been planted on the shores of Malayta, but inland is a mountainous country covered with thick bush and inhabited by fierce tribes of cannibals.

Gold is believed to exist in the interior of Malayta, and more than one expedition has been organized to search for the precious metal. But the bushmen, who steal noiselessly as serpents through the tropical forest, have wiped out every one of the explorers, and their smoke-dried heads decorate the dark temples in the central mountains.

Other islands there are which are as impregnable as Tiburon and Malayta, but for different reasons. One such is Tromelin, a lonely spot of land 30 miles north of Mauritius. It is surrounded by a terrific rampart of coral which is fully 150 yards wide. A mile out on any side of the island the sea is from 10,000 to 12,000 feet deep. The surf, which always breaks on the rocky shore of this submarine mountain top, makes landing practically impossible.

Yet it was here that, in 1761, a French transport was wrecked, and 110 survivors out of 600 aboard, got ashore alive. Of these, seven, all black women, were rescued in the year 1776, having by some amazing miracle kept life in themselves for a space of fifteen years, with no food but shell-fish and no drink but brackish water.

In the year 1607 that famous navigator, Henry Hudson, reported the existence of a rocky island 300 miles east of Greenland. It was named Jan Mayen. That island was never seen again until the year 1860, when a party of English people, among whom was Lord Dufferin, caught a glimpse of it.

Then it vanished for another fifty years, to be seen once more in July, 1910, by the tourists aboard the yacht "Oceana."

No one has ever set foot on Jan Mayen. No one is ever likely to, for no navigator would willingly approach it. It is the centre of the thickest fogs on the surface of the planet, and from one year's end to another usually remains totally invisible.

Bouvet Island, in the Antarctic, is almost equally inaccessible. It is the summit of a dead volcano, which rises steeply from immensely deep water, and it has only been sighted twice since its discovery in 1730.

By-Law No. 436

A BY-LAW TO RAISE $10,000.00 TO AID IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF TILE, STONE OR TIMBER DRAINS.

The Council of the Municipality of Amaranth, pursuant to the provisions of the Tile Drainage Act, enacts as follows :—

1. That the Reeve may, from time to time, subject to the provisions of this by-law, borrow on the credit of the Corporation of the said Municipality, such sum not exceeding in the whole $10,000.00 as may be determined by the Council, and may in manner hereinafter provided, issue debentures of the said Corporation in sums of $100.00 each for the amount so borrowed, with coupons attached as provided in section 5 of the said Act.

2. That when the Council shall be of opinion that the application of any person to borrow money for the purpose of constructing a tile, stone or timber drain should be granted in whole or in part, the Council may, by resolution, direct the Reeve to issue debentures as aforesaid, and to borrow a sum not exceeding the amount applied for, and may lend the same to the applicant on the completion of the drainage works.

3. A special annual rate shall be imposed, levied and collected over and above all other rates upon the land in respect of which the said money shall be borrowed, sufficient for the payment of the principal and interest as provided by the Act.

Passed this 6th day of July, A.D., 1914.

An Unusual Accident.

An unusual accident occurred in Flesherton on Saturday night when a new Ford auto belonging to Mr. McTavish caught fire and was burned. The fire started while the gasolene reservoir was being filled after nightfall. A lamp, which was required to supply light, set fire to the gasolene. The car was enveloped in flames so quickly that the driver had barely time to escape. While the accident is uncommon it might easily occur to any one. It is always dangerous to use a lamp or matches near gasolene.

A PERFECT WIFE.

The Devotion of Lady Beaconsfield to Her Husband.

Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, the great Prime Minister of England, married, when 35, the 50-year-old widow of Wyndham Lewis. After her death he said to a friend: "I hope some of my friends will take notice of me now. I feel as if I had no home. When I tell my coachman to drive home I feel it is a mockery."

"The severest of critics, but a perfect wife," is Disraeli's well-known tribute. He declared: "I do owe to that lady all I think I have ever accomplished, because she has supported me by her counsel and consoled me by the sweetness of her disposition." He declared "there never was a better wife. She believed in me when men despised me. She relieved my wants when I was poor and persecuted by the world."

Disraeli had a few friends and no intimates. His birth, ancient as it was, was his disadvantage; his dress and demeanor were as eccentric as his style of speech and literary reputation. He had failed in his maiden speech and was looked upon as an unsuccessful adventurer, but his wife had as much faith in him as he had in himself, and gratitude made him a devoted husband.

A nobleman who had no better sense than to expostulate with him for always taking his wife with him, said: "I can't understand it; you make yourself a perfect laughing stock by always taking your wife with you." Disraeli replied: "I suppose you can't understand it, for no one could ever in the last and wildest excursion of an insane imagination suppose you to be guilty of gratitude."

Once, when Disraeli was going to Parliament to make an important speech, she accompanied him. When the carriage door was shut her hand was caught in it. Rather than distract her husband's thoughts she patiently endured the pain until the door was opened and still endured it as she sat in the gallery looking down with a satisfied smile on her husband that she might encourage him to loftiest efforts.

From their wedding day the existence of one was merged in that of the other. She had money, but he had no sordid motives. It was a love match and paved the path of his ambition. It was her pride to shine in the reflection of his fame. The secret of the spell by which she held him was that she loved him with a love surpassing that of woman, and he appreciated as few men do, at its full value the self-sacrificing devotion. And as that perfect wifehood drew near its destined close Disraeli said: "We have been married 30 years and she has never given me a dull moment."

Crippled With Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes:—"I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this place, and we think there is no medicine like them."

The Missile Mementos

A Story of a War Veteran

By JOHN TURNLEE

When Bert Franklin went out to fight for the Union in the summer of 1861 he was as handsome a young fellow as ever wore a uniform. You wouldn't think to see him now that he could have left half a dozen girls behind him, each of whom supposed she alone possessed his heart, for he is three-quarters of a century old, has hardly enough silver hair on his head to put in a souvenir locket and his face is so covered with wrinkles that it resembles a ball of yarn.

But Bert in 1861 was straight as an arrow, had a superb figure, which showed to great advantage on horseback—he enlisted in the cavalry—and his merry laugh was equaled only by the jingle of his spurs. As to his eyes, he could look more love through one of them than any other man could through two. The girls of that day all had soldier lovers.

And Bert was as brave as he was handsome. In his first fight he was wounded and was made a corporal. In his second he was wounded again and was made a sergeant. In his third he received still another wound and was made a lieutenant. Now, it so happened that the first bullet lodged in the flesh and was cut out by a surgeon. Bert sent it to the girl he loved best, who treasured and revered it. His second wound came from a fragment of a shell, the force of which must have been spent, for the flesh was more bruised than torn. This fragment he sent to another girl he loved best. His third wound was made by a pistol ball while the regiment was charging. It went clear through the calf of his leg, so he did not secure it, but he sent one like it to a third girl he loved best as the original ball that had made a hole through him.

Bert steadily rose from private to captain and was constantly getting wounded. The consequence was that before the war ended no fewer than five girls possessed missiles that had pierced him in battle, and each girl thought that she alone possessed the only one that had been preserved. Shortly before the surrender at Appomattox the hero was so badly wounded that he was mustered out of service and after lying several months in a Washington hospital went home to limp about, an interesting character. Women passing him in the street would exclaim loud enough for him to hear, "Poor fellow!" "Noble soldier!" "What a pity!" and such other encomiums as were pleasing to the ear of the man referred to.

SHE DREW FORTH THE HEART SHAPED BULLET.

The pity was that this noble defender of the Union had been so dishonorable as to send missiles with which he had been wounded to a number of girls, leaving each to suppose that she alone had been favored by the receipt of the only original lead or iron that had nearly bereft her of the handsome Bert. But his conduct only goes to prove that physical bravery is a very different quality from moral bravery and that war heroes are no more to be trusted by women than any other man.

Another feature of this case is disappointing. Bert, by sending so many bullets, fragments of shells and other articles used in war to kill persons to so many different girls, showed plainly that something was wanting in his makeup. For there was great danger that some of these young ladies would learn that other young ladies possessed the only real, true, original bullet that had nearly bereft the world, his country and the girl he loved best of Captain Bert Franklin, and should the secret get out there would be a more terrific stinging than occurred in the "Hornets' Nest" at Shiloh.

And this leads us to an inference—pessimistic, I admit—that physical bravery may after all be a want of appreciation of danger. Was not Captain Franklin's bravery in battle due to the same defect that led him to send the original bullet that wounded him to five different girls? In the one case he was liable to lose his life, in the other to bring down upon himself the contempt, to say nothing of the wrath, of these young ladies.

But this is not an essay on moral versus physical bravery. It is a simple story of a man who, having achieved honors in war, came home a hero a short time after his acts of heroism at the front to incur the scorn of those who had most honored him. There was something sacred in each of these missiles he had sent to his best girl that led her to treasure it in secret. It was not till the hero was at the height of his glory—that is, when he was walking about at home on crutches, pale and thin—that the secret of the many mementos of his sufferings and tokens of his love got out. Then one morning the postman left for him a little pasteboard box that had once contained a gem, and on opening it he took out one of the many missiles that had wounded him. No word came with it as to why it was returned to him, but for the first time in his life he felt a sinking about the heart. He recognized the writing in which the box was addressed as that of the young lady he especially admired.

When the next delivery of mail was made Captain Franklin was handed another box, this time a wooden one, such as opticians use for mailing glasses. Opening it, he took out a piece of iron that had been sent from a bursting shell. The fragment was large enough and heavy enough had it hit the captain to have torn a hole in him big enough to admit a cheese box. This one of the many mementos he had sent out was also returned without explanation.

Franklin on receiving the first missile had laid it on the mantel. He now placed the second beside it. When the postman came again he brought two boxes, each containing a piece of lead which had been sent from the barrel of some kind of gun. Neither these returns was commented on by the sender. Franklin, who had faced them bravely in battle, now received them with every indication of fear. He remembered the storm in which they had come to him and wished that he were back in it rather than in his present position. He laid them beside the others on the mantel with a trembling hand.

Every memento he had sent out was now returned to him except one. A bullet had struck the metallic clasp of his sword belt and been flattened by the impact. He had shaped it with his pocketknife into the form of a heart and sent it to the fifth girl he loved best, Miss Alice Farnsworth, writing her how his clasp had saved his life. Alice pierced a hole in it and wore it on a gold chain about her neck.

Bert did not know of the reception of his gift, but he wondered if it, too, would come back to him. He fully expected to receive it by the next delivery. He moved the four missiles on the mantel, stretching them along from end to end, leaving a place in the center for the leaden heart when it should come.

The next time Captain Franklin went out on the street, hobbling on his crutches, he met one of the girls he had loved best and to whom he had sent a bullet. She cut him dead. The same day he met another of these young ladies and received the same treatment. Within a week every one of the four who had returned his mementos had had an opportunity to show her displeasure, passing him with her head in the air.

"Where," moaned the transgressor, "are the encomiums these girls bestowed on me? 'My hero,' 'Noble defender of your country,' 'Poor fellow,' 'Sufferer for the cause.'"

These expressions, denoting the sympathy, the admiration of these young ladies, came up to mock him. We are seldom conscious of our strong points, and the captain, never having appreciated his deeds of daring, would now have exchanged them all for a nod from one of these girls who were displaying their contempt for him.

One day when he was wishing that some one of the various implements of war he had sent north had killed him he met Alice Farnsworth face to face.

She smiled at him.

That smile was a healing balm to his distressed spirit.

"How happens it that you deign to notice so unworthy a person as I?" he asked.

"Come with me and I will tell you."

She took him to her home and when they were alone together, seizing a gold chain about her neck, drew forth the heart shaped bullet.

"The secret that you had sent these mementos to all of the girls became known by comparing notes soon after your return. All were furious except myself, my own conscience in such matters not being clear as crystal. It was suggested by one of our number that we send back your mementos and cut you when we met you. I found an excuse for not joining in your punishment—a poor excuse, I admit—in the fact that while each of the others received a missile that had drawn your blood I had been sent one that had done you no injury whatever. I, therefore, declined to participate in their plan."

This is the end of the story so far as the old vet tells it today, but not only the flattened heart shaped bullet, but the four other souvenirs, have been in the possession of Alice, his wife, ever since the memorable day he learned that she had stood by him in his degradation. She admits that there was, even after her refusal to join the cabal against him, a coolness toward her on their part, but she has managed to bear it, since she has got more true affection from her husband than she has lost from the girls.

Concrete Roads Exceed Farmer's Expectations

THIS LETTER FROM MR. GEO. W. BURT, of Redford, Wayne County, Michigan, shows how well satisfied the farmers of that section are with concrete roads. Nearly one hundred miles have been built in Wayne County.

"Mr. Edward N. Hines, Board of County Road Commissioners,
Wayne County, Detroit, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Our concrete roads are far ahead of the expectations of the majority of us farmers. Where we used to be two days marketing fifty bushels of produce, we now market twice as much in one day, and can go to the city anytime we want to. We do not have to wait till the roads are good so we can go. Also, our horses and waggons will last twice as long.

Hoping you will keep right on building these roads, and that the county will stand back of this movement, I remain,

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) Geo. W. Burt
Redford, Wayne County, Mich.

Concrete Roads

are the best, cheapest and most satisfactory roads that can be built. Best, because they permit bigger loads, increase land values and improve conditions generally. Cheapest, because they are permanent and require practically no repairs, which permits road taxes to be spent in building more good roads. Most satisfactory, because they are open to traffic every day in the year, lower cost of marketing and cost of living and increase the farmer's profits.

Good Roads literature telling all about concrete roads will be sent, free, to everyone interested. Write to

Wm. Lovatt, an employee of the Seaman, Kent Co., Meaford, had his right eye torn out while operating an end-matcher at their factory. A piece of board flew back from the machine with the above result.

John Greenaway held an old fashioned bee at the Dixon farm, East Luther, on Tuesday of last week when twenty seven of his neighbors and friends turned up with teams and ploughs and at night 50 acres had been turned over.

During the month of June the Wellington County Creamery did an immense volume of business. During the month they manufactured over 30,000 pounds of choice butter and paid out in cash to the dairymen of the Arthur district between six and seven thousand dollars.

The Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, received in the polling sub-division where he was born and raised, sixty votes out of sixty-nine polled and in thanking his supporters remarked that while these votes had been recorded against him, the gentlemen polling them had only made a mistake.

Crop prospects in this locality are promising for a good yield in grains, but contrary to earlier indications the grain crop will be very short and late. Apparently the cold winds and frosts have seriously affected the hay crop, which will not be ready for cutting till well towards the end of the month.—Grand Valley Star.

The Honeywood Citizens' Band had a big day's work ahead of them on Monday last. They played during the day at an Orange celebration at Singhampton and in the evening at a garden party at Maple Valley. The baseball club had two games to play the same day, at Singhamton in the afternoon and Maple Valley in the evening.

Miss Violet Cornell had her leg fractured while in Harrison Park, Owen Sound, on July 7th. Park Constable Freeman Burr, a first aid man and member of the St. John Ambulance Corps, was called to her aid, and placed the fractured leg in splints, then called Dr. Middlebro, who had the injured woman removed to her home in Derby.

Mr. Gates, of the Coyne House, Mt. Forest, was up before the mayor and G. L. A fire which looked very much like the work of an incendiary occurred at a small frame house on Oak street between Seventh and Eighth streets shortly after five o'clock on Tuesday morning. The alarm was rung in at box No. 6, and the firemen quickly responded and succeeded in extinguishing the flames before serious damage was done, a portion of the roof only being destroyed. "In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hinz, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

The body of a man believed to be Joseph Palmer, 65, was found alongside the Grand Trunk track about a mile east of Aylmer on Thursday morning last. His neck was broken and his head badly cut. It is thought that Palmer must have fallen from the train. He attended the Aylmer horses races the week previous and at London Tuesday.

License Inspector Beckett, of North Grey, Provincial Inspector Ayearst and three other officers of the Provincial License Department, made a sudden descent on the town of Collingwood on Tuesday of last week, and assisted by five other officers who met them in Collingwood, rounded up 45 cases and one keg of beer. Twenty-two cases were seized at the station and the remainder in a restaurant.

Robert Eagle, a young man, 25 years of age, who lived near Meaford, was accidentally shot and instantly killed while driving crows away from the premises. Members of the family heard a shot near the house at about 5 o'clock in the morning, and going out, found Robert lying dead. The charge had entered his stomach. He had gone out only a few minutes before to shoot crows. A widowed mother and brothers survive.

IN WANTON SPIRIT.

Latterly several instances of the wanton spirit of some of the youths of Owen Sound have been marked in actions at Harrison Park. Some of the young people who go there appear to be under the impression that Harrison Park is a place where they may do almost anything and not be held responsible, even for the destruction of property. It is a fact that some of the improvements placed there have been deliberately despoiled by youthful vandals acting in a most wanton spirit. The commission, which has the conduct of the park in hand has been somewhat long suffering in its attitude toward the people who frequent it, but there is a limit to everything, and soon the police magistrate is likely to be called on to impose penalties on those who apparently do not possess common sense enough to even conduct themselves becomingly in a public park, but who delight in petty destructive acts.—Owen Sound Times.

ANOTHER DRY STATE.

West Virginia Joined Prohibition Ranks July 1st.

West Virginia entered the column of prohibition States on the 1st of July morning, and its residents are trying hard to adjust themselves to the new conditions imposed by the Yost act, said to be one of the most drastic prohibitory measures ever enacted in the United States.

"For rent" signs in windows of nearly 600 buildings throughout the State, where before intoxicating liquors were sold in abundance, give mute evidence of the change wrought by the new law. Not a liquor sign or advertisement can be seen in the important cities and towns.

All the marks incident to licensed liquor dealers have disappeared as if by magic. Voted out of business by a majority of nearly 100,000, the saloonists took the inevitable good-naturedly. Many sold their businesses and left the State. Some have turned to other lines of trade.

Still others have retired from active pursuits. Of the 1,200 retail and wholesale liquor establishments in the State on June 1, many had closed their doors before the week began. Only a few kept open until the last minute. The transition was orderly. There was no celebration, although many curious ones thronged the streets of the cities. Five deaths, due wholly or in part to intoxication, were reported the same day, from the southern portion of the State.

Nearly $1,000,000 in revenues are taken from the State counties, cities and towns by the passing of the saloons. To meet this deficit, each district has evolved other forms of taxation.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Slow cooking is the best way cooking for children's food.

The most economical way of cooking meat is to stew it.

Plenty of time should always be allowed for a child's meal.

Wrap cut bread in waxed paper if you would keep it fresh.

Try scrambling eggs with minced green peppers for a change.

Keep a pair of ordinary pliers in the kitchen for lifting intensely hot pans.

Keep an egg timer near the telephone to guage your long-distance calls.

Hang very dusty skirts out on the clothesline in a high wind.

The smoke from burning sugar is one of the very best disinfectants.

To keep a chimney free from soot sprinkle a little saltpeter over the fire occasionally.

To sift ashes without raising a dust sprinkle them with water and let them get wet with rain before sifting.

EVEN AS YOU AND I

(With Apology to Kipling)

A fool there was and he made his lair
(Even as you and I)
On a bag of feathers and bunch of hair
(If he only knew what else was there)
But the fool to the subject gave no care
(Even as you and I)

Oh the sleep he lost and the rest he lost
Yet wondered his health was poor
Tho' a third of his life was spent in bed
It never had entered his foolish head
To think of Ostermoor.

A fool there was and his nights he spent
(Even as you and I)
On a mattress that looked so innocent
But he always arose in any event
Tired, unrested and discontent
(Even as you and I)

And it isn't the shame and it isn't the blame
That burns the heart to the core
It's the coming to know the comfort we lost
Seeing at what a trifling cost
We could get an Ostermoor!

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, JULY 16th, 1914.

THE MANITOBA ELECTION

The result of the voting in the Manitoba elections shows very clearly that the Roblin government had the support of the foreign and Roman Catholic electorate. In the constituencies which were strongly English the Opposition either carried the day or made great inroads on the Government majorities. Ridings with a large Roman Catholic or foreign vote declared strongly for the Government. English speaking polls voted strongly for the Opposition, while in the same riding polls with a heavy foreign vote gave large majorities for the Government. As a matter of fact it was the foreign vote that saved the day for the Roblin party. Of the purely English speaking constituencies the Government was only able to carry two. The great reason for the near downfall of the Roblin government was undoubtedly its persistent truckling for the support of the foreign electorate. As the price of this support it was evidently prepared to sacrifice the national school system and to establish sectarian schools. Had the Government been returned with a large majority the national school system would have been wrecked and the people of Manitoba would have had a Separate School system foisted upon them. That this danger has been averted is attributable largely to the activity and influence of the Orange Order. The situation in Manitoba, the issues at stake and the result of the recent election show conclusively that there is plenty of work for Orangeism in Canada.

A HOT ELECTION.

Speaking of the recent Provincial election in Manitoulin Island, the Manitoulin Expositor says :—" Not in years has the Manitoulin experienced as hot an election as the one just closed. The Rev. W. E. Wilson, during a short campaign, has given Mr. Gamey the closest run of his life. Mr. Wilson was practically alone. Though supported by the Temperance party, there was no organization, and his canvass was performed largely by himself. The result, pulling down Mr. Gamey's majority of 839 to 190, is a great tribute to Mr. Wilson personally. He has reason to be proud of the fight. His opponent was strongly entrenched behind officials of the Government. It is also said openly that bribery has been freely used and there is talk of protesting the election."

Rev. Mr. Wilson, who gave Mr. Gamey the run of his life, is a former Caledon boy and an ex-pupil of Orangeville High School. He is a son of the late W. L. Wilson, of Caledon, afterwards Governor of Brampton gaol.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

Mayor Campbell Presided at Monday Night's Meeting

Mayor Campbell occupied the chair at the regular meeting of the Town Council on Monday. The session was a lengthy one, considerable time being spent dealing with an unusually heavy grist of accounts. Payment of the following bills was authorized:

Frank A. Rohmer, $27.50; Pine River Light & Power Co., $138.53; Pine River Light & Power Co., $75; Municipal World, $6.42; A. A. Hughson, 451.44; S. A. McCartney, $27.90; C. C. G. Hannah, $13.88; Lathwell & Son, $7.35; S. White, $84; J. B. McNichol, $60.60; Gillespie Bros., $28.70; Jas. Tyner, $1.70; Jos. Ogston, $50.80; Jas. Cooper, $19.98; Geo. King, $34.40; Geo. Eudie, $14.45; Albert Hoare, $3.40; Theo. Denny, $36; W. Bansley, $3.40; A. Clowes, $20.57; Thos. Campbell, $25.33; S. Street, $25.33; John Gough, $25.33; John Hammond, $123.50; W. O. Thomas, $22.38; James Funsten, $2.60.

The referred accounts were:— Bell Telephone Co., $16.60; Dufferin Post, $26.

The High School Board submitted its estimates for the year. $3800 is the amount required from the town. The amount of the county levy is $2100.00.

Messrs. A. E. Annis, Couns. Matthews and Darraugh spoke relative to a manufacturing industry with which the town has been negotiating. The matter was left to the industrial committee, with instructions to obtain the company's terms.

Reeve Fairbairn was appointed to ex-Reeve White's place on the various Standing Committees.

The Street Lighting Committee was empowered to place a street lamp at the corner of 3rd St. and 2nd Ave.

The Clerk was instructed to notify the two local electric light companies to place their wires at a safe distance from each other, opposite the Curling Rink and Sheriff Endacott's residence, and to remove all dead poles from the streets.

Tournament Postponed.

Orangeville Bowling Club has postponed its Tournament from Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 4 and 5, until Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 11 and 12. The change was made to avoid clashing with the Berlin Tournament. The local Tourney promises to be bigger and better than ever this year.

A SPLENDID DEMONSTRATION.

Orange Order Held Imposing Celebration in Shelburne on Monday.

34 Lodge Took Part in Monster Procession—Speaking, Sports and Music Competitions Provide Entertainment for Multitude of People.

Thirty-four Orange Lodges and an immense concourse of people celebrated the 225th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne in Shelburne on Monday. Nearly all the Dufferin County lodges took part in the Demonstration and visiting Lodges were present from as far south as Cooksville and as far north as Markdale. Brampton, Bolton, Cooksville, Cheltenham, Tullamore and Campbell's Cross lodges from Peel County spent the day with the Dufferin brethren. Shelburne welcomed the visitors with open-armed hospitality. The whole village was in holiday attire. Flags floated in the breeze, evergreen decorations adorned the main streets and arches and streamers blazoned words of welcome and inscriptions that are dear to the heart of every loyal Orangeman.

Shelburne Lodge and Citizens' Band met the incoming Lodges and escorted them to the Town Hall, where banners and drums were stored during the noon hour. The regular train from the south carried over 1200 people. It took three engines to haul it north from Orangeville. There were 15 or 16 coaches and everyone of them was crowded. The big train did not get away from the Orangeville depot until well after 11 o'clock and it was shortly after 12 when it pulled into Shelburne station.

The feeding of the multitude proved a big undertaking, but everybody managed to get dinner. The ladies of the Anglican, Methodist and Presbyterian Churches served hot dinners and hundreds of people were fed in each of the three edifices.

Nearly an hour was spent getting the Lodges in order for the big parade. The long procession got under way shortly before two o'clock. The route was west on Main St. from the Town Hall, north on Owen Sound St., west to the C.P.R. station then east by way of Main st. to Berwick's grove. The head of the procession was marching east on Main St. long before its rear had reached Owen Sound St. and for ten minutes or so the lodges marched past one another, those in front going east, while the rear lodges marched west. The order of the lodges in the parade was as follows :—

Bro. Hugh Falconer, reeve of Shelburne, presided while the speaking was in progress. The reeve extended a hearty welcome to the visiting Orangemen and assured them that the town was theirs for the day.

The first speaker, Rev. Benj. Ferguson, a son of the late Thos. Ferguson, of Mulmur, declared that the word "Protestant" was the greatest word in the English language. The Roman Catholic party was using the ballot to intimidate members of Parliament, the boycott to intimidate shopkeepers and its influence to keep books to which it objected out of the Public Libraries. It was necessary that Protestants should stand together against this menace to their liberties.

Rev. J. R. Bell esteemed it a privilege to stand before such an audience and say a few words in behalf of the principles of Orangeism. In proportion as Orangemen were true to the principles taught in the Bible, so would they be useful in their every day life and their Society influential in the affairs of the State. Orangemen should read and study the Scriptures with diligence. The Orange Order was a religious Society above all else. The speaker delivered a message of sympathy to the people of Ulster and expressed the fervent hope that the brethren of Ulster might have their liberties preserved. Orangeism, Mr. Bell told his audience, was not promulgated altogether by parades, but by faithful work in the Lodge during the year.

Rev. Dr. Caldwell, of Shelburne, showed the hollowness of the doctrine of transubstantiation and then emphasized the thought that Protestants must be careful about the doctrines their churches teach. They must not allow Protestantism to become a soulless religion. The best and most authentic reports indicated that Romanism was on the decline in many countries. In spite of her wonderful machinery, Rome, the foe of liberty, of education, of the Public School and of the Bible, was doomed to failure and destruction.

Rev. R. B. Stevenson, pastor of Knox Church, Shelburne, discussed the origin and early history of the Orange Order. There were two reasons, he said, for sending for William Prince of Orange. He was the leader of the Protestant cause in Europe and he had a certain claim upon the throne of England by descent and marriage. The Protestant churches had never persecuted Roman Catholics as such. The harsh and intolerant policy of the Roman Catholic Church remained unchanged. As he understood the matter, the Orange Order did not interfere with the liberties of Roman Catholics, but was an organization for the express purpose of defending and protecting the principles of Protestantism.

Rev. A. E. St. Dalmas declared that it was important to be British and to keep Canada British. A tremendous struggle was being made to wrest Canada from the grasp of the English. There were two great issues in the recent Provincial election, but bilingualism was the paramount issue. Mr. St. Dalmas attributed the near defeat of the Roblin government to the influence of the Orange Order and exhorted his audience to place the Christian religion first and next to that the British principles which all cherish so dearly.

Rich. Blain, M.P. for Peel, expressed his appreciation of the kind reception accorded to the visiting brethren from Peel. Canada stood for the principles of the Orange Order, which were the principles of civilization and Christianity. For his part he had no fear for those principles so long as Canada wanted to do and be something. The door of the Orange Lodge was open for all to come in and do something to perpetuate those principles. One of the dominant features of the procession in Toronto on Saturday was the large number of ladies, boys and girls who evidenced their interest in and sympathy with the work of the Order. The Orange Order was run on better business principles and was more powerful than at any other time in its history.

J. R. Fallis, M.P.P. for Peel, stated that he did not think he had ever seen as large an Orange procession outside the city of Toronto. Mr. Fallis, who spoke in a humorous vein, concluded a short but neat address, by giving the Orangemen of Dufferin County a hearty invitation to celebrate next 12th of July in Brampton.

C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., referred to the grave crisis in Ulster and expressed the hope that the speeches at the great demonstrations in Ulster would be delivered in moderation. Referring to the formation of the Ulster provisional government, he laid stress on the declaration of its purpose to preserve the Province of Ulster in trust for the King and the British Constitution. He hoped every Orange Lodge would consider it a duty to send money to aid the cause in Ireland. It was the Orange Order that had turned out the Tupper Government at Ottawa, because it sought to force Separate Schools on one of the Western Provinces and it was Manitoba Orangemen who had nearly defeated the Roblin government because of its truckling for the Roman Catholic vote.

R. J. Woods congratulated the people of Shelburne upon the success of their demonstration. He was an Orangeman from principle and because of the principles which the Order inculcates in the lives of men. The Order stood as a bulwark against the aggressions of Rome and was just as much needed to-day as at any time in the history of the world. He was proud of the fact that while there were 230 schools in Ontario which were teaching the French language at will, the Whitney Government had shown itself strong enough to withhold the grants from the schools. The Legislature should go a step further than withhold the school grants. It should pass some law to impose an adequate penalty for the violation of the regulations respecting the teaching of English.

John Best M.P., who was the last speaker, took the ground that the strength and influence of the Orange Order could not be measured by the number of its members. In Dufferin County nearly every man, woman or child was connected with the Order either by membership or sympathy. While he was the representative of the people of Dufferin he would pledge himself to oppose sending any part of the British army or navy to shoot down the men of Ulster.

The following prizes were awarded in connection with the Celebration:—

Lodge coming the greatest distance —No. 1181, Cooksville.

Lodge with the largest number of members in the procession—No. 330, Laurel.

Best marching Lodge—1st. No. 433, Campania; 2nd, No. 256, Grand Valley.

Best Fifer—1st, Geo. Patton, of 433, Campania; 2nd, Geo. A. Rusk, of 1062, Ruskview.

Best Drummer—1st, Thos. Totten, of 259, Mona Britons; 2nd, Willie Patton, of No. 9, Rosemont.

The lacrosse match between The Dufferins and Brampton intermediates attracted a large crowd of spectators, who were treated to a fast, clean game. The Dufferins, who played in excellent form, got the long end of a 13 to 6 score. The winners' line-up was :—Goal, Booth; point, Cranston; cover-point, Densmore; defence, Scott, Dawson; centre, Stevenson; home, Keith, Ewing; outside, Camplin; inside, Brawley.

Orange Lillies.

It was the 225th anniversary.

The churches provided excellent dinners.

7,000 or 8,000 people celebrated in Shelburne.

"Brampton in 1915" seems to be the popular slogan.

Markdale had 40 lodges and over 8000 visitors on Saturday.

Scarcely a lodge but had one or more ministers in its ranks.

L.O.L. 320 had no less than nine initiations Monday morning.

The Waldemar brethren were conspicuous in blue coats with red facings.

Alton, Charleston and Connor lodges celebrated in Markdale on Saturday.

The Grand Valley brethren were dressed in white and made a brave showing.

A report that Sir Edward Carson had been shot caused numerous anxious enquiries.

Shelburne Citizens' Band looked smart and neat in their new dark blue uniforms.

Campania lodge had a large turnout. The members were all dressed in white duck suits.

A carriage containing several veteran members was a much observed feature of the parade.

No drunks and scarcely a sign of liquor. What a change from the old days of the licensed bar.

It was noticeable that the Lodges are much stronger numerically than they were a few years ago.

John Reaburn, Mulmur's popular reeve, was one of the Marshalls on Monday. He made good, too.

Dundalk fife and drum band furnished music for Aaron L.O.L. 427, Orangeville. The band is a dandy.

"Black" men were much in evidence. This department of the Order must be flourishing in Dufferin.

The Prince of Wales boys made a big turnout this year. Their band was one of the best in the procession.

R. Blain, M.P., and "Jimmie" Fallis, M.P.P., Peel's two representatives, marched with the Brampton lodge.

C. R. McKeown, M.P.P. kept step with the 427 brethren and John Best M.P. walked with the Shelburne lodge.

Hornings Mills lodge turned out over 60 strong. The members wore collars instead of the conventional badges.

L.O.L. 635 took part in the Markdale celebration on Saturday. The H. S. Cadets bugle band accompanied the Lodge.

Mayor Mara, of Brampton, was in line with the Brampton lodge. Mayor Campbell, of Orangeville, walked with L.O.L. 427.

County Master H. A. Duke, of Orangeville, T. H. Reburn, of Markdale, and John Reburn, of Whitfield, acted as Marshalls.

The Big Store HILL & CO., Orangeville

After the manner in which they turned out on Monday the women of Dufferin will have to plead guilty to the charge of being sympathizers.

Prince of Wales L.O.L. 320 and band escorted L.O.L. 427 to the latter's hall Monday night. The kindness was keenly appreciated by the local lodge.

The Purple Valley brethren made a fine turnout. This Lodge has flourished under the Mastership of W. Bro. Jos. Island and is one of the best in the Orangeville district.

Wm. Tansley, of Rich Hill lodge, Amaranth, 80 years of age, and Samuel Brown, of Riverview lodge, aged 92 years, were the two oldest Orangemen at the Celebration.

Laurel lodge had over 100 members in line and was easily the largest lodge on parade. The lodge has a fine fife and drum band about 12 strong. Mr. Thos. Presley is the bandmaster.

When it comes to drumming, Bros. Sam. Roney, of Purple Valley lodge, and Wm. McCluskey, of 320, can hold their own with the best of them. The former handled the drum sticks for the Waldemar brethren.

Port Credit Band, which is now the 36th Regiment band, led the procession, marching in front of the Cooksville lodge. The band is a good one and looked well in the smart khaki uniforms of the 36th.

John Delaney, of Melville Cross, was run down and severely injured by an auto. He was taken to Dr. Smith's office and removed to Lord Dufferin hospital the following day. This was the only accident during the day.

Bro. Clarridge, of the Shelburne Economist, was in charge of Shelburne Citizens' Band and Bros. McIntyre, of the Dundalk Herald, did duty in the Dundalk Fife and Drum Band. Brers. McGuire, of The Banner, and Statia, of The Post, were blowing a bit too—about circulation. Very useful, these paper fellows on a big day.

On motion Council adjourned.

L. H. WILLIS, Clerk.

THOS. QUINN, Reeve.

ROSEMONT.

Most of our farmers are busy haying.

Traffic was very quiet on Monday after the Orangemen left for Shelburne and Beeton.

Mail will come to Mulmur Post Office now, as Mr. John Murphy has given up the office. All mail will now go to Rosemont.

Mr. Robt. Shaw put a new roof on his barn last week. Mr. Geo. Ladd, of Mono Centre, had the contract.

Mr. Carter Boyle held a very successful barn raising last week. Mr. George Snell had the contract. No person got hurt.

Our rural mail delivery is in full swing now on the Mono side. Every one is getting the delivery boxes ready.

Rev. G. L. and Mrs. Grey expect to return after their holidays this week. Services will be conducted in St. Luke's Church next Sunday as usual.

We had a beautiful rain on Sunday and the crops are looking fine now.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Hoks, of Toronto, visited at Mr. John McNabb's last week.

Miss Vera Pearson, of Toronto, is visiting her friend, Miss Lucy Irwin.

Miss Melissa Hunter, of Tilbury, is spending the summer holidays with her parents here. She was accompanied home by her friend, Miss Hill.

Miss M. J. Morrison is spending a few days with Mansfield friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Law spent Sunday with the latter's parents in Mansfield.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. McNabb spent Sunday at Mr. Robt. Wilson's, Mansfield.

Miss E. Pakenham, who has spent the past two weeks at the home of Mr. Wm. Irwin, has returned to her home in Toronto.

Miss Winnifred McNabb has gone on an extended visit to her sister's in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Miss Edna Hicks, of Toronto, is visiting her friend, Miss May Little.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Little and family spent Sunday with the former's sister, Mrs. Wm. Morrison, of Essa.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Christian, of Ennis, spent Sunday with the latter's brother, Mr. Russell McDowell.

WHITTINGTON.

Rich Hill L.O.L. attended divine service in the Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Callis, junior pastor of the Laurel circuit, delivered an excellent address. There was a large attendance at the service.

Rich Hill defeated Whittington at baseball on Friday night. The score was 5 to 1. Mr. W. J. Hamilton made an impartial and capable umpire.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet at 2 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

Work has been completed on the addition to the Methodist Church sheds. The addition will provide accommodation for three more teams.

Local Orangemen and their families and friends celebrated in Shelburne on Monday. A big day is reported.

ALTON

The junior Bible Class of the Alton Methodist Sunday School spent a very enjoyable evening on the lawn of their teacher, Mr. J. M. Dods, on Friday, July 3rd. The evening was spent in games etc., after which refreshments were served.

BLOUNT.

The Blount Women's Institute held a very successful meeting at the home of Mrs. W. McEwan, when all the members and many visitors were present. The programme consisted of a very interesting paper on "What are you doing to help your Institute," given by Mrs. John Reid; a reading by Miss M. McEwan. A dainty lunch was then served. The August meeting will be in the form of a picnic held in Mr. John Crozier's bush.

CAMILLA.

An Institute meeting worthy of mention was held at the home of Mrs. Jas. White, Tuesday, July 7th, when the Laurel Branch paid the Camilla Branch a visit and took charge of the meeting. Mrs. Richardson, County President, also President of the Laurel Branch, presided in her usual good form, and kept the meeting alive throughout. Excellent papers were read by the members; vocal and instrumental duets were much appreciated by those present, and a "Drawing Contest" excited much interest. Our hostess, Mrs. White, entertained us in her usual affable manner. She is one of our members ever ready to do her part and we feel greatly indebted to her on this occasion for her genial hospitality. We hope our Laurel friends will visit us again, and we would like our Camilla women friends, who are not members of the Institute, to come out and join us. Our motto, "For Home and Country," speaks for itself. You will find the meetings both sociable and instructive.

CARDWELL.

A very successful garden party was held by the congregation of the Herald Angel Church last Wednesday evening. The ladies provided a sumptuous repast as usual and a good programme was presented. Mr. Perrin, the comedian, provided a continuous round of fun. St. Mark's Church orchestra discoursed sweet music and Rev. Mr. Tebbs gave a very amusing address. The Misses Shaw sang in their usual good style and a party of young ladies from town presented a cleverly executed farewell scene. To all these for their kind assistance and to Mr. Geo. Duke for the use of his grounds many thanks are due. The attendance was good considering the many counter attractions. The ladies feel grateful for the generous patronage received. The proceeds were about $150.

CARDWELL.

Herald Angel Church annual garden party, which was held on Mr. Geo. Duke's grounds on July 7th, was a decided success. There was a large crowd present despite the fact that it threatened to rain during the early part of the evening. Much credit is due to the ladies for the excellent supper that was served. Mr. Fred Perrin, the well-known Toronto humorous entertainer, appeared at intervals and was well received by the audience. About $150 was realized.

Two of the neighboring Orange Lodges—Nos. 320 and 84—attended divine service here on Sunday. The Church was crowded to the doors and about 80 people were compelled to stand outside. The rector, Rev. H. A. Meek, gave a very impressive and instructive sermon on Orangeism. He also spoke on the Home Rule question for a few minutes. The rev. gentleman pointed out the great need for Orangemen to-day—a greater need than in years gone by.

Mr. and Mrs. James Leighton and daughter, Florence, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Jackson took in the Orange parade in Toronto on Saturday.

Mrs. Robert Jackson, of Toronto, is visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. Wm. Jackson, of Cardwell.

Mr. Hugh A. Jenkins and family, of Ingersoll, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jenkins, of Mono.

Miss Olive Bracken, of Caledon East, is visiting her uncle, Mr. Hugh Bracken.

Mr. Will White visited Miss South on Sunday.

Building a Barn.

Mr. A. C. Montgomery, one of East Garry's energetic young farmers, is busy erecting a fine bank barn this summer. The building is 70 by 55 and will make a large, roomy structure when completed. Wm. Reynolds built the stonework and Ed. McKibbon has the contract for the framework. Henry Reid and Geo. Duke captained the sides at the raising which took place a couple of weeks ago. The contest was a keen one and ended in a tie, so evenly were the opposing forces matched.

A handsome bronze tablet is being placed on the walls of the pumping station at the lake at Brampton. It commemorates the erection of the station and of the reservoir in 1912.

A CHEERFUL MAN.

Bill Barlow was an optimist,
His smile was always glad;
No evil turn could blast his joy,
And nothing make him sad.

A thief once took his overcoat,
Bill squinted up his eyes.
"I'll have to walk to keep me warm,
And then need exercise."

A sneak next stole his pocketbook,
But Bill did not feel glum.
"'Tis well," says he, "for now I have No money to buy rum."

The wind then took his hat away
And left his pate quite bare
"I've heard," says Bill, "that going so Will cause me to grow hair."

Last week a car cut off both feet,
Bill started to enthuse.
"I've read," says he, "that they have planned
To raise the price of shoes!"

There is one vacant house in Brampton—the gaol. The gaoler and turnkey pitch horseshoes in the yard for the exercise that is necessary to keep their appetites keen.

Four new teachers have been appointed to fill vacancies on the staff of the Orillia Collegiate Institute. Mrs. Frances A. Parker, of Gore Bay, and Miss M. L. Cook, of Toronto, were appointed teachers of English and history, at salaries of $1,100 and $1,000. Miss L. Deguerre, B.A., of Toronto, becomes teacher of French and German, at a salary of $1,000. Mr. David McGill, M.A., of Paisley, received the appointment of science master, at $1,500. Mr. McGill won the gold medal in chemistry at Queen's University for the term recently closed.

Lincoln's Life Line.

When former Senator Blackburn was a very young man he practiced law for a time in Chicago.

One day in the fifties he was engaged in a case against one of the big lawyers of the city. Blackburn was in straits. He floundered a bit, and a tall, homely man who was reading a newspaper near him gave him a hint. He floundered again, and the tall man gave him another hint.

Then the opposing lawyer jumped up.

"If your honor please," he shouted, "I desire to inquire whether Abraham Lincoln is an attorney of record in this case?"

"I'll answer that," said Mr. Lincoln, the future president. "I am not, but I am too soft hearted to sit here and watch this young man overboard without throwing him a plank!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Peeling Onions For a Living.

The profession of onion peeling is not one that obtains much notice, yet there are at least 500 women in the east end of London earning their living by removing onion skins. With practise they can make 4 or 5 shillings per day. Often they have been peeling since childhood, daughters succeeding mothers. It is not a profession you can learn in one lesson, for the skin must be removed by hand or the onion "juices" and is no use for pickling. The onions are always peeled in water. This is not to save the eyes of the peeler, but is done to keep the onion white.—London Express.

WEALTH OF HAIR

Parisian Sage Makes Thin Lifeless Hair Soft and Abundant.

Beautiful hair, thick, soft, fluffy, lustrous, and free from dandruff, is one of woman's greatest charms, yet so many have streaked, thin and lifeless hair and think there is no remedy. Pretty hair is largely a matter of care.

Frequent applications of Parisian Sage well rubbed into the scalp is all that is needed—it acts like magic. Try it tonight—you will really be surprised with the result. Not only will the hair become soft, fluffy, radiant with life and really doubly beautiful, but all dandruff disappears, falling hair and itching scalp cease—your head feels fine.

All druggists sell a large bottle of Parisian Sage for fifty cents. Get it from F. S. Pickering, he will refund the money if you are not satisfied.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

TURKISH HAREM LIFE

ANCIENT INSTITUTION GETTING RUDE SHOCKS THESE DAYS.

In Territory Lost by the Turks During the Balkan War the Harem Is Passing Rapidly Out of Existence —The Men Also Have Private Quarters Called the Selamlik—Simple Furnishings Are the Rule.

One of the changes effected by the Balkan war is the gradual elimination of the harem from the territory in the Balkans which has passed from under Turkish control.

There is scarcely an institution in the Orient in regard to which there are more misconceptions than the Turkish harem. It is the general opinion in the west that the harem of the average Turk may be of any size desired; that polygamy is limitless all over Turkey and that there is virtually no social life. However, the home life of the average Mohammedan is ideal, and the share taken by the three wives (for at three the limit is set for everyone but the Sultan) in the management of the household makes the burden of good housekeeping so light that the Turkish dames necessarily have time to idle and loll in the fashion in which we usually find them pictured.

The real harem is but seldom visited by men outside the family. The men's part of the house is unique enough, though, to repay a visit. To begin with, one does not enter a Turkish home directly from the highway—in fact there are no doors opening upon the street. The house is built to face upon a garden, surrounded by high walls and entered by a heavy gate. At this gate the knocker is set and no one would think of entering without waiting answer to the summons. This is done in order that the Turkish women, should there be any in the garden, may either let down their veils or retreat to cover. Wealthier homes have a porter stationed just outside the gateway to attend the summons.

Crossing the yard, one enters the home, the harem, or the selamlik, according as you are bound for the women's or the men's apartments. Curiously enough, while the harem is mentioned abroad constantly, the selamlik, which is quite as evident, is seldom heard of outside of the east. It is simply the men's apartment, as the other is milady's boudior. Its only essential difference is the fact that lattices are absent from its windows and that the low little stool of jujube paste, or Turkish delight, found in every well-regulated harem, is replaced by a larger dish of cigarettes. Cigarettes are smoked in the harem, too, but not in such quantities.

Both in the furnishing of the harem and of the men's apartments of the Turkish home, simplicity is the rule. Beds and chairs, except in the residences of some of the progressive young Turks, are unknown, being replaced by the divan, usually a mere bench extending around three of the four walls of the room and made comfortable with cushions. Tasty sofa pillows and log bolsters, worked in gilt and silver thread, adorn these and upon them the inmates lounge. In the centre of the room is the brazier, with charcoal, and here the water boils perpetually for the Turkish coffee. Little coffee mills, of the thickness of a pump handle and fitted with brass, lie about, ready for use.

Doors abound, but are always ajar and are often screened by heavy leather portieres, and windows are numerous. Rooms are much alike the household over; frequently there are but two or three, the lower floor of the dwelling being given over to the owner's bazaar.

Housework in such a home devolves largely on the first wife; she rules, the others obey.

The choice of a wife in Turkey is an interesting event. The usual custom in the selection of a queen of the harem is for the mother of the groom to note the pretty girls she meets from time to time and then tell her son about them. If some of her descriptions prove particularly alluring she or he will arrange to meet the father of the girl and settle with him upon the dowry. Not alone that, but the amount of alimony to be settled on the girl is also carefully fixed and put in writing by the cadi. Divorces may be had without any cause in Islam—the husband need only thrice tell the woman to go; but in every case he must then give her the stipulated dowry and she is forbidden to marry within three months of separation.

This, however, is the formal marriage. Latterly the spirit of the times has been creeping into European Turkey and intelligent Turks state that many a little girl remains faithful to some childhood playmate, and after attaining the age of 17 and putting the veil between her face and the world for all time, she will come to his bazaar and chat with him, and, providing no unfriendly face be nigh, will uncover her countenance and let him feast his eyes upon it.

Once a young couple are actually engaged the day is set when the groom shall come and get her. This may be the very next day or at most a month later; seldom much longer. The hadji is then summoned to the home of the bride and asks her if she is willing. Knowing her fate if refusing a match set by her father, many an unhappy girl remains mute at this question, but an anxious mother will shake her daughter's head and the law is satisfied. Thrice she or her representatives make this acquiescence and the law is fulfilled.

Leaving the home of the bride, the groom then repairs to the cleric establishment, where he announces the fact of his marriage. Usually he brings his wife to his parents' home to live, or, if she be a wealthy orphan, as are many Turkish girls, she will live in her home, with him as master and other wives to come.

A good head and industrious hand are worth gold in any land.

DEFECTIVE EYESIGHT

How It Helped the Lovers

By RYLAND BELL

"Old Grif" we called him, and on the surface the name fitted him admirably. He was Lieutenant Colonel Charles L. Griffin of the United States artillery and commanded the seacoast fort at which I was stationed. He didn't look like a griffin at all. He got the name from the fact that he was a strict disciplinarian and when on duty gave his orders in a sharp and rasping tone.

I was in love with his daughter, May, who really commanded, because, while her father ordered the rest of us about, his daughter had him completely under her thumb. His eyesight was defective, and this rendered him liable to make mistakes. Across the parade he couldn't tell a gun carriage from an ambulance, and he was constantly mistaking one person for another.

One morning Ned Perkins, a junior officer like myself, came to me looking as if he were getting ready for a funeral.

"What's the matter, old man?" I asked.

"Matter! Matter enough. Jennie Trowbridge is at Atlantic City for the week end. I wish to join her there, and Old Grif won't give me leave."

"HOW DO YOU DO, MR. PERKINS?" SHE EXCLAIMED.

"Why not?"

"He says that all the leaves that can be granted just now have been given."

Ned didn't tell me just why he was so anxious to go to see Miss Trowbridge, but he had confided enough before to enable me to infer the cause correctly. He was on the ragged edge with the young lady, while she was on the ragged edge between him and another fellow, a civilian, being uncertain which to accept. Ned hoped that if he could get to Atlantic City while she was there he could clinch the matter. If not he believed that the other man would in time get the girl. A civilian does not necessarily have to ask permission to go where he likes, but a soldier is on or off duty under the orders of a superior. If Perkins could have told the colonel the circumstances doubtless he would have got his leave. But how could he take his commanding officer into his confidence as to a love affair?

"Ned," I said, "are you in for any special duty for the next two days?"

"Yes, gun instruction."

"I wonder if I couldn't pass muster as you. We don't look much alike, but we're about the same height and build."

"It would necessitate your shaving off your mustache. I couldn't raise one at once."

"I would do that for you."

"But your hair is a molasses candy color, while mine is black as ink."

"Thank you for the compliment. I could dye my hair or rub some black pomade on it, which would do as well."

"Your scheme is a good one, but, gee willikins, suppose the colonel recognizes you as personating me?"

"He won't."

"No one will give me away. I'll risk that. But if Griffin should know that I have deliberately absented myself not only without permission, but after having been refused leave, he'd have me for charges, there'd be a court martial, and my army career would be blasted."

"Nothing risked, nothing gained. You are a soldier without fortune. Miss Trowbridge would make a good wife for an army officer, for she has money, and no soldier should marry a poor woman to bring up a family on the small pay we get. You go to Atlantic City, and if you get the girl you can stand being caught at absence without leave. Besides, the risk you are taking will be a trump card with the girl."

"I believe you're right," said Ned thoughtfully, "but if you are caught personating me what is to prevent trouble for you?"

"Oh, I'm safe enough. No court would convict me of a misdemeanor in helping a brother officer. Besides"—

"Besides what?"

I didn't enlighten him, but what I had in mind was that the colonel would not proceed against me without his daughter's permission, and I knew he would never get it.

That evening Perkins took a train for Atlantic City, and I shaved off my mustache, also making my hair a dull black. The next morning I was put on the parapet superintending the instruction of squads in handling the guns, when the colonel came along. He was showing the fort to some relatives who were staying at one of the hotels outside the walls. He came up to where I was standing near a gun and began to explain its workings to his friends. Presently he asked of me:

"Have these men been long under instruction, Mr."—

"Perkins. Yes, sir; they are becoming quite proficient."

The colonel stood not a dozen feet away from me. The look he gave me was, to say the least, searching. But I kept a stiff upper lip, and without noticing it walked away to another gun and began giving the sergeant in charge orders. The colonel passed on with his visitors, but I knew that he had noticed something about me that did not look like Perkins.

Before the time for gun instruction had passed I went to Perkins' quarters, thinking it possible that the colonel would send for him in order to get a closer inspection of him. I had scarcely arrived when there was a rap at the door, and there stood the colonel's orderly.

"The commander desires Lieutenant Perkins to report at the headquarters office," said the orderly, saluting.

"Very well," I replied, and the orderly withdrew.

I should have notified May of the game I had to play, so that if occasion required I might secure her assistance. I had called upon her, but she was dining out, and I did not see her. On my way to the colonel's office I passed his quarters and found her sitting on the porch. I joined her and told her of the critical position both of myself and of Perkins.

"Do you think your conscience would permit you to vouch for me?" I asked her.

"My conscience will permit a white lie if I can thereby benefit a friend," was the reply.

"Very well; I would suggest that you go to your father's office and be ready when I enter to make him believe I am Mr. Perkins."

She left me to put on a hat and when she came back took the walk leading to the office. I waited till I saw her enter, then followed her. When I reported to the colonel he had his pocketbook in his hand getting out some bills, which he gave to her. On seeing me she exclaimed:

"How do you do, Mr. Perkins? Where have you kept yourself for so long? You have not been to see me in an age."

It was plainly evident from the way the colonel blinked at me that he had sent for me to find out if I were the officer he had seen on the parapet. Evidently I did not look to him like Perkins, and I must have looked very like myself. But he could not trust his own eyesight and dared not take issue with his daughter as to my identity. Finally he looked an order to her to proceed on her way, but she declined to leave me unprotected and, resuming her seat, indicated that she would remain until her father had transacted his buiness with me. He had nothing of importance to communicate, and after giving me some improvised instructions as to points he desired the men instructed in concerning the guns he dismissed me.

I walked in the direction May would take on leaving the office and when she came out joined her, curious to know what if anything concerning me had passed between her and her father after my departure. She told me that he had seemed to be thinking of my resemblance to myself instead of to Perkins, but that to question her would be to confess that his eyesight was failing and he could not bring himself to do so.

Fearing that I might be required to pass a second examination I invited May to an excursion up the river that would keep me away for the rest of the day. I had no right thus to absent myself, but if the matter were raised, having been ministering to the pleasure of the commander's daughter, I felt assured that no notice would be taken of the breach of discipline.

May was good enough to remain away with me till the brightness of day had passed, and her father could not see in the dark. I thought that, since I was aiding my friend Perkins to propose for a wife, I might do something for myself in a like direction, and during the day I told May "my story." Since the matter had been pending between us for some time, I was not surprised at an acceptance.

Perkins waked me up before reveille the next morning to tell me that he had left Atlantic City and Miss Trowbridge long after midnight, having proposed and been accepted during the evening. He expressed deep gratitude for my efforts in his behalf, since the Trowbridge family, including Miss Jennie, were booked to sail in a few days on a six months' trip to Europe, and Ned's rival had engaged passage on the same steamer. Ned was confident that without my and May Griffin's valuable assistance he would have lost his sweetheart.

Soon after guard mount the colonel sent for Ned, who responded to the summons in propria persona. He told me that his commander looked at him with a puzzled expression, then, satisfied that he was himself, gave him an unimportant order.

The result of this single day's performance was a double wedding that occurred the next winter, in which May and I and Jennie and Ned figured as leading ladies and gentlemen.

Won In Spite of His Lawyer.

A once well-known attorney used to tell a good story on himself. He had been retained to defend a counterfeiter and advised him to plead guilty. His client did so, and as there was in the mind of the court a fixed idea that if a prisoner pleads guilty he does so because he has no attorney the judge asked him why he made that plea.

"Because my lawyer told me to."

"Did he give you any reason for it?"

"Yes. He told me I would have no show before this judge."

The court flared up and ordered a plea of not guilty to be entered, and the counterfeiter was acquitted.

Munchausen II. Unlucky.

Who was the original Munchausen that told the delightful "stretchers?" Raspe is commonly supposed to have founded his hero upon Hieronymus Karl Friedrich von Munchausen, who had fought with the Russians against the Turks and died in 1797. But the Rev. S. Baring-Gould has told the story of a swindler who appeared at Halberstadt in 1702 giving out his name as Baron Karl Friedrich Munchausen. He married a wealthy lady there and told the most astonishing yarns of his travels and adventures. The rest of his career was short. In June, 1763, he murdered his wife, and in August he was executed.—London Chronicle.

Risky Revenge.

Paganini, the wonderful violinist, had a narrow escape at Ferrara from a violent death. Enraged by some hissing from the pit, he resolved to avenge the insult and at the close of his program informed the audience that he would imitate the language of various animals. After having rendered the note of different birds, the mewing of a cat and the barking of a dog he advanced to the footlights and, saying, "This is for those who hissed!" imitated the braying of an ass. At this the occupants of the pit rose, rushed on to the stage and would probably have killed their calumniator had he not hastily retreated.

The Voice of Cash.

Apropos of a young girl's rich marriage an official said:

"Our girls don't marry disadvantageously as often as our boys do. In the whirl of love the female doesn't seem to get quite as dizzy as the male does.

"A pretty girl told me the other day that she was engaged to a very rich landowner.

"'Well, Well,' said I. 'And here we all thought you'd marry the eloquent young preacher who took you about so much last summer.'

"The girl smiled.

"'Deeds speak louder than words,' she said."

Cheap Wives.

Among the Ainus the price of a wife is a bear ham. The Kaffir price varies from four to eight oxen. In Uganda a wife can be obtained for a score of cartridges. The Australian black obtains his helpmate for her weight in butter, and in Turkestan the Tartars can buy as many wives as they please for a box of matches each.

Blown Window Glass.

Window glass is blown in the shape of long cylinders, which are cut open along one side and then placed on a stone in a hot furnace, where they gradually collapse and flatten out into a big sheet of glass. Often the glass breaks during this process, or even explodes, forming thousands of pieces, which shoot in all directions.

ROYAL YEAST
MAKES PERFECT BREAD

FRANCIS BACON'S HOME.

St. Albans Is a Mecca for Lovers of Great Englishman.

The town of St. Albans, which is the Mecca of the admirers of the great English statesman and scientist, gave him his peer's title. For this noted scientific spirit, this eminent lawyer, this acme of classical and scientific education and knowledge in Elizabeth's reign, was never really Lord "Bacon" at all, as he is so frequently miscalled to-day. He was "Lord Verulam," and it was from this old Roman name for his beloved St. Albans that he took his title. "Baron Verulam" and "Viscount St. Albans" were what he himself selected for his titles when the King (James I.) raised him to the peerage.

And from that time to this St. Albans, the charming ancient town which lies just within the borders of Hertfordshire, and is just far enough from London to be quite in the beautiful rich pasture lands of the country, has always been proud of her son and patron, Francis Bacon.

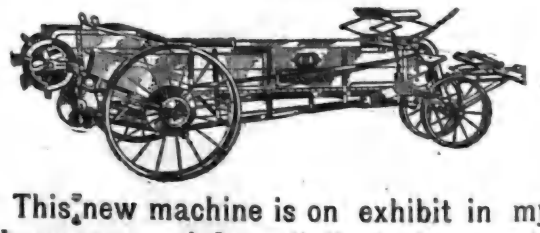
His name and fame prevade all St. Albans. You can hardly walk a hundred yards there even now without seeing or feeling it, although the great scientist and lawyer has been dead nearly three centuries. His family seat was at Gorhambury, which is only two miles distant from the centre of the city, and the way to which lies through some of the most delightful rich meadow land in England. The ruins of his house may yet be viewed when you reach Gorhambury, and all around is simply full of Bacon-lore, and Bacon-connections.

One of the most interesting of all the many attractive churches of the ancient city is St. Michael's, which lies at the foot of one of the quaintest old streets in England, and yet seems to be right in the centre of a real country village. For in this church stands the splendid tomb and effigy of Lord Bacon—if we may be forgiven for calling him by the familiar but wrong title—whilst beneath its chancel floor are buried the remains of one of the world's greatest and most learned sons. Hither, then, come pilgrims from all parts of the kingdom — nay, one may truthfully say from many lands afar also!—to pay homage at the shrine of him who gave literature and science so much that is remarkable, so great an endowments of genius as to make his name and fame immortal throughout the ages.

St. Michael's Church is itself a fitting spot to be the last resting-place of such a marvellous man. It dates back at least to 948, being one of the oldest churches existing in the land. It has yet intact the Saxon walls of nave and chancel, which were pierced later by the Normans to enlarge the church.

The immense thickness of these old walls still strikes the visitor with astonishment, though they have now become the pillars of the nave, so to speak. And, after the Normans had added the aisles, came along the Early English builders, who again pierced the Norman work, leaving their pointed arches to tell the story of the three successive improvements and building-styles of this ancient edifice.

In this church, too, are frescopaintings, with many curious pictures and prints which have come down to us from those far-off times. Here is an old hour-glass in a fine bethan pulpit; also excellent mi brasses going back to 1380 and



It gives the admirer of Bac thrill to look at all these fine vivals of olden days in this p age, and to remember that F Bacon himself must, as boy and many a time and oft have pore them and noted their beauti charms with loving eyes, though three hundred years have passed since those same eyes gazed on the venerable relics!

The monumental effigy which surmounts Bacon's tomb at the north side of the altar is really a fine piece of work, and is almost as perfect today as when first put up. The sculpture of the figure, the delicate tracery of face and clothes, are just as good as ever, and mark a high stage of artistic work in the way of carving.

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXI.—continued.

Hill listened to him patiently. When he had finished he left the room. They heard the street door close behind him. Brendon looked half fearfully towards Anna. She had drawn her chair close up to the fire, and her fingers were busy with her hat pins.

"What an exhausting afternoon!" she exclaimed brightly. "Do ring the bell for tea, please. You can stop, if you like. I believe Mary has muffins."

"Thank you," he said, dropping into a chair.

"As to all that nonsense we have been listening to," she continued, folding up her veil upon her knee, "well, the man's mad. There's no more to be said about it."

"Just so," he repeated. "The man must be mad."

CHAPTER XXII.

Annabel and "Alcide"

Lady Ferringhall lifted her eyes to the newcomer, and the greeting in them was obviously meant for him alone. She continued to fan herself.

"You are late," she murmured.

"My chief," he said, "took it into his head to have an impromptu dinner party. He brought home a few waverers to talk to them where they had no chance of getting away."

She nodded.

"I am bored," she said abruptly. "This is a very foolish sort of entertainment. And, as usual," she continued, a little bitterly, "I seem to have been sent along with the dullest and least edifying of Mrs. Montressor's guests."

Ennison glanced at the other people in the box and smiled.

"I got your note just in time," he remarked. "I knew of course that you were at the Montressor's, but I had no idea that it was a music hall party afterwards. Are you all here?"

"Five boxes full," she answered. "Some of them seem to be having an awfully good time too. Did you see Lord Delafield and Miss Anderson? They packed me in with Colonel Anson and Mrs. Hitchings, who seem to be absolutely engrossed in one another, and a boy of about seventeen, who no sooner got here than he discovered that he wanted to see a man in the promenade and disappeared."

Ennison at once seated himself.

"I feel justified then," he said, "in annexing this chair. I expect you had been snubbing him terribly."

"Well, he was presumptuous," Annabel remarked, "and he wasn't nice about it. I wonder how it is," she added, "that boys always make love so impertinently."

Ennison laughed softly.

"I wonder," he said, "how you would like to be made love to—boldly, or timorously or sentimentally."

"Are you master of all three methods?" she asked, stopping her fanning for a moment to look at him.

"Indeed, no," he answered, "Mine is a primative and unstudied manner. It needs cultivating, I think."

His fingers touched hers for a moment under the ledge of the box.

"That sounds so uncouth," she murmured. "I detest amateurs."

"I will buy books and a lay figure," he declared, "to practise upon. Or shall I ask Colonel Anson for a few hints?"

"For Heaven's sake no," she declared. "I would rather put up with your own efforts, however clumsy. Love-making at first hand is dull enough. At second hand it would be unendurable."

He leaned towards her.

"Is that a challenge?"

She shrugged her shoulders, all ablaze with jewels.

"Why not? It might amuse me."

Somewhat irrelevantly he glanced at the next few boxes where the rest of Mrs. Montressor's guest were.

"Is your husband here to-night?" he asked.

"My husband!" she laughed a little derisively. "No, he wouldn't come here of all places—just now. He cried, and then pleaded a political engagement. I was supposed to do the same, but I didn't."

"You know," he said with some hesitation, "that your sister is singing."

She nodded.

"Of course. I want to hear how she does it."

"She does it magnificently," he declared. "I think—we all think that she is wonderful."

She looked at him with curious eyes.

"I remember," she said, "that the first night I saw you, you spoke of my sister as your friend. Have you seen much of her lately?"

"Nothing at all," he answered.

The small grey feathers of her exquisitely shaped fan waved gently backwards and forwards. She was watching him intently.

"Do you know," she said, "that every one is remarking how ill you look. I too can see it. What has been the matter?"

"Toothache," he answered laconically.

She looked away.

"You might at least," she murmured, "have invented a more romantic reason."

"Oh, I might," he answered, "have gone further still. I might have told you the truth."

"Has my sister been unkind to you?"

"The family," he declared, "has not treated me with consideration."

She looked at him doubtfully.

"You promised faithfully to be there," he said slowly. "I loathe afternoon concerts, and——"

She was really like her sister, he thought, impressed for a moment by the soft brilliancy of her smile. Her fingers rested upon his.

"You were really at Moulton House," she exclaimed penitently. "I am so sorry. I had a perfect shoal of callers. People who would not go. I only arrived when everybody was coming away."

A little murmur of expectation, an audible silence announced the coming of "Alcide." Then a burst of applause. She was standing there, smiling at the audience as at her friends. From the first there had always been between her and her listeners that electrical sympathy which only a certain order of genius seems able to create. Then she sang.

Ennison listened, and his eyes glowed. Lady Ferringhall listened, and her cheeks grew pale. Her whole face stiffened with suppressed anger. She forgot Anna's sacrifices, forgot her own callousness, forgot the burden which she had fastened upon her sister's shoulders. She was fiercely and bitterly jealous. Anna was singing as she used to sing. She was chic, distinguished, unusual. What right had she to call herself "Alcide"? It was abominable, an imposture. Ennison listened, and he forgot where he was. He forgot Annabel's idle attempts at love-making, all the cul-de-sac gallantry of the moment. The cultivated indifference which was part of the armour of his little world fell away from him. He leaned forward, and looked into the eyes of the woman he loved, and it seemed to him that she sang back to him with a sudden note of something like passion breaking here and there through the gay mocking words which flowed with such effortless and seductive music from her lips.

Neither of them joined in the applause which followed upon her exit. They were both conscious, however, that something had intervened between them. Their conversation became stilted. A spot of colour, brighter than any rouge, burned on her cheeks.

"She is marvellously clever," he said.

"She appears to be very popular here," she remarked.

"You too sing?" he asked.

"I have given it up," she answered. "One genius in the family is enough. Don't you think so?"

"I suppose," he said, thoughtfully, "you heard what happened here the other night?"

"I read about it in the paper."

He fidgeted with his programme.

"The man must have been mad," he continued. "Declared he was her husband, you know, and wanted the magistrate to look at his marriage certificate."

"Do you mind," Annabel said, "talking about something else, or fetching back my recalcitrant cavalier."

"Anything except that," he murmured. "I was half hoping that I might be allowed to see you home."

"If you can tear yourself away from this delightful place in five minutes," she answered, "I think I can get rid of the others."

"We will do it," he declared. "If only Sir John were not Sir John I would ask you to come and have some supper."

"Don't imperil my reputation before I am established," she answered, smiling. "Afterwards it seems to me that there are no limits to what one may not do amongst one's own set."

"I am frightened of Sir John," he said, "but I suggest that we risk it."

"Don't tempt me," she said, laughing, and drawing her opera cloak together. "You shall drive home with me in a hansom, if you will. That is quite as far as I mean to tempt Providence to-night."

* * * * * *

Again on his way homeward from Cavendish Square he abandoned the direct route to pass by the door of Anna's flat. Impassive by nature and training, he was conscious to-night of a strange sense of excitement, of exhilaration tempered by a dull background of disappointment. Her sister had told him that it was true. Anna was married. After all she was a consummate actress. Her recent attitude towards him was undoubtedly a pose. His long struggle with himself, his avoidance of her were quite unnecessary. There was no longer any risk in association with her. His pulses beat fast as he walked, his feet fell lightly upon the pavement. He slackened his pace as he reached the flat. The windows were still darkened—perhaps she was not at home yet. He lit a cigarette and loitered about. It was absurd to hope that he might see her to-night, yet it was pleasant to linger there, even though the night was sharp with an early frost, and to remember that at any rate he might see her. He laughed once or twice at himself as he paced backwards and forwards. He felt like a boy again, the taste for adventures was keen upon his palate, the whole undiscovered world of rhythmical things, of love and poetry and passion seemed again to him a real and actual place, and he himself an adventurer upon the threshold.

Then a hansom drove up, and his heart gave a great leap. She stepped on to the pavement almost before him, and his blood turned almost to ice as he saw that she was not alone. A young man turned to pay the cabman. Then she saw him.

"Mr. Ennison," she exclaimed, "is that really you?"

There was no sign of embarrassment in her manner. She held out her hand frankly. She seemed honestly glad to see him.

"How odd that I should almost spring into your arms just on my doorstep!" she remarked gaily. "Are you in a hurry? Will you come in and have some coffee?"

He hesitated, and glanced towards her companion. He saw now that it was merely a boy.

"This is Mr. Sydney Courtlaw — Mr. Ennison," she said. "You are coming in, aren't you, Sydney?"

"If I may," he answered. "Your coffee's too good to refuse."

She led the way, talking all the time to Ennison.

"Do you know, I have been wondering what had become of you," she said. "I had those beautiful roses from you on my first night, and a tiny note but no address. I did not even know where to write and thank you."

"I have been abroad," he said. "The life of a private secretary is positively one of slavery. I had to go at a moment's notice."

"I am glad that you have a reasonable excuse for not having been to see me," she said good-humouredly. "Please make yourselves comfortable while I see to the coffee."

It was a tiny little room, daintily furnished, individual in its quaint colouring, and the masses of perfumed flowers set in strange and unexpected places. A great bowl of scarlet carnations gleamed from a dark corner, set against the background of a deep brown wall. A jar of pink roses upon a tiny table seemed to gain an extra delicacy of colour from the sombre curtains behind. Anna, who had thrown aside her sealskin coat, wore a tight-fitting walking dress of some dark shade. He leaned back in a low chair, and watched her graceful movements, the play of her white hands as she bent over some wonderful machine. A woman indeed this to love and be loved, beautiful, graceful, gay. A dreamy sense of content crept over him. The ambitions of his life, and they were many, seemed to lie far away, broken up dreams in some outside world where the way was rough and the sky always grey. A little table covered with a damask cloth was dragged out. There were cakes and sandwiches—for Ennison a sort of Elysian feast, long to be remembered. They talked lightly and smoked cigarettes till Anna, with a little laugh, threw open the window and let in the cool night air.

Ennison stood by her side. They looked out over the city, grim and silent now, for it was long past midnight. For a moment her thoughts led her back to the evening when she and Courtlaw had stood together before the window of her studio in Paris, before the coming of Sir John had made so many changes in her life. She was silent, the ghost of a fading smile passed from her lips. She had made her way since then a little further into the heart of life. You even now there were so many things untouched, so much to be learned. To-night she had a curious feeling that she stood upon the threshold of some change. The great untrodden world was still before her, into which no one can pass alone. She felt a new warmth in her blood, a strange sense of elation crept over her. Sorrows and danger and disappointment she had known. Perhaps the day of her recompense was at hand. She glanced into her companion's face, and she saw there strange things. For a moment her heart seemed to stop beating. Then she dropped the curtain and stepped back into the room. Sydney was strumming over a new song which stood upon the piano.

"I am sure," she said, "that you mean to stay until you are turned out. Do you see the time?"

"I may come and see you?" Ennison asked, as his hand touched hers.

"Yes," she answered, looking away. "Some afternoon."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"This is not the End."

"I said some afternoon," she remarked, throwing open her warm coat, and taking off her gloves, "but I certainly did not mean to-day."

"I met you accidentally," he reminded her. "Our ways happened to lie together."

"And our destinations also, it seems," she added, smiling.

"You asked me in to tea," he protested.

"In self-defence I had to," she answered. "It is a delightful day for walking, but a great deal too cold to be standing on the pavement."

"Of course," he said, reaching out his hand tentatively for his hat, "I could go away even now. Your reputation for hospitality would remain under a cloud though, for tea was distinctly mentioned."

"Then you had better ring the bell," she declared, laughing. "The walk has given me an appetite, and I do not feel like waiting till five o'clock. I wonder why on earth the curtains are drawn. It is quite light yet, and I want to have one more look at that angry red sun. Would you mind drawing them back?"

Ennison sprang up, but he never reached the curtains. They were suddenly thrown aside, and a man stepped out from his hiding-place. A little exclamation of surprise escaped Ennison. Anna sprang to her feet with a startled cry.

"You!" she exclaimed. "What are you doing here? How dare you come to my rooms!"

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

ADVERTISING turns over stocks rapidly, and therefore multiplies profits. This means that prices in a shop which advertises can be short rather than long.

of this you may be sure: Prices in a shop which advertises are not MORE than in a shop which does not advertise. The chances are that they are oftentimes lower.

This, also, is generally true: You will find better goods, better value and better service in those shops which turn over their stocks rapidly. This means, as a general thing, shops which advertise.

A NOTE TO MERCHANTS.

Advertising costs you nothing—it is paid for by the profits on increasd sales.

Advertising is easy—it is simply saying in writing what you say to the customers in your shop.

Whiskey and Long Life.

It is the Exception that Proves the Rule.

To the Editor:—

Some unknown person has sent me a newspaper clipping, telling of an Irishman who lived to be 108 years old although he was fond of his glass. Yes, we occasionally hear of men of such wonderful vitality that they can withstand the injurious influence of drink and live to a good old age. When such cases are investigated the facts are almost invariably found to be very sad. Their children, if they have any, are generally condemned to lives of suffering for the ignorance or the selfish indulgence of the parents. The great Charles Kingsley said that the children of such parents are "damned from their mother's womb." Dr. McNichol, appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate this question from a scientific standpoint says, that for every child of total abstaining parents that dies before it reaches two years of age there are five children of drinking parents that die before that age. Statistics show that while 82 children of abstaining parents grow up into good useful citizens only seventeen children of drinking parents do so. Of course there are exceptions where the mother has been sober and of a powerful constitution but they are rare. Our own experience confirms that.

I know of a man who lived to be nearly ninety years of age. He was a constant drinker but never was drunk. Out of a family of ten children only three lived to mature life and of these three only one could be said to be fairly healthy. The others were nervous weaklings. That is only one of the many such cases that I have known.

How greedily some people pounce on one isolated case where a drinking man has lived to be old but seem to be perfectly blind to the many examples all round them of men who have gone to an early grave or worse through drink.

SERMON TO ORANGEMEN.

Local Lodges Attended Service in Methodist Church on Sunday Morning.

Rev. G. W. Robinson Addressed Members of the Order.

Members of the two town Orange Lodges and a number of brethren from neighboring lodges attended divine service in the Methodist Church on Sunday morning. The brethren assembled at the Orange Hall on West Broadway, whence they marched in a body to the church, occupying the centre pews. The parade strength was about 100. The members of the Order were addressed by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Robinson, who delivered an excellent discourse from the text, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus," Philippians 2:5.

The pastor held that the statement which Paul made to the Church at Philippi was equally applicable to the Church as a whole. It was equally an example for the Church as for the individual. The mind of Christ was the building of a kingdom in this world that was not of the world. Christ did not aim at temporal power, but sought to build a church that was spiritual. The plea for temporal power was the last of the three great temptations to which Christ was subjected in the wilderness and it was significant that when he turned this aside Satan left him and Angels came and ministered unto Him. The opportunity to acquire temporal power was the greatest temptation that Christ met and was a warning to the Church that this would be one of the greatest temptations that it would have to fight. The Church of Rome had always aimed at temporal power and had sought to build up its fortunes by strategy and the strength of the sword rather than by the spiritual weapons of the Kingdom of Christ. Its failures had been largely along this line. It was because of this that Rome had failed in Japan where it had planted the first missionaries of the Cross. It was because of this that it had failed in France and was failing in Italy. To-day the Church of Rome has more power in Quebec than in either France or Italy. To-day in Canada, Rome, forgetful of the fact that Christ, the head of the Church, has declared that "My Kingdom is not of this world," is still seeking after temporal power. In this country, as in other lands, the time will surely come when the Romish Church will work her own destruction and when those within that church will rise up and refuse to longer yield to the authority of priests and Pope. This constant striving after temporal power was perhaps Rome's greatest mistake. Another great mistake the Romish Church makes is that she has always tried to use men to serve her ends, whereas Christ came into the world not to be ministered unto but to minister. It makes a great difference whether a Church is established to serve its own interests. The thought in the minds of those in authority in the Roman Catholic Church has been to build up the Church and make it powerful. No Church can afford to do this at the expense of service. If this is to be taken as the purpose of the Church then crime can be committed under the cloak of religion. This naturally follows just as soon as the welfare of the visible Church is made the supreme object of church effort. To illustrate his point Mr. Robinson referred to the holding up of an officer of a Masonic Lodge in Montreal for the purpose of securing his books and the subsequent acquittal of the offenders by a French Roman Catholic jury on the ground that their offence had been for the service of the Church. He also referred to the baneful influence of the Ne Temere decree, which had broken up homes and poured out shame upon women—all in the name of the Church. Under the Roman Catholic system men were made to serve the Church instead of the Church serving and helping men. Justice, truth, liberty, honesty, integrity and all other things that helped to uplift men were sacrificed whenever the interests of the Church demanded that they should go by the board. It was the mind of Christ to make truth plain and easy to understand, but the Church of Rome refuses the individual liberty of thought and action and throws around truth a veil of superstition and empty formality.

Mr. Robinson quoted numerous instances to show that Rome was the foe of educational progress. In Spain the best paid teachers received only $100 a year while the professional bull fighter was able to command an annual income of $75,000. One-third of the people of the city of Lisbon could neither read nor write. Father Roche pictured Ireland as happy and contented and England as seething with unrest and discontent. How far this statement was from the truth was shown by the fact that in the last fifty years the population of the United Kingdom had practically doubled. In the same period the population of Ireland had decreased 33 1-3 per cent. largely owing to the poverty and discontent of the Irish people.

The speaker was not altogether satisfied with the word "Protestant" because the great evangelical churches stand for much more than mere protest against the erroneous teachings of the Church of Rome. They stand for the living faith of the Word of God and for cardinal doctrines of religion that are of the first importance. What is needed to-day is men of strong convictions who through the power of their convictions will influence the world for good. Despite his keenness and greatness of intellect Erasmus failed where Martin Luther succeeded because he lacked the deep and strong convictions which Luther possessed. Oliver Cromwell and William of Orange were men who shaped the destinies of nations, largely because they were men of intense convictions. What Protestant forces of the present day need is men who have strong and deep convictions and who are striving to learn the mind of Christ and do His work in this world.

ROBBING WOMEN OF THEIR HEALTH

Anaemia Unless Checked Passes Into Hopeless Decline.

Anaemia is like a spectre that steals on you unawares and drives all happiness out of existence. It is a thief that robs you of your life and energy. Thousands of women in this country are the victims of anaemia (that is, bloodlessness), which spares neither rich or poor, young or old. It robs woman of her health, her vitality, her beauty—of everything that gives a woman her charm. The chief symptoms of this trouble include a distaste for food, prostrating headaches, extreme languor, loss of weight, nervousness, pale cheeks, lips and gums, heart palpitations, dizziness and a constant feeling of wretchedness.

The only way to effect a cure is to increase the blood supply—to make it pure, rich and red. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved thousands of young girls and women from the early fate that threatened them through anaemia's ravages, for these pills enrich the blood, stimulate the circulation, nourish the nerves, and restore the energy and perfect health that make women attractive. If you are a victim of bloodlessness in any way, do not let it run into a hopeless decline but begin the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to-day. The following bit of evidence proves the worth of this medicine. Mrs. Maurice Sims, Liverpool, N.S., says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a blessing to me. About two years ago I was so badly run down that I had to give up all work and go to bed. My husband and parents were much worried about me as they thought I was going into consumption. The doctor who was attending me changed his medicine several times, but it did me no good and I began to feel very much discouraged myself. One day a friend advised me to try Dr. William's' Pink Pills and I decided to do so. In a few weeks I felt much better and I continued taking the pills for a couple of months until I was again in perfect health. I believe that if I had not taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I would not have survived, and I shall always be very grateful for what they have done for me."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Green Lake Bass.

Bass fishing is proving a popular pastime at Green Lake, near Charleston, these days, and some fine catches are reported. Last Saturday W. B. Dods landed a particularly fine fish. It weighed 5¼ lbs., was 21 inches long and girthed 14 inches. Dr. Thomas, of Caledon, examined some of the bass and in one or two instances found them infected with a species of tapeworm, termed, technically, "dibothriocephalus latus." The name sounds bad enough, but we are informed it is no worse than the intestinal parasite itself. The worm thrives in the intestinal organs of human beings, and has been known to attain a length of 40 feet and an age of 21 years. Each of the parasites is capable of producing from one to ten million of its kind, and—but what's the use? Who want's bass, anyway?

Change in H. S. Staff.

Mr. G. E. Evans has resigned his position as Classical Master on the High School staff in order to accept a similar position in Picton High School. The H. S. Board has filled the vacancy by engaging Mr. E. C. McQuarrie, B.A., at a salary of $1300. Mr. McQuarrie, who is highly spoken of as a successful teacher, has been acting principal of Chesley High School since the New Year. In addition to performing the duties of Classical Master, he will act as Physical and Cadet Instructor.

Neuralgia of the Heart

This Letter Tells of Wonderful Change Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. James G. Clark, Fosterville, York County, N.B., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from what the doctors said was neuralgia of the heart. The pain started in the back of the neck and worked down into the region of the heart. Though I had taken a lot of medicine of one kind and another, I could not get anything to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"When I began this treatment I could not rest in bed, except by sitting upright, on account of the dreadful pains about the heart and the quick, loud beating. The change which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made in my condition is wonderful. It has entirely overcome these symptoms, and is making me strong and well. If this statement will help to relieve the suffering of others, you are at liberty to use it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a true tonic and the greatest of nerve restoratives. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

CALGARY OIL FIELD

As It Seems to a Petrolea Man Who Made His Fortune in Oil.

A Cobalt despatch says:—In view of the fact that Mr. J. L. Englehart, chairman of the T. & N. O. Commission, made his fortune in oil at Petrolea, his views on the Calgary oil boom are well worth knowing. "There is oil in Alberta. There is no doubt about that. But it has not been discovered yet. It is my firm belief that Calgary will hardly prove an oil centre, and I do not think that the fields to the south of that city will ever turn out to be oil producers. The one great obstacle in the way of oil—not gas, but crude oil—ever being produced in paying quantities, is the formation of the country. The formation is bad for the production of oil. It is too much of a fractured rock country, which is a poor sign at the outset. If the country were less fractured I would have more faith in it. Canada needs crude oil very badly, and I believe that if it is discovered in paying quantities it will be in the Peace River district, away up north of Edmonton. Anyone who has studied the oil problem knows that there has been oil in many parts of Alberta for generations, but whether there is sufficient to make it worth while to go to the expense of drilling for it is a different matter. If you have read anything about the life of Mackenzie, the explorer, you will remember that he discovered oil floating on the river.

"We want oil, not gas. There is gas in Southern Alberta. What has been discovered recently appears to be just a wet gas, a light-colored and amber-colored gasoline, but that is not 'oil.' There is absolutely nothing definite in the recent discovery. The people of Calgary or thereabouts have become excited about oil which has not been found. They have purchased the stock of companies which hardly have one chance in a hundred of making good as crude oil propositions. It is most unfortunate that there should be so much dreaming on the possibility of finding oil. It is bad for the country. These dreamers are apt to lose their money. If reports are to be accepted they are not buying crude oil stocks at all."

Their Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John Byers, of Marysville, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Monday. A happy family reunion commemorated the event. Their sons and daughters—William Byers, Weidemar, James and Wesley Byers, Toronto, Mrs. Jos. McBride and Mrs. W. O. Nodwell, East Garafraxa—were all present as was Mrs. Byers' sister, Mrs. Ellen McKitrick, the bridesmaid of fifty years ago. Their family presented the happy couple with a handsome rocker and a rug in token of their hearty good wishes. Mr. and Mrs. Byers are both enjoying good health and look good for many years yet. Mr. Byers is a Fenian Raid veteran and received his $100 grant from the Ottawa government a year or so ago. The Banner joins the numerous friends in extending its good wishes and congratulations.

MRS. JOSHUA WILCOX

Death of an Old Resident of Orangeville in Toronto.

Mrs. Sarah J. Wilcox, relict of the late Joshua Wilcox, of Orangeville, who passed away at her residence, 68 Albanbra Ave., Toronto, on June 29th, at the age of 72, was a daughter of John Walker, who, with his family, came to Canada from Derbyshire, England, and settled on a farm near Guelph in 1835. Sixteen years later the family moved to the township of West Garafraxa. In the year 1871 the deceased was married to Joshua Wilcox, of Orangeville, and lived during her married life on a farm situated on the Prince of Wales Rd., near Orangeville. In 1878 Mrs. Wilcox was left a widow; her husband being suddenly removed from her side as the result of an accident. She was left with three small children to rear and care for. She was a faithful guardian and mother as shown in the lives of her children, who now "rise up and call her blessed." Mrs. Wilcox and family moved to Toronto about twenty-five years ago. At the early age of seventeen she was converted and became a member of the Methodist Church. During the whole of her life-time she was an active Christian and found it her joy to distribute tracts, visit the sick, pray with the anxious, and entreat the wayward to turn to Christ for salvation and real peace. She was one of God's quiet workers and for those who live as she did with her whole talents dedicated to God's service, death is only the gate of life—the path from joyous work in this world to greater capacities and opportunities in the other. Her interest in missions, both home and foreign, dates back many years and to these as well as to other live lines of Christian service she gave an untiring interest. Her home was a place of rest and help to many a worn and tired missionary. Many a distressed and anxious soul through her influence was given fresh courage to fight bravely the good fight. Her life indeed was a benediction to all with whom she came in contact.

A memorial service was held on Tuesday evening, June 30th, at her late residence and was conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. E. Reid, assisted by Rev. Geo. E. Fisher, a former pastor and an old family friend, Rev. R. W. Roffe, all of whom paid high tribute to her exalted Christian character. The remains were taken to Orangeville for interment and were laid beside those of her husband in the Forest Lawn cemetery.

Although one of a large family, she is survived by but one sister, Mrs. P. Lowry, of Mooredield, Ont. Her three children, all of whom survive her, are Mr. Walker Wilcox, missionary, of Shanghai, China, Mr. Cresswell Wilcox, engraver, Toronto, and a daughter, Miss Birdie at home.

The McKeown Trophy

Mr. C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., has donated a handsome trophy to the Orangeville Bowling Club for competition at the annual tournament next month. The trophy is a beauty and the bowlers owe Mr. McKeown a debt of gratitude for his generosity.

WINGHAM WON.

Dufferins Were Beaten by 6 to 4 Yesterday Afternoon

Wingham intermediates defeated the Dufferins by 6 to 4 on Idylwyld Park yesterday afternoon. The teams were evenly matched, but the visitors were heavier and used their bodies to good effect. The referee, A. Fleming, a Toronto man, was very much to the bad. So rank were some of his decisions that the spectators became incensed and he would undoubtedly have been mobbed had it not been for some of the cooler heads. Orangeville won at Wingham last week by 10 to 7, but as it is games, not goals, that count the teams are tied on the round. They are playing a double schedule, so that there are still two games to come. The match attracted a large crowd. With an impartial referee it would have been an excellent game The line-up:—

Wingham—Goal, P. Knechtel; point, W. H. Gurney; coverpoint, C. McLean; 1st defence, H. Williams; 2nd defence, W. Vanwyck; centre, W. Elliott; 2nd home, W. McCoy; 1st home, T. D. Holmes; outside home, M. O. Fink; inside home, M. H. Belcher.

Dufferins—Goal, B. Booth; point, R. Scott; coverpoint, C. Morrison; 1st defence, D. Densmore; 2nd defence, V. Dedrick; centre, Earl Stevenson; 2nd home, W. Ewing 1st home, H. Keith; outside home, J. Dawson; inside home, H. Camplin.

Death at Norwood.

Thomas Midgeley, a C.P.R. section foreman and a onetime resident of Orangeville, died at Norwood, Ont., early on Sunday morning, July 5th. Deceased, who was a brother-in-law of Mrs. John A. Ellis, moved from here about 18 years ago. He was 57 years of age and had been in ill-health for a year. A widow and a family of seven survive.

Death of Wm. T. Gordon

Word was received here late in the day of the death of Wm. T. Gordon, a grandson of Mr. W. J. Gordon, Prince of Wales St., in Calgary General Hospital on Monday. Deceased, who was 25 years of age and unmarried, was homesteading near Calgary and had been in the west five years. He was admitted into the hospital on Monday morning and died a few hours later from heart collapse. The remains are being brought to his former home in Owen Sound for burial. Howard Gordon, Owen Sound, Evelyn, in Ft. William, Garfield and Irene, Orangeville, are the surviving brothers and sisters. The sympathy of many friends is extended to the relatives in their bereavement.

Miss Lucy Atkinson.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Atkinson, lot 5, 7th line, east, Mono, was thrown into gloom this week by the death of their daughter, Lucy, who passed away on Sunday after four months' illness from rheumatic fever. Deceased, who was 21 years of age, was a bright, companionable girl and a favorite amongst her friends, by whom her untimely death will be deeply mourned. She was quite a clever musician and under the tuition of Miss McMaster had taken her first year Conservatory examination. She was busy preparing for her second year exam., when overtaken by her fatal illness. She bore her last sickness patiently and with exemplary fortitude. She is survived by her parents, two brothers, John and James, and three sisters, Annie, Edna and Mabel. These have the sympathy of the whole community in their grief over their great loss. There was a large attendance at the funeral, which was held to St. John's cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. Over one hundred rigs followed the remains from the home to their last resting place. Impressive services were held by Rev. D. B. Langford, assisted by Rev. J. A. Black. The pallbearers were six cousins—Messrs. Robert, Samuel and Elgin Holmes, Jackson Glassford, Herman McFarland and Samuel Quinn. Numerous floral offerings testified to the sorrow and sympathy of friends.

Moonlight Excursion.

The Bible Classes of Cheltenham intend running a moonlight excursion to Toronto Island on the evening of Thursday, July 23rd, leaving Orangeville at 5 p.m and arriving in Toronto at 7.30 p.m. The excursion train will stop at all stations between Orangeville and Streetsville Jct. Returning the special will leave the Union Station at 11.30 p.m. For full particulars see posters.

When Statesmen Ran Races.

When Charles James Fox stayed at Chatsworth in 1777 foot racing was a favorite pastime among the guests at country houses. To the intense delight of his hostess, Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, the Whig leader proved the victor in two races, which, she writes, "considering his not having been to bed and his size, is doing a great deal." Seeing that Fox, although under thirty, then weighed close on twenty stone, his performance did him credit. The duchess also derived keen enjoyment from his conversation. "He talks like a brilliant player at billiards—the strokes follow one another, piff-paff." — London Tatler.

Smartness.

When people who think they are smart meet people whom they recognise as smarter than themselves they call them "disagreeable." — Detroit News.

The thoughts of his heart, these are the wealth of a man.—Burmese Saying.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realise that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women for forty years how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast. If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It will pay you to do so. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Cunnington and daughter, Alice, of Medicine Hat, are renewing acquaintanceships in town and vicinity. Mr. Cunnington, who was at one time a farmer in Caledon, was in business in Orangeville for some years before he succumbed to the lure of the West. He has the cheery optimism and hopeful outlook of the typical Westerner and while he still has a warm spot in his heart for his native Province, he would not think of returning to Ontario to live. Prospects are rather mixed in the West this year. In Southern Alberta there has been a very meagre rainfall and the crops will be light. Elsewhere the farmers, Mr. Cunnington says, are likely to reap a good average harvest. Mr. and Mrs. Cunnington will not return to the West until late in August.

Passed Primary Piano.

Misses Lillian Faulkner, of Caledon, and Dora Cooney, of Laurel, were successful in passing their primary piano with first-class honors at the recent examinations of the Toronto College of Music. The young ladies, who are pupils of Miss Hazel Trimble, of Laurel, are to be congratulated upon their success.

Successful Pupils.

The following pupils of Miss McMaster have been successful in passing the recent examination of the Toronto College of Music.

Senior Rudiments—Misses Kathleen Fleming, Lillian Harkness and Edith Anderson, each obtaining first-class honors.

Second Year Piano—Miss Kathleen Fleming and Miss Lillian Harkness.

A fact worthy of mention is that Miss Fleming's name appeared second in order of merit in the Senior Rudiments Examination.

LOWER SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS.

Names of Successful Dufferin and Peel County Pupils.

The Department of Education has announced the results of the examinations as follows:—Entrance into the Model schools, senior high school entrance, senior public school graduation diploma, lower school examination for entrance into the Normal schools and faculties of education. The certificates of successful candidates and the statements of marks of those who failed that have not already been mailed to principals or inspectors will be sent in course of a few days.

The appeal examiners have already reread the answer papers of each candidate whose marks appear to justify an appeal. Where such candidate has failed his statement of marks will be stamped as re-read, and no further appeal will be allowed. In all other cases of failure appeals will not be refused, if made before September 1st, and accompanied by the fee of $2.00. In view of all the precautions taken, however, it is most unlikely that such appeals would succeed. Candidates are recommended to consult their principals as to the advisability of entering appeals.

The successful Dufferin and Peel pupils in the lower school exams. are:—

DUFFERIN—A. V. Atkinson, S. Batters, V. O. Claridge, G. E. Dyer, J. L. Edwards, A. A. Everson, V. Fewster, E. T. Hewson, T. R. King, J. Luxton, C. M. McCartney, G. M. McVanel, W. McCulloch, N. L. McCulloch, J. W. Nodwell, R. S. Pratt, A. B. Patterson, M. Rayfield, M. Speers, J. B. Taylor, G. R. Thompson, D. Tweedy, R. C. Wansbrough, B. Williamson.

PEEL—F. H. Burbidge, G. D. Darker, I. N. A. Drinkwater, H. R. Goulding, H. J. Graham, G. Hamilton, H. H. Heggie, J. F. Kennedy (hon.), F. I. Kennedy, T. Marshall, M. McKechnie, M. McCaugherty, M. E. Nealy, J. C. Passmore, L. M. Passmore, P. M. Perry (hon.), M. M. M. Quinn, M. P. Stewart, H. J. Watson (hon.).

A STRANGE STORY.

Orangeville Girl Tells of a Remarkable Experience.

If the story she tells is true Elsie Hunter, a 15-year-old Orangeville girl, had a thrilling experience and a narrow escape from death on Monday morning. The girl, who is a daughter of Mrs. W. J. Hunter, has been living with Mr. W. J. Walker, William street, for five years or longer. Mrs. Walker called her between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning. When she stepped outside to get some wood to light the kitchen fire she says she was startled by sounds behind the woodpile. An instant later a man, whom the girl did not recognize, stepped out and approaching her threw a cloth over her head and face, picked her up, placed her in a vehicle, which was standing nearby, and drove off at a rapid pace. She was too frightened to scream or cry out, and has no recollection of what occurred until she found herself at Island's Lake, a small body of water about two miles north-east of Orangeville. Here, the girl says, the man attempted to drown her, using a pole for the purpose of pushing her out into the water. When she found herself in the water she began to scream and struggle. Her captor evidently became frightened, for he dropped the pole and ran away. She managed to get out of the lake and made her way back to town, reaching the Walker domicile late in the forenoon in an exhausted and bedraggled condition.

As soon as they learned the girl's story the local authorities commenced a careful investigation. Up to the present, however, they have not discovered anyone who saw anything of the man and rig. Chief Marshall, Dr. T. H. Henry and other parties visited the lake and found evidences of a struggle at the point where the girl says she was shoved into the water. The grass was trampled along the bank, the pole was found on the water's edge and footsteps of a child or girl were visible for some distance out in the water. Farmers in the neighborhood had not seen anything of a man or rig about the lake, despite the fact that it is almost impossible to approach the water from either side without being observed from some of the adjoining farm houses. Neither could the searchers discover any traces of a man or rig about the lake. These are facts which strongly discredit the girl's story and it is now thought that she made the journey out to the lake alone and of her own volition. What her object could have been can only be guessed at. It is almost certain that she could not have been kidnapped in broad daylight, even at such an early hour, without some person getting sight of the kidnapper.

By-Law No. 436

A BY-LAW TO RAISE $10,000.00 TO AID IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF TILE, STONE OR TIMBER DRAINS.

The Council of the Municipality of Amaranth, pursuant to the provisions of the Tile Drainage Act, enacts as follows:—

1. That the Reeve may, from time to time, subject to the provisions of this by-law, borrow on the credit of the Corporation of the said Municipality, such sum, not exceeding in the whole $10,000.00 as may be determined by the Council, and may, in manner hereinafter provided, issue debentures of the said Corporation in sums of $100.00 each for the amount so borrowed, with coupons attached as provided in section 5 of the said Act.

2. That when the Council shall be of opinion that the application of any person to borrow money for the purpose of constructing a tile, stone or timber drain should be granted in whole or in part, the Council may, by resolution, direct the Reeve to issue debentures as aforesaid, and to borrow a sum not exceeding the amount applied for, and may lend the same to the applicant on the completion of the drainage works.

3. A special annual rate shall be imposed, levied and collected over and above all other rates upon the land in respect of which the said money shall be borrowed, sufficient for the payment of the principal and interest as provided by the Act.

Passed this 6th day of July, A.D. 1914.

A. E. WILLIAMS, Reeve.
E. HAMILTON, Clerk.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

A good sauce for stewed fruit is made by boiling one-half ounce of very fine sago in one pint of milk till so tender that the grains almost disappear.

To keep your garbage can sweet, put a folded newspaper in the bottom of the can every time it is emptied.

A good mixture to set color in washfabrics is one teaspoonful of turpentine and a handful of salt in half a pail of water.

Some cooks always add a piece of bread crust in cheesecloth to the kettle when cabbage or cauliflower is boiled. This, they say, will absorb the odor.

If when making boiled frosting one has cooked the sugar and the water too long, and it gains, a teaspoonful of butter added will make it creamy and smooth, when beaten.

Often in hot weather the batch of bread or rolls has risen before the time planned to bake them. Place them in the refrigerator and the rising process will cease, yet the dough will not sour. When ready to bake, take out of the refrigerator and put in the oven.

If several weeks or months are to elapse when the food chopper is not in use, run a piece of suet through it before putting it away; then there will be no danger of it rusting.

SANDWICH VARIETY.

Thin slices of graham bread with apple jelly and chopped nuts.

Graham bread with crabapple jelly on one piece and preserved ginger on the other.

Equal parts of raisins, figs and dates chopped finely.

Salmon with lemon juice and tomato catsup.

Baked beans mashed to a paste; add mustard and finely chopped celery leaves and serve between brown bread.

Cottage cheese served with Worcestershire sauce and finely chopped olives.

Veal and ham pounded to a paste and mixed with cream butter.

Six tablespoons chopped hard boiled eggs, one tablespoon capers, one teaspoon pickles mixed with mayonnaise.

DELICIOUS EGG FILLING.

A delicious egg filling for sandwiches may be made by beating together the yolks of six very hard boiled eggs with four tablespoonfuls of thick sour cream, one tablespoonful of celery salt and scant half teaspoonful of black pepper. The whites of the eggs are sliced into thin rings and placed between the slices of bread.

There is Nothing Like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to Set it Right.

Mrs. C. L. Cook, 248 Tenth street, Brandon, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last four years for liver trouble, and can say that I have had great satisfaction and help from them. I find that I do not need any doctor if I use them when the liver gets torpid, and believe that they are exactly suited for my case. My husband has used them for kidney trouble with good results, and my daughter in Winnipeg has been helped a great deal by the use of these pills. We say we can't keep house without them, and have cheated the doctors here out of a good many visits. I think Dr. Chase's medicines are just the thing, and have recommended them to many people who have used them with good results."

By keeping the liver active and the bowels regular Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills prevent and cure such disorders as biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and headache. One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

NOSE AS INDEX.

Character May Be Told by Study of That Member.

It is an ancient belief that the nose indicates ancestry. We speak about the aristocratic nose with its high bridge and the plebeian nose of the toiler. Certainly, in a great many cases, race can be distinguished by the nose. The Hebrew could hardly be confused with the typical negro nose. The highly-arched nose is supposed to indicate tendency to rule, and the flattened nose shows servility.

There are several classes of noses, if we are to take the word of physiognomists. The Roman nose indicates executive ability. Its owner is the aggressive person, the conqueror. Portraits show that the ancient warriors had this type of nose. The Romans were trained especially for deeds of valour. The modern owner of such a nose will achieve success, be a leader, perhaps not in a battle for blood, but in a battle for supremacy and success in business or professional life. The woman with this nose may obtain social leadership if she chooses that rather than some other line of achievement.

The Grecian nose indicates refinement. In that ancient country refinement, artistic tastes, and great love of the beautiful were valued rather than valour in war. The owner of such a nose is art loving, and is successful in pursuit of things only when they are agreeable to his or her tastes.

In opposition to this type of nose we find the snub nose, which shows undevelopment, crudeness. It is the nose of the child rather than that of the developed man. When it is seen in adults we find the childlike mind accompanying it. The owner does not achieve great success, but is content to keep on in his humble way. From this class come the manual workers who lay the foundation of the wealth of the world. Their work is necessary, but they cannot direct others. They go where they are led or driven. "Theirs not to reason why; theirs but to do and die."

Antiquity of Petroleum.

Though it is only within recent times that petroleum has become an article of commerce, there is abundant proof that it was used in the arts forty centuries ago. The mortar used in constructing the walls of Nineveh and Babylon had petroleum mixed with it for the purpose of securing greater cohesion and excluding dampness. Traces of the bituminous matter are very distinct in the ruins, and the existence of petroleum springs at Is, some 120 miles from old Babylon, indicates one source of the supply. In the ancient history of several eastern countries allusion is made in unmistakable terms to the existence of petroleum springs.

Boric Acid.

Boric acid in considerable quantities is generally recognised as an original constituent in the waters and gases given off with volcanic emanations. In fact, the Tuscan fumaroles in Italy have been an important commercial source of boric acid for a long time, and in the past, possibly even to the present time, almost all the boric acid brought into the European market has been derived from this source. There is an abundant evidence of the presence of boric acid in volcanic emanations in many parts of the world. On the other hand, boron is so rare a constituent of rock forming minerals that it forms an inappreciably small percentage of the earth's rock mass as a whole.

"Plea" In the Legal Sense.

In the legal sense the word "plea" is grossly misused. One reads that the lawyer during a trial "delivered an eloquent plea to the jury." He did nothing of the sort. He delivered to the jury an argument or an entreaty that may or may not have been eloquent. A plea is properly used only of the pleadings or arraignments before a trial, not of the "argument" at the trial. A plea is invariably addressed to the court; an "argument" may be addressed either to the court or the jury. The same applies (still in the legal sense of the words) to the verbs "to plead" and "to argue."

The Proper Place.

A Chinese witness was on the stand.

An interpreter was employed, but his understanding of English was not always clear.

"Now, you may tell the jury what change, if any, there has been in the room since the shooting of Jones," said the prosecutor to the witness.

The interpreter, after conversing with the witness in Chinese, replied, "He says there never was any change any place except in the cash drawer."

Costly Eyeteeth.

"I guess paw must have passed a lot of time at the dentist's when he was in New York," said Johnny Green.

"Why do you think so," queried his ma.

"'Cause I heard him tell a man to-day that it cost him nearly $300 to get his eyeteeth cut," replied Johnny.

Counting Ten.

Gibbs—What do you think of this idea of counting ten before you speak when angry?

Dibbs—Well, I know this, that counting out $10 when my wife is angry has a mighty soothing effect.

Smells Like Half the World.

It is said that one-half of the world does not know how the other half lives, but we always know when the people next door are going to have boiled cabbage for dinner.

They Were Converted.

The Board of Health of a Canadian town visited the slaughter houses the other day and straightway announced that they would become vegetarians.

London possesses 19,000 policemen.

HIS WIFE.

The wide hall was sombre with ministerial broadcloth, but here and there a bit of gay ribbon betokened the presence of a woman or a business suit suggested a member of the laity.

The stir and whispered conversation which usually precede a business meeting were noticeably absent. The gathering had met for that tenderest and most pathetic incident of Methodist conference week, the annual memorial meeting, when one after another of the assembled ministers pays tribute to the memory of those who have passed to their reward during the year.

Death had claimed four members of the conference this year, and four of the brethren who had known them best gave, each in turn, the brief history of their humble lives. Then one of the presiding elders arose and began to speak.

"It is my privilege," he said "to offer a word of loving tribute to the memory of Mary Watson Blake, wife of our brother, John Wesley Blake."

At the first mention of the name, a little stoopshouldered man near the centre of the house bowed his head lower and lower until the forehead rested on his hand. The simple story which the presiding elder had begun to tell was in large measure the story of the little man's own life. How the past came back to him as he listened!

He thought of his first meeting with Mary Watson, while he was still a student in the seminary; of the acquaintance ripening into love; of her promises to be his wife, made on the day of his ordination. All his life he had wondered how it was she had been content to accept the little he had to offer—the hard lot of a Methodist minister's wife.

And it had been a hard lot. Uncomplainingly she had gone with him from village to village, with never a permanent abiding place; always courteous and tactful, even with the most uncongenial and stiff-necked parishioners; living constantly in the bright light of public scrutiny and criticism; annually making his pitifully small salary perform miricles; keeping open house for visiting clergymen and evangelists; dispensing a cheerful hospitality to every itinerant canvasser for religious books—these, he thought with a heavy heart, were the things which had made up the life of Mary Watson Blake.

The little preacher was honest with himself. He knew that he had never been more than a feeble rush-light in the church, and that his appointments, poor as they had been would have been poorer still but for her who had been so faithful a helper and had so ably supplemented his preaching with her personality.

"And this is all," he thought, bitterly. "Ten minutes of eulogy for a lifetime of such service. Oh, if they could know what she was and what she did!"

The voice of the presiding elder died away, and another voice broke in upon the stillness. A man was speaking whom some of those present recognized as the owner of the woollen mills at Belden.

"Ten years ago," he said, "a new pastor came with his wife to the church in our town. I had lost my own wife three years before that, and since her death my son had fallen into bad company, and sunk lower and lower, until his very name had become a disgrace to me and a reproach to the town.

"In some way, I cannot tell you how, the new minister's wife gained a hold upon him. She lifted him out of his degradation, out of himself, and put the heart of a man into him again. It is due under God, to Mary Watson Blake that I can say to you to-day, 'This, my son, was dead and is alive again.'"

In the hush which followed, the gathering began to disperse, but before the little bent figure of the preacher had reached the door, the other figures, elbowing their way through the crowd, met him. They were both men in the prime of life, and as they passed out with their friend, each has something to say of the past.

"It was your wife, sir," said one, "who gave me my first impulse and first encouragement to study for the ministry. I wish I could tell her now of my appointment to Jefferson Avenue Church, and how earnestly I am going to make a worthy use of the great opportunity."

What the other man said was lost in the buzz of conversation at the door, but it carried the thoughts of the little minister back to a young "bough" in a seaboard town where he had taught a score of years ago.

"God forgive me!" he said, humbly, "in my sorrow and complaining. Her memorial is in the lives of the people for whom we have suffered and labored. With God is her reward."

A Golf Outrage.

The Earl of Wemyss was on a Fife golf course on one occasion accompanied by an old caddie. His lordship got his ball on one occasion so near the hole that to play it was, as it appeared to him, superfluous. So he simply tipped it in with the toe of his boot.

The caddie revolted instanter, threw down the clubs and looked horrified. When he found words to speak it was to say, "Hang it, me lord, gowf's gowf!"

Her Goodness.

Bridey—My wife is a very good cook. Wise—Get out! Her mother told me she was just taking her first lessons when you married her. Bridey—Exactly. She was good enough not to continue her lessons on me.—Philadelphia Press.

Not to Blame.

"My dear, there's too much caloric in this soup."

"There! I told the cook you would rather have it seasoned with parsley."—Baltimore American.

Concrete Tanks and Troughs Never Rot or Leak

THE most practical tanks, whether for water or sewage, are built of concrete. They never rust, rot, dry out or leak. They never need new hoops or paint. They last a lifetime and seldom require repairing, which makes them the cheapest tanks that can be built.

Clean, Sanitary Watering Troughs are just as necessary as the animals that drink from them. The farmer's best interests are being served when his stock is insured a plentiful supply of clear, clean water from a trough that is permanent and sanitary.

"What the Farmer can do with Concrete" is the name of a handsome free book that tells all about concrete tanks, watering troughs and other uses of concrete that will save every farmer many dollars. Write for it to-day.

EVEN AS YOU AND I

(With Apology to Kipling)

A fool there was and he made his lair (Even as you and I)
On a bag of feathers and bunch of hair (If he only knew what else was there)
But the fool to the subject gave no care (Even as you and I)

Oh the sleep he lost and the rest he lost
Yet wondered his health was poor
Tho' a third of his life was spent in bed
It never had entered his foolish head
To think of Ostermoor.

A fool there was and his nights he spent (Even as you and I)
On a mattress that looked so innocent
But he always arose in any event
Tired, unrested and discontent (Even as you and I)

And it isn't the shame and it isn't the blame
That burns the heart to the core
It's the coming to know the comfort we lost
Seeing at what a trifling cost
We could get an Ostermoor!

THE BANNER, JULY 23rd, 1914

HIGH PRICES OF MEAT.

The Toronto News has an interesting editorial in a recent issue in which it is argued conclusively that the high price of beef and other meats is due to a world-wide shortage in production. The number of beef cattle on the farms and ranges in the United States on January 1, 1907, totalled 51,566,000. On January 1, 1914, this number had decreased to 35,855,000, a falling off of over 30 per cent. During this same period the population of the country increased over 12,000,000. With the decrease of 5,323,000 beef cattle since the census of 1910, the remaining cattle have grown 63.2 per cent. per head in value, an average annual increase of over 15 per cent. The latest Government estimates show that the total number of cattle, sheep, and swine in the United States is about 144,507,000, or 1.6 animals per capita of the population. In 1900 there were approximately 2.5 head for every man, woman and child. These statistics indicate that the farmers of Canada have a great opportunity for profitable cattle raising. Canadian live stock is now admitted to the United States free of duty and will probably continue to be thus admitted so long as the present scarcity of cattle exists across the border. At the present time live stock raising is probably the most profitable form of farming in which the Canadian agriculturist can engage. The returns are as great and more certain than from grain growing. There are also indirect advantages that are important. Stock furnish the farm with a means of disposing of the coarse grains and roughage which he grows on his farm. They assist to keep up the fertility of the soil and enable him to increase the productive capacity of his land. At the prevailing prices the raising of live stock is undoubtedly profitable. In view of the figures quoted, coupled with the fact that the Western Provinces will be essentially a grain growing country for at least another decade it is not likely that there will b any material drop in these prices for a number of years to come.

The Army Worm.

On account of the crops in some districts being badly attacked by this pest, it is advisable for every farmer to be on the lookout and ready to combat it if it comes his way.

The army worm is about one and one-half inches long when full grown, and is striped with black, yellow and green, of a dingy appearance and much resembling the cutworm. When detected, all efforts should be centred on keeping the worms out of crops not yet attacked. A deep furrow, (several furrows are better) ploughed around the fields with the vertical or steep side of the furrow next to the crop to be protected, serves as a barrier to prevent the march of the worms, as they will not be able to crawl up the straight side of the furrow. Holes or pits should be dug in the bottom of the furrow every ten or twelve feet to catch the worms as they crawl along looking for a place to get out. They can then be destroyed with a blunt stick or by burning straw over them.

By thoroughly spraying or dusting a small strip of the crop in advance of the worms with Paris green, and liberally distributing poisoned bran (mixed at the rate of fifty pounds bran and one pound Paris green with enough molasses and water to sweeten it) large numbers may be destroyed. A field so poisoned must not be pastured until rain has thoroughly washed it. Whatever is done must be done quickly and at once, for a single day's delay may often mean the ruin of a valuable crop. —F.C. N., Commission of Conservation.

Attempted Hold-Up

A couple of tramps attempted to hold up Wm. Prior, West Broadway, in the swamp opposite lot 4 on the Prince of Wales Road about 5 o'clock on Wednesday morning of last week. Mr. Prior, who drives the meat wagon for Camplin & Sons, noticed the two men lying under a tree by the road side while on his way out to the Wright farm for a supply of meat. One of them motioned to him to stop as he was driving past but he did not think anything further of the action. On his way back to town one of the men sprang out of some bushes and grabbed his horse by the head. He then called to his companion, a middle-aged man, to get into the rig. The older man hesitated and after some parleying the hobo let go of the horse. Mr. Prior put the whip to the animal and lost no time getting away from the tramps. The man who seized the horse was quite a young fellow and wore a wide slouch hat. It is thought the men may have been members of a tough looking gang, who were hanging around town last week and were routed out by Chief Marshall Tuesday night. The Chief arrested four tramps near the C.P.R. station, but on the road to the lock-up two of them made a successful break for liberty. The others were confined in the lock-up over night and ordered out of town next morning.

Even if a man does lift his lid when he meets a woman he may not be her inferior.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

Fire Underwriters' Inspector Submits Report of Inspection in June.

Contract Closed for Power for Electric Motor Pump.

The Public School Board submitted its estimates at the regular meeting of the Town Council on Monday night. The amount the Council has been asked to raise by levy is $7200, which we understand is slightly less than last year's levy. In addition to this there will be a levy of $371.03 to meet the debentures issued by the town to cover the cost of the permanent improvements to the school.

The following accounts were passed —J. R. Harcus, $1.00; Robt. Allen, $12.75; George King, $22.20; W. O. Thomas, $15.30; James Graham, $60; Ritchie Bros., $15.

Accounts from R. A. Irwin for $33.60 and Chas. Wells for $2 were referred.

The report of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association re the inspection of the fire protection system on June 12th last was read and received.

A by-law was passed to authorize the execution of an agreement with the Pine River Light & Power Co. for supplying power for the electric power pump in the Fire Hall. The price which the town will pay under the agreement is $300 a year.

A letter was received from the Cataract Electric Co. relative to the position of some of its wires and the danger arising from their closeness to the wires of the Pine River Light & Power Company. The letter stated that provision for the removal of all wires to a safe distance had been made in the agreement reached at the time of the settlement of the Watson lawsuit in 1908, but that the changes contemplated under this agreement had never been carried out. The Company also disclaimed responsibility for existing danger spots, holding that these were due to careless construction work on the part of the other Lighting Company. The communication was referred to the Street Lighting Committee and Electric Inspector to get the representatives of the two Electric Companies together with a view to having dangerous wires separated and dead poles taken down.

In his report to the Underwriters, the Inspector states that when he made his inspection on June 12th, he found that there was no fire under the boilers and it took an hour to get up sufficient steam to obtain effective service from the steam pump. The Association asks for at least forty pounds of steam to be constantly maintained in the boiler. The Inspector also drew attention to the removal of the fire alarm box from the corner of Broadway and Mill Sts and recommends that all boxes should operate the alarm bell as was formerly the case. Improvements in the system which the Inspector notes are the installation of a second pump of 720,000 Imperial gallons per 24 hours operated by electricity, a new 60 h.p. horizontal boiler and two additional fire alarm boxes. He also states that the running pressures obtained at the test are an improvement on those obtained previously. At the previous test the approximate discharge for the three streams was 51.4 per cent. short of standard requirements and at this test only 28.5 per cent. short. The report emphasizes the need for a larger storage reservoir. The summary of the appliances in use is as follows :—

Two pumps, steam and electric power, the latter in general use. 59 hydrants, 1600 feet of first-class hose, six play pipes, one hose wagon of 1200 ft. capacity and one hand reel of 350 feet. Hook and ladder truck, longest ladder 60 ft. Two 5 gal. chemical fire extinguishers. Winter sleigh for hose. Brick fire station with shingle roof is also used as pump and boiler house. Standard hose drying tower. Brigade of 12 men, all volunteers. Fire alarm telegraph system with five street boxes, striking an 8 inch gong in pump room, but not connected to general alarm. General telephone service by day and night. About 250 subscribers. Night patrol from 10 p.m. to 6 p.m., without any system of check.

The Clerk was instructed to write Police Magistrate Pattullo to issue and hand to Chief Marshall warrants of commitment against all persons who have not paid fines imposed upon them to which the town is entitled.

BEAUTIFUL "LUKENUF."

ACharming Belfountain Summer Home.

How C. W. Mack Is Helping Toronto Girls Have a Two Weeks Holiday.

If you are the proud possessor of a motor car and have a craze for that delightful retreat, the Caledon Club, you will but smile at these poor ravings. But if you are a humble mundane dweller in city streets who has never penetrated the lovely Forks of the Credit region you may feel, as we did, like a veritable Columbus, discovering a new world, as we gazed on that beautiful spot, for the first time.

To step off the train here is to feel transported to a European beauty spot. In front of you is a quaint bridge across the charming Credit river, while about you rise towering rocky hills that give the effect of mountains. Then you take to a beautiful road carpeted on either side with starry daisies. You pass a turn down which autos are dashing to the Caledon Club, and you go steadily on up, up, up, through splendid woods decked in all their wealth of mid-summer greenery, while below the picturesque stream winds its way. Fragrant wild roses scent the air and among the many wild flowers studding the banks are the exquisite velvety rose mulberry blossoms.

Then as we were bound for the village of Belfountain, almost a mile away, our road left the shady woods and went by thriving farms before we reached our destination, the summer place of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Mack, of Toronto.

"Luckenuf" its owners call it, and every visitor echoes the sentiment. Entering from the road that leads into the village, we wound around the foot of a high wooded hill covered with fragrant spruce and graceful white birch. To the right of us flowed the beautiful Credit and to the left a picturesque stone wall wound round the foot of the hill. In front of it were huge clumps of daisies which, though arranged in beds, still kept in their wild grace. Then as the river, after broadening into a small lake, turned again to become a mere stream, we neared the rustic boughs that form the entrance gate of "Luckenuf." Velvety green was the sward beside the river and gay with scarlet flowers and ferns were the flower beds bordering the well kept walks that lead to a charming bungalow. For here in the heart of the Credit hills a habitation has been erected that is an amazing combination of civilization and primeval wilderness.

At the turn of the river a fine dam has been built that provides a miniature Niagara Falls. Over it is swung a rustic bridge and both banks are dotted with quaint summer houses of silvery birch, that have all the picturesqueness of tiny Japanese tea houses. But whereas in the valley on one side of the river are trim green lawns, on the opposite bank is nature in all her primative beauty. Almost as straight as a wall is the hundred feet height which rises above the emerald swards. Down it over splendid old rocks bounds a beautiful waterfall, while the entire hill, of which the top stands 1,500 feet above sea level, is covered with wonderful trees and dense beds of ferns. And back of the bungalow as the river makes its way down the valley it rushes over the rocks in its bed as if yet untamed by the hand of man.

As for the house itself, it looks as if it and its well kept lawns had been dropped from the clouds into a primeval wilderness. True, the most lavish twentieth century bathroom beneath the bungalow does not entirely confine bathing operations to the fine showers which can be had beneath the falls. But the many comforts provided do not spoil the gypsy feel of the place. The bungalow almost consists of but one long living room with a huge brick fireplace. For the entire structure is encircled with verandahs, upon which the inhabitants both eat and sleep. For though inside there are real bedrooms, nobody ever sleeps inside who can help it.

But now we come to the most beautiful thing in this valley of beauty. Straight up from the bungalow are stone terraces and steps. At their top is a small green structure which Mr. Mack calls his sanctum. And to the left of it is a four-room cottage with fine verandah, overlooking the bungalow and its lawns, with a superb view of the valley in the distance. "Bide-a-wee" is the name of the cottage and it is really the official guest chamber of this forest domain. And during July and August Mr. and Mrs. Mack have placed it at the disposal of city girls who would otherwise not have the rest they so badly need. Girls in offices and stores, who, perhaps, are so heavily burdened they cannot afford to take a vacation, which will mean so much to them.

"Bide-a-wee" has been completely furnished and to it will come parties of eight and ten girls for two weeks at a time. They will bring their own bed linen and look after their own provisions, but in a district of farms, the latter will be easily managed. Already the list of guests is overflowing, for though none of them is personally known to their host and hostess many interested in Toronto's girls soon found eager backers for such an ideal vacation. Swings and hammocks dot the hillside, boats dot the small lake, and there is unlimited space for every one. And though "Luckenuf" seems to possess every variety of beauty, the surrounding country, with its wonderful hills and valleys, waterways and rocks will doubtless be explored with much joy.

We have heard many beautiful vacation plans of Toronto folk this summer, wonderful European trips, wonderful trips to famous summer resorts of this entire continent, but we have heard of no finer project than the one of Mr. and Mrs. Mack.

And we doubt if more joy will be realized than by them and their guests. The very souls of hospitality, Mr. and Mrs. Mack never seem so happy as when sharing the joys of the happy valley which they discovered on a motor trip but five years ago. Since then Mr. Mack has spent much of his time with a small band of men, making it an ideal spot. Every wild beauty has been carefully treasured and hidden ones revealed. And while spring water has been entrapped in iron pipes and waterfalls turned into power, Nature has not been ruthlessly disturbed. The roar of the Niagara annex has replaced the calm of the wilderness, but otherwise "Luckenuf" would fill the demands of the one who said :

"It seems to me I'd like to go Where bells don't ring, nor whistles blow;
Nor clocks don't strike, nor gongs don't sound,
And I'll have stillness all around."

Mr. and Mrs. John K. Warnock and family of the 12th line, Garafraxa, attended divine service in the Presbyterian Church here at 11 a.m., after which they spent the afternoon as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. Nodwell, of Marsville, spent Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley McDowell.

Rev. Mr. Carr, of Flesherton, conducted the service in the Presbyterian Church here at 11 a.m. and in Farmers at 3 p.m. His text for the sermon here was taken from the 12th chapter of St. Mark.

The party responsible for the disappearance of some small articles a couple of months ago must be in the neighborhood yet. At any rate one of our farmers reports some tools missing from his place.

Miss Mary Hastings, of Toronto, a former resident of the village, is renewing acquaintanceships here.

Garfield Tolton has the auto fever. Garfield ought to wait until the double compound principle is put into operation in the automobile industry.

Mrs. Henry Talbot, an old resident of this village, whose death on June 3rd last was briefly reported at the time, was born on the 3rd line of Francis on April 1st, 1838. While only very young her parents died and she was left to battle with the cares of life which were very often trying and discouraging in those early days. At the age of twenty she became united and with her husband took up their abode in Erin township where they lived a short time. Afterwards they moved to Amaranth, taking up their residence on lot 6, con. 8, where they lived until they retired to Waldemar about 15 years ago. Since the death of her husband about six years ago she had made her home with her son, residing chiefly with her son, James. She was a woman of a quiet rather reserved disposition, kindly and sympathetic in her nature and was always very attentive to her household duties and the needs of her family. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church and a regular attendant at church services. Of a family of nine she is survived by two sons, James and Richard, of Waldemar, and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph McConachie, Waldemar, and Mrs. Robert Robinson, of Keldon. There was a large turnout of sorrowing relatives and neighbors at the funeral. Rev. D. J. Lane, of Grand Valley, conducted an impressive service at the house and also officiated at the grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. George Gier, Henry Carter, Jos. Lomas, Wm. Tate, John McFadgzean and Alex. Thompson.

WEST MONO PARISH

Divine services will be held (D.V.) in the Churches in this Mission as follows:—St. George's, 11 a.m.; St. Luke's, 3 p.m.; St. Matthew's, 7.30 p.m.; Sunday School, 6.30 p.m.

MELANCTHON.

Statute labor is completed in this locality and some special improvements have been done by the township.

Mrs. John Barrett, who has been visiting friends at Caledon East and Toronto, has returned home. Misses Ethel and Gladys Barrett, of Toronto, accompanied her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sawden and son, Elgin, of Melville Cross, visited Mr. and Mrs. James Sawden, here.

Miss M. Thomas is visiting friends in Manitoba.

Misses Beatrice and May Sawden, of Toronto, are spending their holidays with friends in this locality.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack, of Toronto, are visiting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Marlatt, Melanothon.

The farmers are now taking off the hay which is a fair crop.

A Court of Revision will be held at the Town Hall on the 27th inst. for the purpose of again hearing any appeals against the passing of the by-law for developing what is known as the McCue Drain. The all-important question appears to be "Where is the money coming from?"

CALEDON.

On Saturday last while Mr. Geo. Hillyard was raking hay in his field alongside the Centre Road the horses became frightened at a passing motor cycle and ran away. Mr. Hillyard was thrown off the rake and sustained a couple of scalp wounds and a severe shaking up. Reeve Quinn witnessed the accident and rendered first aid and notified the family at once. The Dr. was immediately summoned and Mr. Hillyard taken to the house. We are pleased to state that his injuries are not so serious as was thought at first and we hope to see him around in a few days none the worse of his exciting experience. The horses escaped without a scratch.

Mr. Harry Bowen, who has been employed with Mr. Joseph Campbell, met with a serious accident on Tuesday of this week by being kicked in the face by a horse and rendered unconscious. Dr. Thomas is in attendance and we hope for a speedy recovery.

Haying is about completed in this vicinity and while the quantity is nothing extra the quality is good.

Mr. Daniel McArthur raised a splendid new barn on his farm last week. Mr. Still, of Mono, did the job and everything came off without a hitch.

Mrs. Jos. Campbell, of West Foronto, is visiting her sister, Miss Phoebe Judge.

Mr. Charlie McArthur, who has been farming in Alberta for the past ten years, has sold his farm and returned home, and will spend the summer in Ontario.

The annual garden party of Knox Church, which was postponed till last Friday night, was a decided success. About $180 was realized.

Miss Jessie Grout, of Snelgrove, attended the garden party and visited some of her acquaintances here and returned home on Saturday evening.

Mrs. H. Stuckey, who met with a painful accident at Georgetown some time ago, is now improving as well as can be expected.

Rev. Jenkins Burkholder has gone on a holiday trip. His pulpit will be occupied by Rev. F. N. Powes next Sunday.

Mr. Duncan Baxter, of Transcona, Man., is visiting his mother during the holidays. Mr. Baxter is now Principal of the twelve room school of the above place.

Baby Eczema Becomes Chronic

Causing Great Suffering and Anxiety —Prompt Relief and Cure by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This is one reason why every mother should know about Dr. Chase's Ointment, since it is an unfailing cure for all itching skin diseases.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad, and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now,' and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Here is another letter, which tells of the cure of a five-weeks-old baby:

Mrs. Wallace Mingon, River John Road, Colchester County, N.S., writes: "My little girl took eczema when she was five weeks old. Though we doctored her until she was nearly a year old, she got no better. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this treatment completely cured her."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. To-day they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to BRAMPTON HONORS EXCELSIORS.

Mann Cup Challengers Were Given Rousing Reception on Arrival Home.

The Brampton Excelsior lacrosse team arrived home on Saturday night after their trip to the Coast in an unsuccessful attempt to wrest the Mann Cup from Vancouver, the British Columbia champions. The Peel capital has always been known as an enthusiastic lacrosse town, but on Saturday night its citizens fairly surpassed all previous records along this line. When the train pulled into the C.P.R. depot at 6.10 the whole town was on hand to greet and welcome the returning players. Every store in Brampton was decorated with flags and bunting, and a procession made up of about 85 automobiles, which were filled with the parents of the players and other prominent citizens, and accompanied by four bands and the local troop of Boy Scouts, marched to the town park, where addresses were delivered by Mayor Mara, Dr. Roberts, president of the Excelsior Lacrosse Club, Principal W. J. Fenton, of the Brampton High School, and Samuel Charters, ex-M.P.P.

The Excelsiors are pleased with their trip, and while not successful in their attempt to lift the coveted cup, yet they rejoice to think that they are the only team who have made anything like a good showing against the cup-holders. The people of Brampton are also proud of their team, who have not only upheld their own honor, but the honor of the town which has placed so much confidence in them, and if there ever was any doubt as to the interest the people of Brampton had in their lacrosse team that doubt has all vanished after the reception the team were given on their return home Saturday night.

The Excelsiors left Brampton on June 17th and played their two cup games on Saturday, June 27th, and the following Saturday. They won the first game and lost the second. The score for the series was ten for Vancouver and seven for Brampton. The V. A. C. entertained the team in Vancouver, giving them a banquet at the Terminal City Club, and the city of Vancouver held a reception for them on Monday. On the way home the Excelsiors played Kamloops and beat them by a score of 9 to 2. Two days were spent in Calgary and a heavy rain prevented them playing in that city. At Medicine Hat the Brampton boys were again successful in winning, the score being 11 to 5 in their favor. At Regina 11 to 1 was the score in favor of the Excelsiors. Thus while they were away the Brampton team played five games, making a total of 38 goals to their opponents 18.

At Vancouver the boys say that they were beaten by a better team, but whether or not they were beaten fairly they are not so ready to admit. Brampton people who accompanied the team on their trip say that in the second game the Excelsiors played hard, clean lacrosse from the start and never gave up until the last whistle sounded.

To Thomas Thauburn, who accompanied the team on their trip as financial manager, much credit is due for the success of the trip. Jack Carmichael managed the team in all their games and the boys have the best to say for him.

The trip taken by the Brampton team should have a very good effect on the lacrosse life of Ontario. The Excelsiors have shown themselves to be sports, they have acquitted themselves like men, and the whole topic of conversation in Brampton is now "the boys."

BATH DANGERS.

Greater Danger From Electric Shock When Body Moist.

A man is in much greater danger from electric shock when taking a bath than under ordinary conditions, as the surface of the body when moist offers much less resistance to the current than when dry. Persons have been killed while bathing by current that would scarcely have affected them outside the bath. Says Cosmos (Paris):

"Balthabard has recently told at the Society of Legal Medicine of the case of a lady killed by electric shock in her bathroom at the moment when she was pressing the button of an electric bell between the poles of which there was a difference of potential of not more than 110 volts.

"In ordinary circumstances, owing to the great resistance of the human body, such a small electromotive force presents no great danger; but when the circuit contains, as in the case reported, a large surface of moist skin the resistance falls and more than 100 milliamperes may pass through the organism, sufficient at this tension to produce death by tetanization of the respiratory muscles.

"Currents of even 46 volts are dangerous in a bathroom. It should be remembered that currents of feeble intensity can produce a sudden rise of arterial tension capable of causing sudden death in a person with a weak heart.

"High tensions, enabling currents of 4 to 5 amperes to pass, have quite a different effect. They do not generally cause death, because the modifications of the tissue produced at the point of contact at once oppose a considerable resistance to the passage of the current. The intensity within the organism is not sufficient to cause tetanization of the respiratory muscles, and the lesions are usually purely local."

A Red Sea Pirate.

The old-fashioned pirate captain, with a brace of pistols tucked into his belt and a colored handkerchief tied around his head, who buried his treasure and made his captives walk the plank, must retire into the background nowadays before the pirate with modern ideas and an aptitude for commercial enterprise.

A pirate captain flourishes at the present time in the Red Sea who commands a large dhow. He captures other dhows carrying merchandise, stores the captured goods somewhere out of the reach of Turkish sailors or soldiers, and then enters into negotiations with the merchants to whom the goods were consigned, offering to sell them their own goods at a very reduced price.

This modern pirate has just made a fine haul, having captured a cargo worth 20,000 rupees, which was consigned to merchants at Aden.

He unloaded this, set the captured dhow free, and at once wrote to the merchants at Aden, notifying the sums for which the goods would be sent on to them.

There is a touch of humor in his management of this his latest capture, for he knew that the merchants dhow was carrying a large quantity of contraband tobacco, and that its captain would, therefore, be unable to lay a complaint before the Turkish Government.

They All Do.

An enthusiastic citizen, on the verge of a trip to Europe, was rejoicing over the fact and descanting on the pleasures to come.

"How delightful it will be," said he to his wife, "to tread the bounding billow and inhale the invigorating oxygen of the sea! The sea! The boundless sea! I long to see it! To breathe in great draughts of life giving air. I shall want to stand every moment of the voyage on the prow of the steamer with my mouth open"—

"You probably will, dear," interrupted his wife encouragingly, "that's the way all ocean travelers do."

Outwitted the Women.

While the men of a village named Borhoff, in the Vitebsk Government, were holding a meeting, the doors of the room were suddenly flung open and the women of the village entered in a body, demanding that the men should there and then abolish the local vodka (spirit) shop, otherwise they would not let the proceedings continue.

Above the din was heard a voice: "They are right! Let those who are for the women's resolution come outside!" The women triumphantly trooped out—alone. The door was then suddenly locked, and the meeting proceeded.

One View of the Kiss.

The olfactory kiss is Mongolian. The nutritive affair is European. The Mongolian kiss is with the nose. The European kiss is with the mouth.

The Mongolian kiss indicates that the party sniffed would be an agreeable prey. The European variety indicates that the party embraced would make a delectable meal.

They are but the different forms of the same instinct of preservation —the give and take of wild beasts.

Compromise.

Doctor (laughing)—Some of those patients are the limit. The man who just left has several ailments, and for one I prescribe a cold plunge in the morning, while for another I told him to take a hot bath at night.

Wife—And what did he say?

Doctor—He asked if it wouldn't do if he went at noon and took a lukewarm bath.

His Reasoning.

De Tough—I want to return this dog to the gent what owns him. I seen his ad. in the paper.

The Lady—How did you guess it was a "gent" that put the ad. in?

De Tough—'Cause it said, "No questions asked."

ILLUSION IN WEIGHT.

Blunders That Simply Prove a Person's Good Judgment.

Take a sofa pillow in one hand, balance it carefully until you think you have a right sense of its weight. Hold a large glass in the other hand and have some one pour water into it until you think it weighs about as much as the pillow. Then weigh the two and see how far out of the way you are.

Or take a cap in one hand and put in the other as many coins as you think may be needed to balance it. You will find your judgment far from correct.

Take two stone jars. Fill one with hot water and the other with cold and ask a friend to say which is the heavier of the two. The bottle with hot water will seem 25 per cent heavier.

Take three articles weighing the same. Put one on the ground, one on a table and one on a high shelf. Ask a friend to lift them and determine which of the three is the heaviest. He will pick the one on the shelf as the one which weighs the most every time.

The laws of illusion in weight are quite exact, and it is marvelous to see what a large proportion of people will make exactly the same mistake in exactly the same way. Thus the pillow seems lighter than it is because its appearance suggests lightness. Of two similar weights the one that is the larger in size will always seem the lighter. That is why the weight of the cap will be underestimated in the experiment just described.

Any change from normal temperature, either hot or cold, will appear to increase the temperature. A piece of ice the same weight as a glass of water will seem to weigh twice as much.

The extra exertion needed to sustain the weight of an object either above or below our natural reach seems to make it heavier, and for this reason the weight on the shelf will seem to have the advantage.

Does this show what poor judges we are? Not at all. It only proves our good judgment. It is like the sad case of the college student in a class on optics who could see through the illusions, so that matters which appeared crooked to the rest of the class, although they were really straight, appeared straight to him. Instead of complimenting him on his discernment, the professor promptly expelled the student from the class on the ground that he was drunk. And he was!—New York American.

TRAGIC LAUGHTER.

Vibration and Nitroglycerin Form a Perilous Combination.

An accident, said to be the most extraordinary on record, occurred at some oil fields in the Baku district of Russia, on the borders of the Caspian sea. One of the big "gusher" oil wells became choked, and, with a view of blowing it clear, a number of iron drums full of nitroglycerin were brought down by rail from Derbend and deposited overnight in a large shed which was used by the men as a sort of canteen.

The steward of this establishment, a Greek named Darios, opened one of the drums for some reason best known to himself and decanted a small quantity of the dangerous liquid into a long, thin glass used for mixing vodka. This he placed on a shelf behind the bar. Shortly afterward there entered a workman named Borkovitch, who was famous for the boisterous hilarity of his manner and especially for his loud, resonant laughter.

The sight of nitroglycerin in a vodka tumbler so excited his risibility that he gave vent to a series of stentorian guffaws. This set the half filled glass "ringing," and the treacherous contents immediately exploded.

The concussion sufficed, in its turn, to explode the rest of the stuff in the drums, entirely demolishing the shed and killing five persons, all who were in it at the time. The barman escaped through having gone down into the cellar just previously, whence he distinctly heard the laughter, followed by the musical "ringing" of the thin tumbler and the two explosions.—Pearson's Weekly.

Expansion.

A very stout fellow once presented himself to Sir Francis Burdett and asked him if he had a situation to give him.

"I do not know you," said Sir Francis, looking at him.

"Why, have you forgotten me?" said the fellow. "I was formerly a page in your house."

"My dear boy," said the baronet, "you have become a volume!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Minuteness of Molecules.

Molecules are so minute that there are about a sextillion of them in a cubic inch of air. These at freezing temperature oscillate back and forth at the rate of 1,470 feet a second. The average length of their path between oscillations is about one two-hundred and seventy-seven thousandth of an inch. Each comes into collision with its fellows about 5,000,000 times a second.

A Long Message.

The longest item of news ever telegraphed to a newspaper was the entire New Testament as revised, which was sent from New York to a Chicago newspaper for May 22, 1882. That issue of the paper comprised twenty pages, sixteen of which were taken up by the New Testament.

Diplomacy.

Lady—I'm afraid one foot is bigger than the other. Shopman—On the contrary, madam, one is perhaps smaller than the other.—London Opinion.

A new Dominion $2 bill is being issued in commemoration of the stay of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught in Canada. It bears their portraits in either corner, with the figure "2" in the centre of the word "Two" on each side of it. The bill is of a light olive green.

Potifer's Interference

It Found a Job For Him

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"No luck today," reported Henry Potifer smilingly as he entered his home after another day's unsuccessful search for a position.

Ellen Potifer was putting supper on the table.

She was a tall, thin, sallow woman, who faced the world with an expression of perpetual melancholy.

"I don't know what we will do!" she groaned, sitting down and pouring out a cup of strong tea for herself. "There is just $100 left in the bank, and when that is gone where will we be?"

"Right here, as usual," responded Henry Potifer cheerfully as he helped his wife to a spoonful of corned beef hash. "That $100 will keep the wolf at bay for six months if your economical hand is at the helm, my dear," he went on, mixing his metaphors while he consumed hot biscuits and hash with an excellent appetite, "but happily it will not be required to last that long. I feel sure that I shall find a job tomorrow."

"You've felt that way ever since Mixon & Co. discharged you three weeks ago," retorted Mrs. Potifer, refusing to have her gloom pierced by a ray of hope. "That makes four perfectly good positions you've lost simply because you can't attend to your own business and let other people's affairs alone."

"Miranda," he said chokingly, "please understand that when I go out to look for a job tomorrow morning I shall not return until I get one. No, ma'am, not if I'm gone 500 years!"

"Henry!"

"Yes, you can 'Henry' me, and you can henpeck me, too!" went on the angry Potifer. "You women get together and ask, 'Why do girls leave home?' I don't know, but I can tell you why half the men leave home. It's because they're nagged there!"

Whereupon Mr. Potifer left his supper unfinished and slapped on his hat and slammed the front door and went downtown and enjoyed a moving picture show.

"I INTEND TO SPOIL IT," ROARED HENRY POTIFER.

Mrs. Potifer washed the dishes and dripped tears into the dishpan and then sat down and wrote a long, complaining letter to her married daughter by her first husband.

The next morning when Mr. Potifer awoke it was with a vague sense of some impending calamity. Presently he recollected his rash threat of the night before. He jumped out of bed and dressed carefully.

So when Henry Potifer appeared, well brushed and shining from his morning toilet, he carried a suit case and an umbrella.

Mrs. Potifer, who had been making waffles for breakfast as a sort of peace offering to her husband, poked her head into the dining room, saw the suit case and fell to weeping noisily.

"I never thought I'd be deserted by my husband," she moaned. "Now, Augustus Hakle, my first husband, was devoted to me and"—

Mr. Potifer put up his hand with a new, commanding gesture. He was enjoying the scene. He felt like an actor on the stage. He believed he would have made an excellent actor.

"Miranda," he said kindly, "your first husband did desert you when he died. I am not ready to die yet, but I'm not coming back until I get some kind of a job. If I find one today I'll be home tonight. If I don't come there's money enough to keep you until I do return. I may—I have thought of going on the stage," he ended with a dramatic gesture.

"An actor, Henry?" gasped Mrs. Potifer. "Well, you needn't come back at all, then!"

"So be it, Miranda," returned Mr. Potifer sadly. "I will take my leave. I will breakfast at a dairy lunch downtown. Farewell, farewell, cruel Miranda!" He felt very tragic as he waved an adieu, cocked his hat rakishly over one ear, picked up his bag and umbrella and left the house.

Going downtown in the car his spirits lifted wonderfully. He felt as if he were on the eve of some adventure.

Leaving his bag and umbrella in the check room of a hotel, Henry Potifer ate his breakfast and then set forth to look for a job. He had scanned the morning paper while he ate and there were several places where he might apply for a position as bookkeeper.

At 4 o'clock that afternoon Mr. Potifer acknowledged to himself that it was useless to look further that day. He had been too late or too old or too something for every job that he applied for that day, and late afternoon found him wondering whether he should brave Mrs. Potifer's ridicule and go home in spite of his threats of the morning or whether he should really remain downtown and stay at the hotel until another day promised better luck.

He decided to take a trolley ride, and while he cooled off from the heat of the day's exertions he could decide what to do.

The trolley car whirled him into the green country and through pretty villages. At the end of the line he got off and went for a walk along a babbling brook that reminded him of his boyhood days on the farm.

And on the banks of the brook Mr. Potifer found adventure waiting for him and a steady job lurking in the background, although he didn't know that until afterward.

A pretty girl in a pink sunbonnet was struggling with a tall, dark, villainous looking man, who held her slender hands in his big ones.

"Unhand me, villain!" shrieked the girl just as Mr. Potifer came running upon the scene, his heavy gold headed cane poised for action.

"Never!" cried the man angrily as he dragged her toward the path that led across an open field, beyond which appeared the red roof of a farmhouse. "What are you doing here, old Buttinsky?" he roared at Henry Potifer. "Get out of the way. You're spoiling this."

"I intend to spoil it," roared Henry Potifer valiantly. "Let the lady go, you rascal."

The lady laughed hysterically, the villain swore lustily as Mr. Potifer's cane circled around the man's head and finally fell on his shoulders.

Suddenly the man grasped the girl's hand and shouted:

"Beat it and leave the old meddler behind. We'll get the sack for this."

Whereupon the couple flew along the path into the field and across the field, with Mr. Henry Potifer in hot pursuit, his gray coattails flying, his fat face dripping with perspiration and his mouth wide open like a gasping fish's.

And there fell into the pursuit from behind trees and an ancient barn several policemen, who waved their sticks and fired revolvers into the air.

Mr. Potifer stopped at the first pistol shot just as a bee winging homeward grazed his bald head. Mr. Potifer thought that he had stopped a bullet with his cranium, and he fell to earth and groaned.

Immediately there was a circle of oddly dressed people around him, most of them laughing, some of them scolding, but all of them most concerned in the appearance of a dapper little man who almost danced up and down as he surveyed the recumbent form of Henry Potifer, professional meddler.

"I'd like to kill him!" roared the little man, brandishing his fist before Mr. Potifer's startled eyes. "Man, you've spoiled fifty feet of film!"

"Film?" echoed Mr. Potifer blankly.

"Yes, film!" mimicked the little man, and then he proceeded to explain to Mr. Potifer that he had interfered in the making of a moving picture film—that it would cost hundreds of dollars to make good the damage he had done that afternoon.

Mr. Potifer listened and stared and looked aghast, and with each change of expression the actresses giggled and the men smiled until the manager of the company smiled too. The star whispered for awhile in the manager's ear, and the manager slapped his knee and cried:

"I believe you're right, Barton! I'll talk to the old duffer."

So he smiled upon the perturbed Mr. Potifer and took him aside and made him a proposition.

The proposition almost took Henry Potifer's breath away.

He was to enact the part of the fat uncle in the play. Just be himself, a professional meddler, and it would be all right. And there was a job of keeping the books of the stock company, which Mr. Potifer could have on the side if he wanted it. The manager was sure that there were other plays where Mr. Potifer could just be himself and get away with the part.

So Mr. Potifer accepted the position with becoming gravity, made an appointment to come the next morning and repeat his involuntary entrance into the scene by the brookside and go cavorting over the turf after the lady and the villain while the police brought up the rear.

He arrived at home at 10 o'clock that evening. Mrs. Potifer hardly knew him. He wore trousers and coat of a large check pattern, a pale gray derby hat and white spats.

But she was so glad to see him that she threw her arms around his neck and hugged him tenderly. "No matter about the job, Henry," she assured him when he would have spoken; "I'm so glad to see you again!"

"What if I tell you that I have a position as an actor?" asked Mr. Potifer, thrusting a hand in his breast and striking a dramatic attitude.

"I don't care what it is," cried Miranda warmly, "so long as it brings you back to me!"

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." — Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont. — "I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." — Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lindsay and their twelve year old daughter, Neva, of Strathroy, had a close call from being electrocuted when the little girl grasped a live wire which had been thrown across the front lawn of their home by a storm.

Mr. Griffin, of the Canada Flax Fibre Co., has had a portion of the machinery which was removed to Alma last fall, brought back and reinstalled in the Arthur mill which will be used only for demonstrating purposes by officials of the Dominion Government which is considering the advisability of granting a cash subsidy to encourage the flax fiber business in Canada.

The dry weather seems to have had a paralyzing effect upon some citizens recently, making extra work for our License Inspector, Mr. G. C. Groves. On Saturday last he had no less than three convictions at Mount Forest. Messrs. C. N. Gates and John Isles were each fined $20.00 and $4.45 costs for selling bottles contrary to the license law, and Mrs. Cummins a like sum for selling during prohibited hours. In Fergus three more were added to his Indian band, so that his cares are increasing rapidly.—Fergus News Record.

DUCKING A SCOLD.

Punishment a Long Tongue Used to Win in Old England.

It is interesting in these days of woman's rights and woman's progress to conjure up a picture of a "ducking" as practiced in England at the end of the eighteenth century.

When the "scold" had been properly tried and convicted she was escorted by a crowd of her neighbors—in fact, by the whole village—to the nearest pond, and the greener and slimier the pond the better. A long plank was produced, at one end of which was the ducking stool, and in this the screaming, struggling victim was securely pinioned.

The chair end of the plank was then pushed far over the edge of the pond, and at a signal it was tilted deep into the green ooze until the scold was completely immersed.

When the dripping, half drowned woman was raised to the surface again to the jeers and laughter of the onlookers it can be imagined that her tongue wagged to some purpose. After a second dose she emerged more subdued, and after a third or fourth she was as penitent a woman as the village contained and was allowed to proceed home, a sadder and wiser woman until the next time.—London Tit-Bits.

RENTED SCENERY.

It Was a Parisian's Idea, and It Suited the Thrifty Peasants.

M. Georges Moreau one beautiful day, in the course of a walk at Villiers-Saint Benoist, greatly admired three magnificent oaks which towered from the edge of a field.

"You'll not see 'em much more, citizen," growled the owner of the land. "They make too much shade. I'm going to cut them down."

"What a sacrilege! Cut down those magnificent trees! Better rent them to me."

"What'll you do with them?"

"I shall look at them as I pass by. Will you give to me for 15 francs a year the right to admire them?"

"Agreed! It's only a Parisian who could have such a funny idea!"

The story spread abroad, and now whenever M. Moreau takes a walk in that district the peasants hail him with: "Hey, citizen, will you rent those trees there of me? If not I'll cut 'em down. Yes or no? One, two, three"—

M. Moreau yields and pays to save the lives of the trees that delight his view. The little birds would be ungrateful did they not salute with their most harmonious roulades the preserver of their nests.—Cri de Paris.

Uncovered by the Wind.

"In the year 1783," says an old chronicle, "the waters of the Rio de la Plata were forced in the month of April by a most violent current of wind to the distance of ten leagues, so that the neighboring plains were entirely inundated, and the bed of the stream was left dry. A number of ships which had been sunk in the river for upward of thirty years were uncovered and, among others, an English vessel which was cast away in 1762. Several persons repaired to the bed of the river, on which they could walk without wetting their feet, and returned laden with silver and other riches, which had been long buried under the water. The phenomenon obtained for three days, at the end of which the wind ceased, and the water returned with great violence to its native bed."

A Good House.

Mrs. Allen was entertaining a caller one afternoon not long ago and was enthusiastically explaining the many advantages of concrete hollow block construction, of which the walls of her new home were built.

"The air spaces in the walls afford insulation against heat in summer and cold in winter," said Mrs. Allen. "And not only that, but such walls afford ventilation and insure a more healthful house."

The visitor nodded approval and paused reflectively for a moment, then replied:

"Well, our frame house must be quite as well built. Every night we lock the cat in the cellar and have to let her out of the attic in the morning."—Detroit Free Press.

Saving Trouble.

When Bobbie went to see his grandmother he was much interested in whatever went on in the kitchen. One day she said to him: "I'm going to make you a nice little pie in a saucer, all for yourself. Don't you think I'm pretty good to take so much trouble?"

Bobbie pondered. "Grandma," he said at length, "mother told me not to be a bother, and if it's going to be any trouble you can just as well make my pie reg'lar size."—Exchange.

His Distinction.

"William, are you ever going to get matters so arranged that we can afford to have an automobile?"

"I don't expect that we can ever afford one, but I hope to get matters so arranged within a few months that we can have one."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Between Girls.

Lou—I saw Ethel yesterday, and we had the loveliest confidential chat together. Lucy—I thought so. She wouldn't speak to me today.—Judge.

Safe.

"Why do you always carry your umbrella even when it is not raining?"

"So some one else won't carry it when it is raining."—Houston Post.

There is no substitute for thoroughgoing, ardent and sincere earnestness.

THE HOUSEKEEPER

To keep glue liquid, fill the bottle two thirds with glue and full up with alcohol. Cork tightly, and let stand two or three days. The glue will dissolve without heat and keep in liquid form.

After frying onions, pour a little vinegar into the frying pan, let it get hot, and it will remove all smell from the pan.

Sew a small brass ring on the garden gloves and hang them up when not in use.

When filling a cake tin remember that the centre of the cake is the part which will usually be the highest, so spread the batter as much to the sides as possible, leaving a depression in the centre; then the cake, when baked, will be level and much more convenient for icing.

Grass stains may be removed from washing materials by carefully rubbing the spots with a little fresh lard. Then wash in the usual way, and you will find that the stains have entirely disappeared.

When cutting new bread dip the knife in hot water, and the bread can then be cut as smoothly as stale.

To remove blood stains, dip the fabric in kerosene, then wash thoroughly.

To clean a pan in which syrup or candy has been cooked, put cold water in it, place cover tightly over and set on stove to boil. The steam will dissolve the sugar.

To remove the odor from bottles or jugs which have been used for kerosene, wash in thin milk of lime. This forms an emulsion with the oil and removes every trace; by washing a second time with milk of lime and a little chloride of lime, all odor will disappear.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

Uncertain Growth.

"You love me, darling?" he asked.

"A little," she replied.

"Ah, but do you not think your love will grow?"

"Yes, but I'm not sure which way."

STEVENSON'S LAMENT.

A Book He Couldn't Read and the Kind of Story He Wanted.

This, from the "Letters of R. L. Stevenson," shows his aversion to reading one of his own books and the kind of story for which he yearned:

To W. E. Henley: I send you a book which (or I am mistook) will please you—it pleased me. But I do desire a book of adventure—a romance—and no man will get or write me one. Dumas I have read and reread too often; Scott, too, and I am short. I want to hear swords clash. I want a book to begin in a good way—a book, I guess, like "Treasure Island," alas, which I have never read and cannot, though I live to be ninety. I would that some one else had written it! By all that I can learn it is the very book for my complaint. I like the way I hear it opens, and they tell me John Silver is good fun. And to me it is and must ever be a dream unrealized, a book unwritten. Oh, my sighings after romance or even Skeltery, and, oh, the weary age which will produce me neither!

"Chapter I.—The night was dark and cloudy, the ways foul. The single horseman, cloaked and booted, who pursued his way across Willesden common, had not met a traveler who the sound of wheels"—

"Chapter I.—'Yes, sir,' said the old pilot, 'she must have dropped into the bay a little afore dawn. A queer craft she looks.'

"'She shows no colors,' returned the young gentleman musingly.

"'They're a-lowering of a quarter boat, Mr. Mark,' resumed the old salt. 'We shall soon know more of her.'

"'Aye,' replied the young gentleman called Mark, 'and here, Mr. Seadrift, comes your sweet daughter, Nancy, tripping down the cliff.'

"'God bless her kind heart, sir!' ejaculated old Seadrift.

"Chapter I.—The notary, Jean Rossignol, had been summoned to the top of a great house in the Isle St. Louis to make a will, and now, his duties finished, wrapped in a warm roquelaure and with a lantern swinging from one hand, he issued from the mansion on his homeward way. Little did he think what strange adventures were to befall him"—

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXIII.—continued.

The man stepped into the middle of the room. The last few months had not dealt kindly with Mr. Montague Hill. He was still flashily dressed, with much obvious jewellery and the slimest of patent boots, but his general bearing and appearance had altered for the worse. His cheeks were puffy, and his eyes blood-shot. He had the appearance of a man who has known no rest for many nights. His voice when he spoke was almost fiercely assertive, but there was an undernote of nervousness.

"Why not?" he exclaimed. "I have the right to be here. I bid because there was no other way of seeing you. I did not reckon upon—him."

He pointed to Ennison, who in his turn looked across at Anna.

"You wish me to stay?" he asked, in a low tone.

"I would not have you go for anything," she answered.

"Nevertheless," Hill said doggedly, "I am here to speak to you alone."

"If you do not leave the room at once," Anna answered calmly, "I shall ring the bell for a policeman."

He raised his hand, and they saw that he was holding a small revolver.

"You need not be alarmed," he said. "I do not wish to use this. I came here peaceably, and I only ask for a few words with you. But I mean to have them. No, you don't!"

Ennison had moved stealthily a little nearer to him, and looked suddenly into the dark muzzle of the revolver.

"If you interfere between us," the man said, "it will go hardly with you. This lady is my wife, and I have a right to be here. I have the right also to throw you out."

Ennison obeyed Anna's gesture, and was silent.

"You can say what you have to say before Mr. Ennison, if at all," Anna declared calmly. "In any case, I decline to see you alone."

"Very well," the man answered. "I have come to tell you this. You are my wife, and I am determined to claim you. We are properly married, and the certificate is at my lawyer's. I am not a madman, or a pauper, or even an unreasonable person. I know that you were disappointed because I did not turn out to be the millionaire. Perhaps I deceived you about it. However, that's over and done with. I'll make any reasonable arrangement you like. I don't want to stop your singing. You can live just about how you like. But you belong to me—and I want you."

He paused for a moment, and then suddenly continued. His voice had broken. He spoke in quick nervous sentences.

"You did your best to kill me," he said. "You might have given me a chance, anyway. I'm not such a bad sort. You know—I worship you. I have done so from the first moment I saw you. I've got to have you, and by God I will."

He took a quick step forward. Anna held out her hand, and he paused. There was something which chilled him in the cold impassivity of her features.

"Listen," she said. "I have heard these things from you before, and you have had my answer. Understand once and for all that that answer is final. I do not admit the truth of a word which you have said. I will not be persecuted in this way by you."

"You do not deny that you are my wife," he said hoarsely. "You cannot! Oh, you cannot."

"I have denied it," she answered. "Why will you not be sensible? Go back to your old life and your old friends, and forget all about Paris and this absurd delusion of yours."

"Delusion!" he muttered, glaring at her. "Delusion!"

"You can call it what you like," she said. "In any case you will never receive any different sort of answer from me. Stay where you are, Mr. Ennison."

With a swift movement she gained the bell and rang it. The man's hand flashed out, but immediately afterwards an oath and a cry of pain broke from his lips. The pistol fell to the floor. Ennison kicked it away with his foot.

"I shall send for a policeman," Anna said, "directly my maid answers the bell—unless you choose to go before."

The man made no attempt to recover the revolver. He walked unsteadily towards the door.

"Very well," he said, "I will go. "But," and he faced them both with a still expressionless glance, "this is not the end!"

* * * * *

Anna recovered her spirits with marvellous facility. It was Ennison who for the rest of his visit was quiet and subdued.

"You are absurd," she declared. "It was unpleasant while it lasted, but it is over—and my toasted scones are delicious. Do have another."

"It is over for now," he answered, "but I cannot bear to think that you are subject to this sort of thing."

She shrugged her shoulders slightly. Some of the delicate colour which the afternoon walk had brought into her cheeks had already returned.

"It is an annoyance, my friend," she said, "not a tragedy."

"It might become one," he answered. "The man is dangerous."

She looked thoughtfully into the fire.

"I am afraid," she said, "that he must have a skeleton key to these rooms. If so I shall have to leave."

"You cannot play at hide-and-seek with this creature all your life," he answered. "Let your friends act for you. There must be ways of getting rid of him."

"I am afraid," she murmured, "that it would be difficult. He really deserves a better fate, does he not? He is so beautifully persistent."

He drew a little nearer to her. The lamp was not yet lit, and in the dim light he bent forward as though trying to look into her averted face. He touched her hand, soft and cool to his fingers—she turned at once to look at him. Her eyes were perhaps a little brighter than usual, the firelight played about her hair, there seemed to him to be a sudden softening of the straight firm mouth. Nevertheless she withdrew her hand.

"Let me help you," he begged. "Indeed, you could have no more faithful friend, you could find no one more anxious to serve you."

Her hand fell back into her lap. He touched it again, and this time it was not withdrawn.

"That is very nice of you," she said. "But it is so difficult——"

"Not at all," he answered eagerly. "I wish you would come and see my lawyers. Of course I know nothing of what really did happen in Paris—if you ever saw him there. You need not tell me, but a lawyer is different. His client's story is safe with him. He would advise you how to get rid of the fellow."

"I will think of it," she promised.

"You must do more than think of it," he urged. "It is intolerable that you should be followed about by such a creature. I am sure that he can be got rid of."

She turned and looked at him. Her face scarcely reflected his enthusiasm.

"It may be more difficult than you think," she said. "You see you do not know how much of truth there is in his story."

"If it were all true," he said doggedly, "it may still be possible."

"I will think of it," she repeated. "I cannot say more."

They talked for a while in somewhat dreamy fashion, Anna especially being more silent than usual. At last she glanced at a little clock in the corner of the room, and sprang to her feet.

"Heavens, look at the time!" she exclaimed. "It is incredible. I shall barely be in time for the theatre. I must go and dress at once."

He too rose.

"I will wait for you on the pavement, if you like," he said, "but I am going to the 'Universal' with you. Your maid would not be of the least protection."

"But your dinner!" she protested. "You will be so late."

He laughed.

"You cannot seriously believe," he said, "that at the present moment I care a snap of the fingers whether I have dinner or not."

She laughed.

"Well, you certainly did very well at tea," she remarked. "If you really are going to wait, make yourself as comfortable as you can. There are cigarettes and magazines in the corner there."

Anna disappeared, but Ennison did not trouble either the cigarettes or the magazines. He sat back in an easy chair with a hand upon each of the elbows, and looked steadfastly into the fire.

People spoke of him everywhere as a young man of great promise, a politician by instinct, a keen and careful judge of character. Yet he was in a state of hopeless bewilderment. He was absolutely unable to focus his ideas. The girl who had just left the room was as great a mystery to him now as on the afternoon when he had met her in Piccadilly and had taken her to tea. And behind—there was Paris, memories of amazing things, memories which made his cheeks burn and his heart beat quickly as he sat there waiting for her. For the first time a definite doubt possessed him. A woman cannot change her soul. Then it was the woman herself who was changed. Anna was not "Alcide" of the "Ambassador's" whose subtly demure smile and piquant glances had called him to her side from the moment of their first meeting. It was impossible.

She came in while he was still in the throes, conviction battling with common-sense, his own apprehension. He rose at once to his feet and turned a white face upon her.

"I am going to break a covenant," he cried. "I cannot keep silence any longer."

"You are going to speak to me of things which happened before we met in London?" she asked quietly.

"Yes! I must! The thing is becoming a torture to me. I must!"

She threw open the door and pointed to it.

"My word holds," she said. "If you speak—farewell."

He stood quite silent for a moment, his eyes fixed upon her face. Something he saw there had a curious effect upon him. He was suddenly calm.

"I shall not speak," he said, "now or at any other time. Come!"

They went out together and he called a hansom. From the opposite corner under the trees a man with his hat slouched over his eyes stood and glowered at them.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Anna's Surrender

"This is indeed a gala night," he said, raising his glass, and watching for a moment the golden bubbles. "Was it really only this afternoon that I met you in St. James' Park?"

She nodded, and made a careful selection from a dish of quails.

"It was just an hour before teatime," she remarked. "I have had nothing since, and it seems a very long time."

"An appetite like yours," he said resignedly, "is fatal to all sentiment."

"Not in the least," she assured him. "I find the two inseparable."

He sighed.

"I have noticed," he said, "that you seem to delight in taking a topsy-turvy view of life. It arises, I think, from an over developed sense of humor. You would find things to laugh at in Artemus Ward."

"You do not understand me at all," she declared. "I think that you are very dense. Besides, your remark is not in the least complimentary. I have always understood that men avoid like the plague a woman with a sense of humour."

So they talked on whilst supper was served, falling easily into the spirit of the place, and yet both of them conscious of something underlying the gaiety of their tongues and manner. Anna, in her strange striking way, was radiantly beautiful. Without a single ornament about her neck, or hair, wearing the plainest of black gowns, out of which her shoulders shone gleaming white, she was easily the most noticeable and the most distinguished-looking woman in the room. To-night there seemed to be a new brilliancy in her eyes, a deeper quality in her tone. She was herself conscious of a recklessness of spirits almost hysterical. Perhaps, after all, the others were right. Perhaps she had found this new thing in life, the thing wonderful. The terrors and anxieties of the last few months seemed to have fallen from her, to have passed away like an ugly dream, dismissed with a shudder even from the memory. An acute sense of living was in her veins, even the taste of her wine seemed magical. Ennison too, always handsome and debonnair, seemed transported out of his calm self. His tongue was more ready, his wit more keen than usual. He said daring things with a grace which made them irresistible, his eyes flashed back upon her some eloquent but silent appreciation of the change in her manner towards him.

And then there came for both of them at least a temporary awakening. It was he who saw them first coming down the room—Annabel in a wonderful white satin gown in front, and Sir John stiff, unbending, disapproving, bringing up the rear. He bent over to Anna at once.

"It is your sister and her husband," he said.

"They are coming past our table."

Annabel saw Ennison first, and noticing his single companion calmly ignored him. Then making a pretence of stooping to rearrange her flowing train, she glanced at Anna, and half stopped in her progress down the room. Sir John followed her gaze, and also saw them. His face clouded with anger.

It was after all a momentary affair. Annabel passed on with a strained nod to her sister, and Sir John's bow was a miracle of icy displeasure. They vanished through the doorway, Anna and her escort exchanged glances. Almost simultaneously they burst out laughing.

"How do you feel?" she asked.

"Limp," he answered. "As a matter of fact, I deserve to. I was engaged to dine with your sister and her husband, and I sent a wire."

"It was exceedingly wrong of you," Anna declared. "Before I came to England I was told that there were two things which an Englishman who was 'comme-il-faut' never did. The first was to break a dinner engagement."

"And the second?"

"Make love to a single woman."

"Your knowledge of our ways," he murmured, "is profound. Yet, I suppose that at the present moment I am the most envied man in the room."

Her eyes were lit with humour. To have spoken lightly on such a subject a few hours ago would have seemed incredible.

"But you do not know," she whispered, "whether I am a married woman or not. There is Mr. Montague Hill."

The lights were lowered, and an attentive waiter hovered round Anna's cloak. They left the room amongst the last, and Ennison had almost to elbow his way through a group of acquaintances who had all some pretext of detaining him, to which he absolutely refused to listen. They entered a hansom and turned on to the Embankment. The two great hotels on their right side were still ablaze with lights. On their left the river, with its gloomy pile of buildings on the opposite side, and a huge revolving advertisement throwing its strange reflection upon the black water. A fresh cool breeze blew in their faces. Anna leaned back with half closed eyes.

"Delicious!" she murmured.

His fingers closed upon her hand. She yielded it without protest, as though unconsciously. Not a word passed between them. It seemed to him that speech would be an anticlimax.

He paid the cabman, and turned to follow her. She passed inside and upstairs without a word. In her little sitting-room she turned on the electric light and looked around half fearfully.

"Please search everywhere," I am going through the other rooms. I shall not let you go till I am sure."

"If he has a key," Ennison said, "how are you to be safe?"

WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY REMEDY

"Fruit-a-tives" Have Proved Their Value In Thousands of Cases

WONDERFUL RECORD OF A WONDERFUL CURE

Only Remedy That Acts On All Three Of The Organs Responsible For The Formation Of Uric Acid In The Blood.

Many people do not realize that the Skin is one of the three great eliminators of waste matter from the body. As a matter of fact, the Skin rids the system of more Urea (or waste matter) than the Kidneys. When there is Kidney Trouble, Pain In The Back and Acrid Urine, it may not be the fault of the kidneys at all, but be due to faulty Skin Action, or Constipation of the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures weak, sore, aching Kidneys, not only because it strengthens these organs but also because "Fruit-a-tives" opens the bowels, sweetens the stomach and stimulates the action of the skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Concentration

It is better to advertise intensively than extensively when the sum to be devoted to advertising is small. This means the regular use of THE BANNER—52 messages a year addressed to the same constituency of readers.

Intermittant or divided effort is not likely to be resultful. One full-powered blow is better than two half-blows.

Concentration of appeal will do a work of conviction and persuasion that will surprise you when the year's returns are totalled up.

A WORD TO THE PUBLIC.

There's advice for you in this little homily to advertisers; it is: Reward with a full—not divided—custom the merchant who steadfastly solicits your good-will. The more you strengthen the hands of the man who serves you, the better will be the service returned.

ENGINE LEFT RAILS.

C.P.R. Fireman Badly Injured in Run-Off near Markdale.

Traffic was tied up on the Owen Sound branch of the C.P.R. last Thursday afternoon, owing to a wreck about a mile and a half on the other side of Markdale. From some unknown cause the engine and tender of the northbound passenger train due in Owen Sound about noon left the track, the engine going to one side and the tender to the other. Fireman W. Janes, of Owen Sound, was pinned beneath the cab and part of the wreckage and was painfully injured. The engineer escaped unscathed, though he stayed with the engine until after it had toppled into the ditch, after which he crawled up through the cab window and got out. The instant the shock came a number of the passengers were rudely jolted from their seats and some of them promptly screamed and for a time it looked as if there would be a little panic. The fact that no one was more than jarred and bruised a little at the worst proved reassuring and the hysterical ones subsided at once. The passengers poured out to see the damage, and it was with some difficulty that the willing volunteers managed to extricate Fireman Janes from his predicament.

It was found that Janes was suffering from a bad scalp wound and that he had bad cuts about the face, to say nothing about painful contusions about the hip and arm. He bled profusely. The only man on the train with a knowledge of what ought to be done was a First Aid man, Mr. J. H. Christie, who was a passenger. Since no one else seemed to know what to do for the injured man he at once set to work to render first aid. The water from the tanks in the cars was brought and the hurts bathed, and bandages deftly applied, to such purpose that when Dr. Eco, Markdale, arrived in an hour by auto he found the work as well done as he could have done himself. The injured fireman was then removed to Owen Sound to his home. A couple of weeks should see him able to resume his work.

The Owen Sound auxiliary and the Toronto wrecking crew were sent to the scene of the smashup and labored all day and on into the night in the attempt to clear the track and make it so that trains could run. It was cleared shortly after midnight, and the much-delayed train reached Owen Sound next morning. The regular went out Friday morning as usual.

No cause has been given for the accident, though conjecture has it that it might be a spread rail or even a broken rail. However nothing is certain other than that the engine and tender left the track and also that it was most fortunate that more casualities did not result.

Two Acton families were seriously ill after eating canned beef.

RACE POISONING.

Alcohol the Cause of National Degeneracy.

The liquor question has been looked upon mostly as a moral question until of recent years the great railroads and other employers of labor began to refuse to employ men who drank.

Of late years, however, the great scientists have thrown a light upon it that has stirred the world into great activity and that should cause every lover of his country to shudder at which is ahead of us if we don't wake up.

It began in this way. The great nations began to observe that the recruits to the armies were getting smaller and that an increasing number had to be rejected on account of some bodily infirmity. Royal Commissions were appointed to look into the cause or causes. These Commissions all reported the same thing, that the principal cause of this degeneracy was the drinking habits of the people. The German report ended by saying that if the beer-drinking habits of the people were not reformed "in a few generations there will not be Germans capable of defending the Fatherland." Recently the Commission appointed by President Roosevelt, in the United States, said that if this drink question was not settled inside of ten years some more virile race would write the epitaph of this republic. The German Emperor has recently said that the great battles of the future will be won by sober nations.

This is a phase of the question that is not yet fully known—that alcohol is causing degeneracy of the people who use if freely to such an extent as to threaten their extinction. It is now pretty generally conceded that it was whiskey rather than the Japanese that defeated the Russians.

This view of the matter has naturally created great alarm in the old countries and most of the Governments are taking measures to spread the truth by means of handbills, posters, lectures and other ways.

That is something that has been neglected by the authorities in this country. Give the people the truth and trust them to protect themselves and their children.

Mr. Edward Morris.

The angel of death passed over the village of Erin on Tuesday, July 14th, and claimed as its victim Mr. Edward Morris, one of the oldest and most respected residents of the village. Deceased had been in poor health for sometime but had been able to be around until two weeks prior to his death from which time he sank steadily. He was 68 years of age and was born in Caledon township, where he farmed until ten years ago, at which time he retired to Erin.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place from his residence, Main St., Erin, to Alton Cemetery, where interment took place. Rev. Mr. Lindsay, assisted by Rev. Dr. Armstrong, conducted the services. The pallbearers were Messrs. J. Justice, I. Teeter, Dr. Short, G. Cameron, J. Cameron and A. McArthur.

The deceased leaves a widow, two grandchildren, two sisters and three brothers. The grandchildren are: Miss Jean and Mr. Morris Teeter, of Erin, Mrs. Thos. Sloan, of Caledon, and Mrs. David Knight, of Swan River, Man., are sisters. The brothers are James, of Erin, William, of Caledon, and Joseph, of Winnipeg.

There was a number of beautiful floral tributes.

Among the friends from a distance were Mr. R. and Miss K. Leslie, Mr. A. C. and Miss M. Morris, Miss H. Campbell, Toronto, Mr. C. L. Gamble, Brantford, Mr. D. J. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. J. Small, Guelph, Mr. and Miss Starrett, Mr. R. Leslie, Georgetown, and Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McNichol, Orangeville.

PULP EXPORTS DECLINE

More Pulp and Paper Now Manufactured in Canada.

According to the annual bulletin on pulpwood consumption issued by the Forestry Branch at Ottawa, the consumption of pulpwood by Canadian pulp-mills has increased by 28.1 per cent. in the past year. The manufacture of pulp has increased and the exports to the United States, Great Britain and China have decreased. While the imports have also increased, these form but a small part of the total consumption of pulp.

Canada still exports almost half of the pulpwood she produces in the raw state, although these exports are being checked by regulations enacted in the different provinces which forbid the export of raw, or unmanufactured, timber cut on Crown lands. The recent legislation in the province of Quebec which forbids the export of 'raw' timber from lands granted to railway companies will tend to further decrease this economic waste.

Altogether, 48 firms operate 65 pulp-mills in Canada. Quebec has 34 of these mills; Ontario, 17; Nova Scotia, 4; New Brunswick, 4; and British Columbia, 3. In addition to these active mills, reports were received at the Forestry Branch from ten firms whose mills were idle and five firms with mills under construction.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR-A CLEAN, COOL SCALP

Use Parisian Sage. It Makes the Hair Fluffy and Abundant.

It is needless for you to have hair that is anything short of perfect. If it is falling out, losing color, splitting, or if the scalp burns and itches, immediately get from F. S. Pickering or any other counter a 50 cent bottle of Parisian Sage—use it frequently—the first application removes dandruff, invigorates the scalp, and beautifies the hair until it is gloriously radiant.

Parisian Sage supplies hair needs—is perfectly harmless. It contains the exact elements required to make the hair soft, wavy, glossy and to make it grow thick and beautiful.

You will surely like Parisian Sage. It is one of the best and most delightful hair tonics known.

Mayor McVeity, of Ottawa, issued an order to the heads of the civic departments, instructing them to notify their various staffs that drinking will not hereafter be countenanced among employees of the corporation. His worship's mandate states that any employee or head of a department who enters a public drinking place or barroom will be penalized. The order is in effect whether the employees are on or off duty.

AN ECCENTRIC NOVELIST.

Ouida's Extravagance In Dress Seemed to Have Had No Limit.

Genius, we are told, has a right to eccentricity, but few men and women whose cleverness has made their names household words ever gratified their curious whims to such an extent as the famous novelist, "Ouida," judging from the "Memoir" of the novelist by Elizabeth Lee.

"Ouida" loved to assume the airs and graces of a great lady. She established herself in a great villa outside Florence, and loved to drive in that city in a little victoria lined with oyster-grey satin, drawn by chestnut ponies, with bells and bunches of pheasants' feathers stuck in their harness. Later on she drove a pair of white ponies and the carriage was lined with white satin.

Matching in colors was one of the novelist's greatest fads. Her shoes were satin to match her gown, and she wore the same footgear in garden or meadow. She usually made her mother dress in black by way of contrast, and liked to receive guests dressed in white satin, seated in a red satin arm-chair, her feet stretched out to show their beautiful proportions.

There appears to have been no limit to "Ouida's" extravagances in regard to dress. She not only had her gowns made by Worth, the great Paris dressmaker of the period, but it is said by those who knew her that she always dressed to fit the heroine she was depicting at the time—white muslin if a peasant girl, white satin for a great lady.

She appears to have treated women, except her few intimate friends, with scant courtesy, and could be very rude on occasions. She rarely dined out on account of her delicate health, and when she did her hosts found her very difficult to deal with. She thought nothing of sulking the whole evening if she met someone whom she did not desire to meet, while, if she felt bored, she would insist on going upstairs to the drawing-room before dinner was ended. There she would lie on a sofa, ring for the servant, and ask if her carriage had come, and if it had not she remained silent on the sofa until its arrival.

Funeral on Skates.

Among the Wends, a remnant of the ancient Slavonic race inhabiting the Spreewald, a region inclosed by an arm of the Spree river, about fifty miles south of Berlin, are seen the most curious funeral processions of the civilized world. As in Holland, the thoroughfares are waterways. In the winter time, when these are frozen over, funeral processions pass along the ice on skates. The coffin is carried on a sledge drawn by six mourners on skates. The immediate relatives of the dead, men and women alike, skate along behind the coffin surrounded by their friends. The women carry a Bible in one hand and wear the ancient national costume.

A Mortal Malady.

The lawyer who was trying to break a will argued his case at length before the judge and referred to the dead man all the time as the deceased, only he pronounced it "the diseased." This got on the judge's nerves, particularly as the attorney took occasion to refer to "the diseased" an unnecessarily great number of times.

"See here," the judge said testily at last. "You keep saying this man was diseased. Was he?"

"Your honor," said the lawyer pompously, "he was."

"Diseased! Diseased of what?"

"Your honor," replied the lawyer succinctly, "diseased of death, sir."

Knots In Harness.

To loosen knots in harness, straps, cords, ropes, or even shoestrings, hammer the knot on all sides with a mallet or a piece of wood, turning the strap or rope around, then dip in boiling water, holding it there a minute or two, according to size of knot to be loosened. Before doing so add a little soap to the water, then with a sharply pointed instrument pick the knot loose. It can often be done with the fingers. Knots that have been pulled in harness or ropes for months or years can be loosened readily.

In the Depths of the Sea.

The quantity of light emitted by many minute deep sea animals is so great as to supply over definite areas of the sea bottom a sufficient illumination to render visible the colors of the animals themselves. Some cephalopods are furnished with apparatus which reflects the light from their phosphorescent bodies upon the sea bottom over which they float. This reflecting apparatus is spoken of as "an efficient bullseye lantern for use in hunting through the abysmal darkness."

Maybe He Found It.

"That's a pretty good-looking umbrella you have there, Scarth."

"Aha! You like it, do you? I thought somebody would notice that umbrella. I just took it down and had a new cover put on it, and it's as good as new."

"Had is recovered, eh? How much did the job cost you?"

"Just $1.50, Jones."

"What—$1.50? That sounds pretty steep to me. How much has the umbrella cost you now altogether?"

"Just $1.50, Jones—just $1.50."

Enough.

Physician—Yes; I asked her age, and she made herself out two years older than she was.

"Is that so?"

"Yes. She never seems to care to hear about my canary."

INSECT FREAKS.

Bugs That Carry Their Own Wireless Telegraphy.

The insect world includes thousands of little creatures which are puzzles no naturalists has yet been able to solve. The reason why they are so puzzling is the fact that attached to their bodies they have various strange appendages for which science can see no use.

One of the queerest of these puzzling bugs is the South American plant fly, which goes through life with strange flag-like expansions on each of its shins. What purpose, if any, these serve science has thus far been unable to find out. The closest observation fails to reveal that they are anything but a serious hindrance to the bug in getting around.

Another insect "freak" is the brenthid beetle, found in South America. It has an extraordinary long and narrow head—longer, in fact, than all the rest of its body.

The male adler fly, from Central America, is equipped with enormous mandibles, which are of absolutely no assistance in feeding.

The blood-sucking sprout fly, which makes parts of Nubia uninhabitable for three months of the year, has a particularly long snout. Science wonders why, for it is no more bloodthirsty than some of its relatives which are short-nosed.

The "feelers" of the Scottish timberman beetle stretch out four times the length of its body, for no purpose whatever that science has been able to discover.

The most plausible explanation yet offered for these monstrous noses, long "feelers" and other anatomical monstrosities is that they constitute the apparatus by which these insects communicate with one another, much as human beings do by wireless telegraphy.

The long "feeders" of the timberman beetle may well be the wireless mast through which it picks up atmospheric vibrations set in motion by similar "feelers" on other beetles.

SCORE OF BANDS.

Dozen Concerts Daily at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The Grenadier Guards Band and Creator's Band will give music lovers a chance to hear the best bands of two continents, but this is only a small part of the musical programme of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. The Supreme Court.

The supreme court of the United States is supposed to be strictly non-political, free from all parties and above all parties. It was designed by the fathers of the constitution to act as the "governor," or "flywheel," of our system of government, maintaining justice and right in the midst of the wrangling factions and clashing interests. According to the theory, the supreme court is to know nothing but the constitution and the laws that are made in pursuance thereof and in every matter that is brought up before it to hold the balance even, regardless of everything else.—New York American.

They All Think That.

"There goes a man who is sure I'm not doing my duty to my family."

"One of your neighbors?"

"No."

"Evidently a friend of an intimate friend of yours?"

"Wrong again. Not even an acquaintance."

"Who is he, then?"

"A life insurance agent."—Detroit Free Press.

Autoist Broke Arm.

A Toronto man named A. N. McGill broke his arm while cranking his auto at the top of the Caledon Mountain on Friday evening. Notwithstanding the pain he pluckily drove the car through to Orangeville, where Drs. Kyles and Rooney set the fractured limb. Mr. McGill was on his way to Chatsworth where he had an engagement to meet a friend and motor out to Walter's Falls on Saturday for a day's fishing. The unfortunate mishap spoiled the fishing trip to say nothing of the loss and inconvenience due to the enforced lay off from work.

DON'T.

Don't worry, don't hurry
When summer draws nigh;
Don't bluster and fluster
Don't sorrow and sigh.
Don't gobble and hobble
Your system with food;
Don't thicker—the kicker
Is painfully rude.
Don't tipple and cripple
Your senses with rum.
Don't rail at and wail at
The men who take some.
Don't sneer at and leer at
The things that displease;
Be cheerful—not fearful—
And just take your ease.

Protest Sustained.

On Tuesday night the O.A.L.A. Committee sustained the Dufferins' protest against Wingham and threw out the game played on Idylwyld a week ago. The Dufferins protested the game because the Wingham players were without certificates. The Committee, however, nullified any advantage which its decision gave the locals by also throwing out the Wingham game, because of some omission in the referee's report. It is hard to see why the Dufferins should be made to suffer for the errors of one of the Association's officials, but this is what the decision amounts to. The two teams are now in the same position as they were before they played home and home games. A second home and home series has been arranged, the first game to be played in Wingham next Wednesday.

THE NORMAL ENTRANCE.

Candidates Fared Badly in Recent Examinations.

Normal Entrance candidates seem to have fared badly this year. The following letter which appeared in a recent issue of The Globe gives a fair idea of the percentage who were successful:—

"To the Editor of The Globe: Supplementary examinations should be held again this year in September to permit the hosts of candidates over the Province who failed in lower school examinations for entrance to Normal schools and faculty of education. The average of successful candidates was very small, for some reason not yet made public. Reports have reached us that at Cobourg only two out of nineteen have been successful; at Lindsay only twenty-nine out of sixty; at Peterborough twelve out of twenty-eight; at Bowmanville five out of fourteen; at Stirling nineteen out of thirty-two; at Brighton three out of seven, while some Toronto schools are reported to be lower still. It is said that Harbord Collegiate Institute, Toronto, only passed four out of forty and Humberside Collegiate only one out of thirteen.

"If these reports are correct the Department of Education should surely hold supplementary examinations, because there were some unusual circumstances that would cause the plucking of such a large percentage of candidates.

M. A. James.

Bowmanville, July 17, 1914."

Orangeville High School passed 9 out of 19. While this is not considered a very satisfactory showing it will compare very favorably with most of the schools mentioned in Mr. James' letter.

In St. Andrew's.

Rev. Dr. Laird, of Toronto, Secretary of the Presbyterian Finance Board and formerly a Professor in Queen's University, will occupy the pulpit in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday morning. Dr. Laird is a gifted speaker and all who can should take advantage of this opportunity to hear him. There will also be a baptismal service.

Toronto College of Music.

The following Dufferin County pupils were successful in passing the recent examinations of the Toronto College of Music:—Senior Second Piano—Kathleen Fleming and Lillian Harkness, Orangeville, and Florence Tate, Shelburne. Junior Second Piano—Maud Smith, 1st class honors, Shelburne, and Beatrice Yool, honors, Primrose. Senior First Piano—Bella Wallace, Shelburne. Junior First Piano—Eva Henry, Orangeville, and Stanley Otton, Corbetton, with honors. Primary Piano—Lillian Faulkner, Orangeville; Mary Chalmers, Georgina Dorsey, Verna Longhurst, Shelburne, with 1st class honors. Pass list—Stanley Otton, Corbetton; Marion Ross and Gladys Varey, Bertha Buchanan, Shelburne. Second Written Harmony—Eva Babe, honors. Counterpoint (2nd theory) Eva Babe. Second History—Eva Babe, 1st class honors. Piano Normal—Eva Babe, 1st class honors. Senior Rudiments—Kathleen Fleming, Lillian Harkness, Edith Anderson, Orangeville, with 1st class honors; Vera Hogg and Alberta Kearns, Orangeville, with honors.

GUARD AGAINST CHOLERA INFANTUM

Cholera infantum is one of the most fatal ailments of childhood and during the hot summer months thousands of little lives are lost by its ravages. The best way to guard against it is to give the baby an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets never fail to regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, thus preventing cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and all other stomach and bowel complaints. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Wiarton Boy Drowned.

Ernie Hunter, a son of ex-Mayor Hunter, of Wiarton, was drowned in the Salmon River in British Columbia on Tuesday, July 14th. The young man, who was a graduate of Toronto University, was in charge of a Dominion Government survey party in British Columbia. He slipped into the river while taking measurements close to the water's edge. The unfortunate young man was widely known and deservedly popular. He was a clever athlete and a leader in hockey, lacrosse and other out-of-door sports. Deceased was a nephew of Mrs. John Bennett of the Hotel Alexandra.

That Kidnapping Story.

Mr. C. W. Norton, Inspector of the Children's Aid Society for Peel and Dufferin Counties, was in town Saturday and Monday investigating the Elsie Hunter kidnapping story. After getting the shoes the girl wore while away on the 13th, Chief Marshall drove the Inspector out to W. E. Island's place on the Centre Road. From a point near Mr. Island's they tracked the girl through the fields to the Lake and back again by the route which she said she had taken when returning to town. The footprints showed conclusively that she had walked to the lake unaccompanied by any person and had gone out in the water of her own accord. The girl is now at work as usual at Mr. Walker's. Steps may be taken to make her a ward of the Society, which would then be in a position to look after her welfare.

By-Law No. 436

A BY-LAW TO RAISE $10,000.00 TO AID IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF TILE, STONE OR TIMBER DRAINS.

The Council of the Municipality of Amaranth, pursuant to the provisions of the Tile Drainage Act, enacts as follows:—

1. That the Reeve may, from time to time, subject to the provisions of this by-law, borrow on the credit of the Corporation of the said Municipality, such sum not exceeding in the whole $10,000.00 as may be determined by the Council, and may in manner hereinafter provided, issue debentures of the said Corporation in sums of $100.00 each for the amount so borrowed, with coupons attached as provided in section 5 of the said Act.

2. That when the Council shall be of opinion that the application of any person to borrow money for the purpose of constructing a tile, stone or timber drain should be granted in whole or in part, the Council may, by resolution, direct the Reeve to issue debentures as aforesaid, and to borrow a sum not exceeding the amount applied for, and may lend the same to the applicant on the completion of the drainage works.

3. A special annual rate shall be imposed, levied and collected over and above all other rates upon the land in respect of which the said money shall be borrowed, sufficient for the payment of the principal and interest as provided by the Act.

Passed this 6th day of July, A.D. 1914.

A. E. WILLIAMS, Reeve
E. HAMILTON, Clerk.

GRAIN AND CATTLE AS SECURITY.

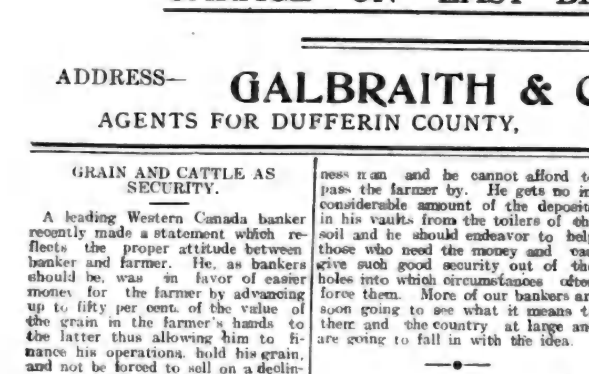
A leading Western Canada banker recently made a statement which reflects the proper attitude between banker and farmer. He, as bankers should be, was in favor of easier money for the farmer by advancing up to fifty per cent. of the value of the grain in the farmer's hands to the latter thus allowing him to finance his operations, hold his grain, and not be forced to sell on a declining market due to the forced rush of wheat to the elevator. An advance of this kind would mean thousands of dollars to the grain growers of Western Canada. Only last fall, it was pointed out, there was a sharp drop in prices as soon as the crop was threshed and rushed out for sale. Early in September wheat sold at 88c. per bushel and one month later the price was down to 78c per bushel. Figure a loss of 10c per bushel on the millions of bushels produced and sold and the aggregate loss to the producer is sufficiently plain to demonstrate the need of ready money for the farmer. If the grower could raise fifty per cent. of the value of his crop on the grain before it is sold he could then hold it and there would be no rush of grain on the market to lower prices which would remain more equable throughout the season.

The same would apply in Eastern Canada only on a somewhat different basis. The stockman could raise money with his cattle for security and could thus buy cattle to feed and hold them until ready to sell on the highest market. Many cattle, pigs and sheep that would otherwise be forced on the market during a period of low prices or before they were properly finished would reach a higher price, and return greater profits to the feeder. Why should not a farmer's grain, hay or cattle be just as good security as a merchant's dry goods or boots and shoes? The banker helps the merchant and business man and he cannot afford to pass the farmer by. He gets no inconsiderable amount of the deposits in his vaults from the toilers of the soil and he should endeavor to help those who need the money and can give such good security out of the holes into which circumstances often force them. More of our bankers are soon going to see what it means to them and the country at large and are going to fall in with the idea.

ROBBING THE COAL PILE.

Smoke That Goes Up the Chimney Is Fuel Thrown Away.

For the benefit of any one who may not see the analogy between a robbed coal pile and a smoking chimney it may be briefly and simply explained.



The visible part in smoke is nearly all carbon, either as soot or cinder, and carbon is the principal combustible part of coal—i. e., the useful part, the part capable of yielding heat. Carbon completely burned forms an invisible gas, carbon dioxide; therefore whenever the gases from a stack show black they contain carbon, which indicates that complete combustion has not taken place in the boiler furnace.

In other words, all of the available heat in the coal has not been realized. It is the same as though the corresponding part of the coal fed into the furnace had been thrown away, for, although it has passed through the furnace, it has been thrown away up the stack beyond recovery. Is this, then, so very different from robbing the coal pile?

The owner who through ignorance allows conditions to exist which are not favorable to the most economical operation of his boiler furnaces, although he is unwittingly robbing himself, is nevertheless stealing from his own coal pile.—Power.

AUTO OVERTURNED.

Serious Accident at Cheltenham a Week Ago Sunday.

Three Ladies Were Fastened Beneath Car.

On Sunday last an accident occurred near this place which fortunately did not terminate fatally, but which might easily have been attended with very serious results. An automobile party motored up from Waterdown to visit Mr. F. J. Jones, the station agent here. It consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Drummond, Mrs. Charles Drummond and Miss Drummond. The visitors spent a delightful day with Mr. Jones and started on their homeward journey about four o'clock. They took a different route on their return and not quite sure of the road, stopped at Mr. H. Henry's to enquire. Mr. Drummond leaving the car to make enquiries. On obtaining the information he desired, he returned to the car and began cranking it up. The engine started and the car backed down and ran into a bank. It overturned, pinning the three ladies under the cover. After considerable effort Mr. Drummond managed to turn the car and remove the cover. The three occupants were found to be badly hurt. Miss Drummond was unconscious and remained so for some time, having received a blow on the temples. Mrs. Hugh Drummond had her back severely strained, and Mrs. Chas. Drummond was badly cut about the head. The injured ladies were removed to Mr. Henry's home, where they remained while Dr. Burns attended to their injuries. On Wednesday two of them were able to return to Waterdown, although they had to be carried on board the train and the remaining member of the party will return home to-day. That someone was not killed outright was almost miraculous, and the occupants of the car are thankful for their narrow escape.—Brampton Conservator.

Found a Friend in Dr. Chase

His Medicines Proven Effective, and Always Kept at Hand in This House.

Mrs. Chas. Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes:—"I feel it my duty to tell you what a great friend Dr. Chase's medicines have been to myself and family. I cannot praise his medicines too highly, and Dr. Chase's name is a household word in our home. Well, quite a number of years ago I sent to you for a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment for protruding piles, and, having used the sample and found relief, I sent to a neighboring town for four boxes, and I am completely cured.

"I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for constipation, and after using them, I am completely cured of this dreadful disease. I am the mother of ten children, of whom nine are living, and when seven of my children were all very bad with whooping cough, caught in the middle of a severe winter, I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and they were all cured before the winter was over, and now we are never without Dr. Chase's medicines in our home, and I recommend them to all

HUGO'S WORKSHOP.

His Carpenter's Bench and the Shavings That Fell From It.

A graphic description of a visit to Victor Hugo in Guernsey and of his quaint home there is given by the late Sir William Butler in his autobiography:

"Of the many curious things to be seen in Hauteville House the master's sleeping room was the strangest. He had it built on the roof between two great blocks of chimneys. You ascended to his workshop bedroom by stairs which somewhat resembled a ladder. Quite half of the room was glass, and the view from it was magnificent. The isles of Jethou and Sark were in the middle distance, and beyond lay many a mile of the Norman coast. Alderney lay to the north, and beyond it one saw the glistening windows of the triple lighthouses on the Casquet rocks and still more to the right the high ridges overlooking Cherbourg. The bed was a small camp bedstead, with a table on one side of it and a small desk chest of drawers on the other, with pens, ink and paper always within reach.

"Near the bed stood a small stove, which he lighted himself every morning and on which he prepared his cafe au lait. Then work began at the large table which stood in the glass alcove a few feet from the foot of the bed. This work went on till it was time to dress and descend to dejeuner in the room used for that purpose on the ground floor. As the sheets of writing paper were finished they were numbered and dropped on the floor to be picked up, arranged and put away in the drawer desk at the end of the morning's labor. He called the writing table his 'carpenter's bench' and the leaves which fell from it his 'shavings.'

"It was at this table and in this airy attic that most of the great work of his later life was done. Here were written 'Les Miserables,' 'Les Travailleurs de la Mer' and many volumes of poetry."

TRAVEL WITH A ROPE.

Be Sure You Have One Handy If You Take a Trip to Italy.

The following extracts from an article in the Woman's Home Companion explains why no one should travel in Italy without a rope:

"Let me urge the tourist not to fail to provide himself with a stout rope—a piece of clothesline is excellent—with which to tie up the trunk which is to go into the Italian baggage car. If you do not you may miss many train connections. It is a trick of the canny Italian baggage master.

"When you go to check or 'register' your trunk at the railway station this crafty robber will try to stick his fingers under the lock or under the staples at the sides. Then he will shrug his shoulders and tell you blandly that he cannot accept the trunk for registration, as it is not fastened securely enough and if the baggageman stole any of your effects while en route the railroad would be responsible. The trunk must be tied with a rope and sealed, he will tell you.

"You have no time to go rope hunting. You have to buy a rope from him. He charges you what he thinks he can make you pay. The price depends on how many minutes you still have to catch your train. Then he clips on a little leaden tag where the rope is knotted, and your trunk is officially sealed. It is a very serious offense to break this seal.

"Now, then, if your trunk is roped when it reaches the hands of the boss baggageman he is required at your request and upon payment of 2 cents to affix the official seal. So, as a last word, don't forget the rope!"

Golfer's Great Catch.

A good story is told of the late William Mollison, the actor. Playing on a Tayside links, he was driving off at the seventh hole (which stands on a high embankment with a burn in front), and after the usual waggle, he let go. But the head of his driver was loose. It came off and went into the burn and left him with nothing but the shaft, with the whipping straightened out—one end attached to the shaft and the other to the head of the club. There he stood a la angler, then he was heard to shout to his caddie: "Get the landing net ready, you fool! I've got a ten pounder here!"—World of Golf.

Clear Coffee.

It is rather expensive to use an egg every morning to settle your coffee, as a great many do, and it is not clear and free from grounds if you boil it. Put your coffee in the coffeepot, pour boiling water in and set where it will be hot, but not boil. If you have your coffee ground fine you will get better flavor and it will be ready in about ten minutes. If ground coarse allow about twenty minutes.

Usually Broke.

NUERTA'S ARMY.

Extraordinary Style of Soldiering in Mexico.

An English war correspondent has some hard things to say about Huerta's army which has been recruited largely by seizing men and women off their streets. He declares that the officers do not take soldiering seriously and that the men, lazy and untrained, hate to fight as much as they hate to work.

The troops are accustomed to live in trains. Their wives are taken along, too, to act as army service corps. They would never be in any hurry to start. They enjoy the lazy side of soldiering.

Torreon, the town recently captured by Villa, was taken by the rebels once before, in September last. After denying for a week that it had fallen the war office admitted the truth, but said that it would be retaken in a few days. For a month or so nothing happened. Then it was announced that "a blow would be struck." Gen. Velasco would start at once and the rebels would be driven out of Torreon. The Government had been urged to act vigorously because in the cotton district a record crop was in need of being picked. They responded by putting a new tax upon cotton "to meet the cost of the war-like operations," and by doing—nothing!

The forces which were to retake Torreon advanced and retreated, chassued and set to partners, marched this way and marched that. Gen. Velasco was frequently reported to be not with his command, but in Saltillo. Not until Dec. 16 was Torreon retaken, and then only because the rebels had drawn off and left the garrison very weak.

After the evacuation of Torreon by the Federals Gen. Munguia was tried by a court of inquiry. The intention was to shoot him. This was his defence: "How could I meet the rebels in the open?" he asked; "they fight in loose formation. I was obliged to keep my troops together. If I did not they would melt away. Desertion is the idea uppermost in almost every soldier's mind. Again, how could I order my officers to lead their men to the attack? I knew their men would shoot them down as soon as they got the chance."

Mexican generals have unfortunately very little talent for war, and they make, as a rule, no attempt to "lick their men into shape." Officers in command are incredibly slack. At a small battle in the State of Morelos the Federals by use of machine guns forced the rebels to retire. The nature of the country made it easy for their retreat to be cut off. But the Federal colonel looked at his watch. "It is time for dinner," he said, and told his bugler to sound the "Cease fire." The rebels leisurely went away.

That kind of incident, which happens daily, helps to keep current the belief that Federal officers do not wish to bring the war to an end. They do not take soldiering seriously.

The Mexican army has no army service corps, no medical department to speak of. It carries no camp equipment, no supplies. Watch a field force break camp at dawn. First there go pattering off a horde of women laden with pots and pans, blankets, sometimes babies. These are the soldaderas, the camp followers, the commissariat of the force. That they move as quickly as they do is a miracle. Whatever the day's march may be they are always on the camping ground before the men arrive. They rig up shelters, they cook tortillas and frijoles (maize cakes and beans), they make coffee. You see them mending their husbands' coats, washing their shirts, roughly tending flesh wounds. Without these soldaderas the army could not move. While President Huerta was seizing hundreds of men by night in Mexico City and other cities in order to swell his forces to a hundred thousand he also had women "pressed" to go with the new soldiers and take care of them. Criadas (maid servants) were positively afraid to be out after dark.

This extraordinary system accounts for the immobility of the Federal troops. Compared with the rebels they are leaden footed. They cling to the railways and to the box cars, in which they live with some comfort.

The Word "Ogre."

Old fashioned etymologists used to say that the word "ogre" commemorated the sufferings of Europe during the ninth and tenth centuries at the hands of the ravaging "Oigours," or Huns. This derivation, however, is now abandoned. "Ogre," which reached the French language by way of Italian and Spanish, is really Orcus, the Latin hell, afterward the god of the underworld. In Romanesque folklore this god became a shaggy, black, man devouring monster, with a particular taste for lost babes in the wood.

Pretty Thin Gold.

The gold beaters of Berlin at the Paris Exposition showed gold leaves so thin that it would require 282,000 to produce the thickness of a single inch, yet each leaf is so perfect and free from holes as to be impenetrable by the strongest electric light. If these leaves were bound in book form it would take 15,000 to fill the space of ten common book shelves.

Bright Prospects.

Manager (hiring office boy)—Well, my lad, what do you say? Applicant—Before I take the job, sir, I'd like to know if there's any chance of promotion. Manager—Well, as to that, it depends on the boy. The last one we had here owned the whole place before he'd been with us two months.

Told Him.

The lawyer was endeavoring to pump some free advice out of the doctor.

"Which side is it best to lie on, doc?"

"The side that pays you the retainer."

Concrete Adopted as Road Standard

WAYNE COUNTY, MICHIGAN, WHERE nearly one hundred miles of Concrete Roads have been built in the past six years, during which time nearly every method of road construction has been tested, now comes out flat-footed and adopts concrete as the road standard.

The story is best told in the following paragraph which has been taken from the latest report of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Wayne County, Michigan.

"With the completion of Plymouth Road, we have abandoned every other form of construction and have adopted concrete as our standard. We feel that our experience of the past six years warrants us in arriving at this determination, based on its general satisfactoriness and its annual cost as compared with other forms of construction. In addition to the economy in hauling, the pleasure in driving and touring, and the increase in land valuation, the concrete roads of Wayne County have been the means of bringing tens of thousands of dollars to this locality".

Concrete roads will benefit any locality proportionately as they have benefited Wayne County, Michigan.

The fullest detailed information about concrete roads will be sent to anyone interested, without cost or obligation. Address:

EVEN AS YOU AND I

(With Apology to Kipling)

A fool there was and he made his lair (Even as you and I)
On a bag of feathers and bunch of hair (If he only knew what else was there)
But the fool to the subject gave no care (Even as you and I)

Oh the sleep he lost and the rest he lost
Yet wondered his health was poor
Tho' a third of his life was spent in bed
It never had entered his foolish head
To think of Ostermoor.

A fool there was and his nights he spent (Even as you and I)
On a mattress that looked so innocent
But he always arose in any event
Tired, unrested and discontent (Even as you and I)

And it isn't the shame and it isn't the blame
That burns the heart to the core
It's the coming to know the comfort we lost
Seeing at what a trifling cost
We could get an Ostermoor!

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, JULY 30th, 1914

The Weekly Sun has a timely article on the subject of municipal extravagance, which, it argues, is not the least of the causes of the high cost of living. Most Ontario municipalities have been travelling at a pretty lively pace in the matter of expenditures and have been steadily piling up an increasing burden of taxation, without giving very much thought to the day of reckoning that must inevitably come. Official returns show that from 1900 to 1912 the per capita taxation of the townships increased 82 per cent., that of the towns and villages 73 per cent. and that of the cities 40 per cent. In considering this increase, it is well to remember that in 1912 the special expenditures for the distribution of hydro-electric power were only commencing. Last and this year schemes have been formulated for automobile roads and radial railways, the latter operated by electricity. If proceeded with these projects will mean another large increase in municipal taxation. Even admitting that the country has been passing through a period of extraordinary development and that much of the increased municipal expenditure was necessary or at any rate advisable, it cannot be denied that this growth of municipal taxation must end somewhere. Municipalities will have to retrench and economize if the texes are not to become so burdensome that they will constitute a source of general dissatisfaction.

Tax exemption has become a question of great importance in the city of Montreal, where statistics show that out of every six houses on an average there is one that does not pay taxes. The bulk of the exempted property belongs to the churches, particularly to the Roman Catholic Church, which is by far the largest property owner in the city. The Assessors' Department is authority for the statement that the taxable property in the city amounts to $611,063,099 and the exempted property to $189,750,146. These figures indicate that over one-fourth of the property in the city does not pay taxes. The value of church property of every description amounts to the surprising total of $85,499,289. Of this immense sum $54,763,031 is held by the Catholic Church and $30, 686,258 by the various Protestant bodies. The assessment furnishes a suggestive illustration of the unequal distribution of wealth in the large centres of population. The population of Montreal is estimated at 600,000, so that if the real estate were equally distributed every citizen, young and old, would have $1,319.70 worth of property. In view of the enormous amount of property that escapes taxation owing to the exemption system, the wiping out of all exemptions is found to become a live issue in Montreal and other large cities. There is much to be said in favor of the exemption of churches, and the difficulty could perhaps be solved by restricting the exemption to church edifices and the lots upon which they stand.

It is welcome news to learn that Senator F. O. Davis, of Prince Albert, Sask., is determined to relieve the people of Canada of the "tipping" nuisance. Interviewed in Toronto this week the Western Senator declared that he intended to press his bill for the abolition of all tipping, at the next session of the Dominion Parliament. The practice of tipping has become so general that many people find it an imposition when travelling. This is particularly the case with people of moderate means. To have to tip porters, hotel waiters and bell boys at every turn adds very considerably to the expense of travelling. Frequently, too, servants guage their attention to the wants of their guests by the size and the frequency of the tips they receive. The person who does not "come across" with the coin gets scant civility, while his neighbor who has the means and disposition to tip generously is almost overwhelmed with attentions. Another evil that has grown up with the development of the system is the tendency of many employers to regard tips as part of the wages of their waiters. They pay a much smaller wage than the position should command and trust to the tips to make up the balance. This makes the employee dependent upon tipping for a portion of his earnings and he naturally looks upon the securing of tips as a legitimate part of his everyday occupation. There is no doubt that this reform is badly needed in Canada. Senator Davis states that he has had letters from all classes of people in all parts of Canada endorsing the principle of the bill, which he introduced at the last sitting of Parliament. Large business concerns and wholesale houses who have travellers on the road in all parts of the country are particularly interested. The latter claim that they are able to keep track of their travellers' expenses until it comes to the matter of tipping. They have no means of checking payments of this class and are in the position of being obliged to take the word of their employees.

The hotels of Mt. Forest, with one exception, the Belmont, had to answer to charges of violations of the license law and a week ago Saturday paid fines as follows—Central, $40, for selling in prohibited hours; Coyne House and American, $20 each, for selling liquor in bottles.

THE CHURCH AND CANADA

The Present Day Opportunity and Responsibility Are Great

Secretary of Presbyterian Finance Board Makes Strong Appeal for Increased Interest and Support.

Rev. Mr. Laird, Secretary of the Finance Board of the Presbyterian Church, addressed a large congregation in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday morning. The rev. gentleman, who is a forceful and eloquent speaker, took as his theme the work and responsibility of the church in Canada, speaking from the text "For we are laborers together with God," I. Cor. 3:9. God, he said, was the Great Master Workman, who provided the raw material out of which we fashioned our lives. God did not work alone, but imposed upon each individual a definite responsibility for opening up and declaring His truth and grace and implanting them in the human heart. A definite responsibility was imposed upon the nation as well as the individual. A special responsibility rested upon the British Empire and the United States, because these two great Anglo-Saxon races were the custodians as no other peoples of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Discussing this responsibility and the duty of Christian peoples to give the Gospel to heathen races, Mr. Laird referred to the tremendous changes that are taking place in China and other Eastern lands and quoted Ambassador James Bryce, who declared that now is the time for the Anglo-Saxon race to give to these backward peoples a knowledge of the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. What God had done in the lives of Christian men and women through the grace of Jesus Christ, he could do in the lives of all men, but the great redemptive work must be done through human agency. At the present time there was an army of 25,000 European and American missionaries engaged in the work of the foreign field. They were a splendid body of men and women, absolutely devoted to the great work to which they had given their lives. John R. Mott, after travelling in the foreign field, meeting these missionaries in their homes and learning by personal observation of the work they are doing, has described them as the most remarkable body of workers of any profession in the world. 250 of these consecrated men and women were representatives of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Mr. Laird appealed for earnest, sincere Christian citizenship, arguing that the missionaries in the foreign field could do their work to better advantage if the peoples of the East knew that Christianity was the dominant, prevailing force in Canada and other Christian lands. While Canada was essentially a Christian land, there were great elements of weakness in Canadian life. It was idle to deny the existence of grave evils such as social impurity, commercial dishonesty and political corruption. It was the Church's first duty to make and keep sweet, clean and pure the life of this fair land. On top of the social and moral evils which the Christian forces of Canada were called upon to combat were the grave problems arising from the great rush of immigration, most of it from non-English speaking lands. In the half century from 1850 to 1900, only 832,000 immigrants came to Canada and these were almost entirely British stock and were therefore easily assimilated. In the thirteen years from 1900 to 1913, the number of immigrants was 2,800,000, of whom nearly 800,000 were non-Anglo-Saxons. There were now more than 1,000,000 non-Anglo-Saxons in Canada and their assimilation had become a serious problem. The speaker believed that on the whole these non-Anglo-Saxons were very good stock and would make good Canadians on the condition that Christian Canada pointed the way and showed them how to live.

In the concluding portion of his address Mr. Laird dealt with the budget of the Church, the need for increased missionary giving if Presbyterianism was to live up to its opportunity and responsibility and the importance of a thorough and systematic every-member canvas in every congregation. Only half of the people in the Presbyterian Church were sharing in the great work that lies before the Church. What was needed was definite organized effort to enlist the support and interest of every Church member. No man, declared the speaker, who is God's man and who has felt the touch of the Master can hold back from this great work and responsibility.

An Amateur Burbank.

While growing seedless oranges, raising blue roses and crossing chrysanthemums with cauliflowers is bringing fame to a California horticulturalist, an Orangeville amateur is attracting attention by his attempts at the raising of semi-tropical plants, fruits and flowers at his residence on York street. Mr. Thos. Porter is the gentleman concerned. His latest effort is the raising of tobacco. While not hoping to raise a perique that will outshine the old Virginia leaf, he has this spring brought to a fair state of perfection a small quantity of a very fine quality of tobacco. It has been grown in a specially prepared soil in small boxes and has been transplanted to his garden, where it is thriving wonderfully well and bids fair to approach the home-grown plant. It is not thought that it will prove commercially valuable, but it is an interesting curiosity to natives of this northern clime. Incidentally a large supply of lucious mushrooms grew up with the tobacco plants. There is no question about the value of the latter.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY.

Frauk W. Robinson, Limited, May Come to Orangeville.

A joint meeting of the Industrial Committees of the Town Council and Board of Trade was held in Mayor Campbell's office on Monday forenoon to discuss the Frank W. Robinson, Limited, industrial proposition. The Company is engaged in the manufacture of coat sweaters and other woollen goods in Toronto but is desirous of moving out of the city on account of high rent and expenses. Frank W. Robinson, manager of the concern, was present at the meeting. The Company is willing to move to Orangeville provided the town will make it a loan of $10,000 and grant free water and exemption from taxes except for school purposes. The loan will be repayable in ten equal annual instalments bearing interest at the same rate as the town is obliged to pay for the money. The first of the yearly repayments will become due at the end of the second year. As security the Company will undertake to give a first mortgage on its factory and plant, make the fire insurance payable to the town and also turn over a life insurance policy for $5000 carried by the Manager. The plant in the Toronto factory is worth $8500 and would be added to after removal to Orangeville. The Company is capitalized at $50,000, with a paid up capital of $18,000. At the present time it employs 33 hands, 18 of whom are men and keeps five travellers constantly on the road. It pays $1600 rent and $300 taxes for its Toronto factory, so that a big cut can be made in the running expenses by coming to Orangeville. Mr. Frank W. Robinson, manager of the Company, is a son of Mr. W. J. Robinson, a former Orangeville man. He is an energetic business man and has built up a large, flourishing concern from a modest beginning. If the Company comes to Orangeville it will either build a factory or buy and overhaul the old egg warehouse on East Broadway. The proposition looks like a good one and should receive the careful consideration of every property holder, when it is rounded into shape. The Industrial Committee of the Town Council met the Town Clerk in the latter's office on Tuesday night to discuss and draft an agreement.

PALE AND SICKLY BOYS AND GIRLS

Need All the Strength That Good Red Blood Can Give.

Youth is the time to lay the foundation for health. Every boy and girl should have plenty of pure, red blood and strong nerves. With thin, impure blood they start life with a handicap too great to win success and happiness. Pure, red blood means healthful growth, strong nerves, a clear brain and a good digestion. In a word, pure blood is the foundation of health.

The signs of thin, impure blood are many and unmistakable. The pale, irritable boy or girl, who has no appetite or ambition, is always tired out, melancholy, short of breath, and who does not grow strong, is the victim of anaemia, or bloodlessness—the greatest enemy of youth.

There is just one thing to do for these boys and girls—build up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. You can't afford to experiment with other remedies for there must be no guesswork in the treatment of anaemia. Through neglect or wrong treatment anaemia gradually developes into the pernicious form which is practically incurable. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills work directly on the blood, giving it just the elements which it lacks. In this way these Pills build up every organ and nerve in the body, thus developing strong, rugged boys and girls. Miss Anna Loseke, Grand Forks, B. C., says: "I think that before taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was one of the most miserable girls alive. I was hardly ever free from awful headaches, was as pale as a ghost, and could not go upstairs without stopping to rest. Now since taking the Pills the headaches have gone, my appetite is good and I am equal to almost any exertion, and you may be sure I will always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail, postpaid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NEW PASTOR WELCOMED.

Galt Methodists Extend a Hearty Greeting to Rev. George Burry.

A very cordial reception was given to Rev. George Burry, the new pastor of Lincoln Ave. Methodist Church, his wife and family, when the congregation of the church gathered last night to bid him welcome. There was a large attendance, both of members of the church and of other churches of the town. The Ministerial Association was largely represented. Singing and prayer opened the meeting, after which Rev. P. C. Wike, pastor of the English Lutheran Church, addressed the gathering. Rev. James Strachan, of the Baptist Church, delivered a pleasing address along the lines of the pastor's duty among his congregation. Other speakers were Rev. F. M. Wootton, of Ainslie street Methodist Church, and C. S. Applegarth, the former pastor, who was very attentively heard. Mr. Burry addressed a few well chosen words to his audience.

Besides the splendid addresses, a short programme was thoroughly enjoyed. The choir sang "The Lord is King," under the capable direction of choir leader, Mr. J. B. Lobb. A male quartette rendered two selections that were heartily applauded. The members of the quartette are Messrs. W. Saunders, F. H. Carpenter, J. B. Lobb and J. P. Hamzill.

The Ladies' Aid Society served refreshments after the programme and a very pleasant social time was enjoyed by all.—Galt Reporter, July 14.

Rev. Mr. Burry will be remembered by many of our readers as a former pastor of Mono Mills Methodist Circuit. He left Mono Mills four years ago for Cooksville, where he spent four very happy and prosperous years. Under his pastorate the Circuit grew steadily in membership, finances and influence. During the second year of the pastorate, Port Credit was made an independent Circuit. The other churches of the Circuit—Cooksville and Clarkson—are now ready to be formed into independent congregations.

THE ARMY WORM.

Prompt Action Is Important Wherever the Pest Is Discovered.

The Department of Entomology in connection with the Ontario Agricultural College has issued a bulletin outlining means for combatting the Army Worm. The bulletin emphasizes the importance of prompt action wherever the pest is discovered. The contents of the circular are:—

The army worm is a stout, smooth-bodied caterpillar, blackish or brownish in color, with two yellowish stripes, tinged with red, along each side. When full grown it is about 1½ inches long. The adult is a moth which lays her eggs chiefly on grass in low lands. The caterpillars themselves never lay eggs or produce living young. The favorite food plants are grasses, timothy, oats, corn and millet. When food becomes scarce the worms move in enormous numbers in search of new feeding grounds.

As the pest is being reported from numerous counties, every farmer should examine his fields from time to time to see if they are being attacked. If the insects have become distributed all over the field before being noticed, the wisest course will be to cut the crop at once if it is timothy or grain and cure for hay, but if it is corn, scatter lightly through the field a poison mixture, made of 1 lb. of paris green mixed thoroughly in 25 lbs. of bran, and then moisten with water, sweetened with molasses. Make the mixture just moist enough to fall through the fingers like sawdust—not sloppy.

If the crop is threatened or attacked only in part, dig a trench immediately in front of where the worms are. In the case where the crop is partly attacked, it will be found advisable to cut a swath through the grain, and rake this off before the trench is dug. The trench is often unsatisfactory, especially in clay soil, if not properly made. It should be at least 18 inches deep, in clay soil, with a straight clean side towards the crop to be protected. Post-holes at least a foot in depth must be sunk every 15 feet in the bottom of the trench. In sandy soil the trench works excellently, but in clay soil it is often advisable as an extra precaution to heap up the loose earth on the crop side along the trench. The small particles of earth loosen and cause climbing worms to drop. Hence in clay or much soil it may be advisable to scratch the face of the wall slightly with a garden rake. Do this also after rain. When the worms are unable to climb the wall they will pass lengthwise through the trench, and collect in the post-holes, where they may be killed by crushing or other means. In digging the trench ploughs may be used, but the balance of the work should be done with spades to insure a clean deep trench.

Wherever the worms are found, prompt action is very important.

ALTON.

A very pleasant meeting was held at the home of Mrs. George Cameron, President of the Alton Women's Institute, on Tuesday, July 21st, when the ladies of the Alton Institute were entertained by the members of the Caledon Institute. After general business and a report by Mrs. T. W. Mock of the Convention held at Brampton the meeting was handed over to the Caledon ladies, who gave an interesting programme, consisting of a Paper by Mrs. Wm. McCartney, two violin selections by Miss Ruby Laughlin, and the roll call to which the ladies responded by reading or meeting some motto bearing on the uplifting of humanity. Lunch was afterwards served and a very pleasant social time was spent by all. The meeting was closed by the singing of God Save the King.

We are sorry to report the death of an early and former resident of Alton in the person of Mr. Charles Kennedy, who with his father at one time ran a woollen mill on the present site of the Dodds Woollen Mill. Mr. Kennedy has been a resident of Emo, Minnesota, for many years. He died of cancer of the stomach. The remains were brought east to George town, where interment took place last week.

Mrs. Hartswell, of Kingston, Mich. has been visiting her mother, Mrs John Clark.

On Tuesday of last week Mr. Wm Hawkins, wife and family motored up from Islington and spent the day with Councillor Hawkins, a cousin.

Mrs. and Miss Litz, of Mattawan N.J., have been visiting at the home of Councillor Hawkins.

Mr. Arthur Hawkins, of the C.P.R., London, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hawkins, has been visiting for his parents here.

Mrs. Wm. Dods jr., of London, has been spending a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hill, Alton.

Mrs. Chester McClellan jr., of Winnipeg, is now home on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hill.

We are sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Barber (nee Miss Pearl Houston) at Snelgrove. We sympathize with the young husband and the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Houston of Caledon, in their severe affliction. The remains were interred in Bramp ton cemetery on Monday.

Mrs. John Porter, from California is visiting at Mr. Peter Lemon's.

On Thursday afternoon a baseball match was played here between Grand Valley and Alton teams. The visitors played a good game and the locals were rather badly beaten. Dr. Campbell, of Grand Valley, was umpire.

Get rid of the old hens. They are boarders and you can't afford to keep anything that is not productive. Give extra attention to the growing chicks, they are the money-makers.

The growing pigs make more rapid growth when allowed to forage in a clover or rape paddock. If you have not arranged for these this year turn them on the stubble field or second growth clover.

When the sweet pea buds are beginning to show, a soaking with liquid manure or a solution of an ounce of nitrate of soda in two gallons of water, will give larger and better bloom. Do not allow pods to form as they take the strength af the plant and shorten the flowering season.

Presentation to Teacher.

Before the school closed for the summer vacation, the pupils of S. S. No. 2, Mono, presented their teacher, Miss M. B. Wainman, with a pretty fern dish and the following address:—

Dear Teacher:

We sincerely regret that the time has come when you are about to leave us. Since entering upon your duties as our teacher you have endeared yourself to us and we feel that we cannot let you go without some little memento of our good wishes. Will you please accept this fern dish as a mere token of our esteem, in the hope that it may recall to you pleasant memories of our little school.

Blezard—Speers.

Miss Annie Lavina Speers, of Prelate, Sask., a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Speers, of Orangeville, was married to Mr. Leon Arthur Blezard, of Sceptre, Sask., formerly of Warkworth, Ont., on Tuesday, July 7th. The marriage took place in Swift Current, Sask., Rev. Dr. Nicol, pastor of Swift Current Presbyterian Church, officiating.

Arthur-Andersen.

A pretty wedding took place on July 15th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Anderson, West Garafraxa, when their daughter, Elisabeth Munro, was united in marriage to Mr. J. Ernest Arthur, of Mono, the Rev. T. Kerruish officiating. The drawing room was beautifully arranged with ferns and wild flowers, the bridal arch being made of the same. The bridal party entered to the strains of Wagner's Bridal Chorus from Lobengrin, which was rendered by Miss Libbie Anderson. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in an ivory liberty satin gown adorned with pearls and draped with shadow lace. She wore the customary bridal veil caught up with orange buds, also the gift of the groom a pearl and amethyst pendant and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. Miss Winnifred Anderson attended her sister and wore a chic creation of pink touched with blue chiffon and rhinestones and carried pink carnations. A cousin of the groom, Mr. Arthur Ewing, of Collingwood, acted as best man. After best wishes and congratulations, dejeuner was served in the dining room, which was tastefully decorated in a color scheme of pink and white.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur motored to Guelph en route to Toronto, Niagara Falls, Buffalo and other points, the bride's travelling suit being of dark brown bedford with hat of Milan straw and trimmings to match.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a handsome silver mesh bag and to the best man a pair of gold cuff links. Among the guests were the immediate friends and relatives of both parties.

Death of Wm. T. Gordon.

The Owen Sound Sun of July 24th contains the following report of the death of Wm. T. Gordon, referred to in The Banner a couple of weeks ago:

Mr. William Thomas Gordon, eldest son of the late Thomas J. Gordon, who was killed some years ago by an acetylene explosion at the C.P.R. round house here, died suddenly on Monday, July 13th, in Calgary Hospital, where he had been removed nine hours prior to his death. Deceased was 25 years of age and unmarried. He went to Western Canada about five years ago, since taking up a homestead in the vicinity of Bassano. Two brothers and two sisters survive, Howard, OwenSound; Evelyn, Fort William; Garfield and Irene, of Orangeville. The funeral took place at four o'clock Monday afternoon from the residence of Mr. M. R. Duncan, 10th St., West, to Greenwood cemetery. The services were conducted by the Rev. T. A. Rodger, of Knox Church. The pall bearers were six cousins of the deceased: N. Harrison, A. Wilson, Alfan Struthers, J. Fox, Frank Fox, and Mr. R. Duncan. The deceased was a favorite with all who knew him and the family have the sincerest sympathy in their sore bereavement.

It costs no more to feed a high-class animal to maturity than it does to feed a grade. The feeder of the first animal has made a profit while in many cases the latter has been boarding the animal and barely breaks even. The best is none too good.

The 30th Wellington Rifles along with other rural regiments, will assemble at Goderich on Aug. 16th, and after six days' training the camp will break up, and in 10 mile marches each day for five days, the whole brigade will proceed towards Lucan crossing, where the London and other city regiments will be met and a sham battle fought.

During the summer, watch the nature of growth of the various crops and you will have an idea of what kind of fertilizer you require for different parts of the field. But remember, clover and farmyard manure is always best. A poor growth indicates lack of nitrogen, weak straw would be strengthened by potash, and small shrunken grain made larger by phosphoric acid.

That supply and demand rule market prices, is plainly seen with the cheese and butter. A couple of years ago many cheese factories were closed because the creamery paid better. Now there is a scarcity of cheese and high prices and the men who remained with the cheese factory are getting their innings this year. It is the same with everything, and the man who makes a business of one thing and stays by it usually comes off best. When others run those who walk usually come off best. In other words, do not change from one line of farming to another without first making a thorough study of what you purpose doing.

Yes, Simply Awful.

TALE OF A TOWER

There It Stood, Yet It Had Never Been "Erected."

CLEVER EVASION OF THE LAW

The Curious Place Where John K. Graves Turned Out His Shot and Bullets and the Contract the Courts Declared Had Not Been Broken.

The late Senator Allison, whose home was at Dubuque, Ia., thoroughly enjoyed humor and a good story. One day when in a reminiscent mood Mr. Allison narrated the following story, based upon facts, which is worth a place among tales extraordinary:

"Along about 1860, when the west was yet quite new, a number of business men in Dubuque conceived the idea of establishing a plant for the manufacture of shot and bullets. At the time there was no factory of that sort nearer than St. Louis, and, with a lively demand for ammunition, it was figured that a shot tower would pay like a California gold mine. The tower was built, the necessary machinery was put in at large expense and production began.

"For a time business was quite satisfactory; then demand slackened, and it soon became apparent that the enterprise would never develop any Standard Oil dividends. After a time some of the stockholders became disgusted with the whole business and practically offered to give away their holdings.

"Among them was John K. Graves, who afterward became a power in eastern Iowa politics. Graves quietly bought up the stock as it was offered, getting practically all of it eventually on the basis of 5 or 10 cents on the dollar. Just what Graves wanted this stock for his associates in the venture could not figure out, but they did not lose any sleep over that. They were tickled to death to get anything out of the dead enterprise. It had been losing money for some time.

"Soon after this the war broke out. Graves instantly saw his opportunity. War makes great quantities of bullets necessary, and he made preparations to supply them. He indulged in certain statements concerning his plans and purposes in the presence of persons he knew would flash the information to a St. Louis concern, and his scheme worked admirably. Inside of two weeks a man whom Graves knew to be a representative of the St. Louis shot tower company called upon him and in the course of the conversation brought up the subject of stock in the Dubuque company. After several days of dickering and bantering Graves unloaded his entire holdings of stock at over fifty cents on the dollar, realizing a small fortune.

"By the terms of the agreement, however, Graves legally bound himself not to erect a shot tower within a hundred miles of Dubuque within ten years. The representative of the St. Louis concern had scarcely got beyond sight of Dubuque, down the river, until Graves sent in an order for a complete equipment of machinery for a new shot making plant. While awaiting its arrival he indulged in a little surveying.

"Dubuque is situated partly upon a lofty bill or series of hills, and the inland country is extremely rough. When wandering among the bluffs Graves came upon the excavation of a deep well. Shortly afterward there was considerable activity in that vicinity. A force of men was employed to remove the debris, and the hole was enlarged and bricked up. A lateral incision was made into the side of the bluff, striking the main vertical shaft a hundred feet from the surface opening. Here a room was dug out and bricked up and prepared for the reception of machinery. By the time this work had been completed the outfit arrived and was quickly installed. Within two or three months of the time of disposing of the stock of the Dubuque concern Graves had the new suburban underground establishment in full blast, producing bullets and shot.

"Of course news of the new factory speedily reached the St. Louis concern, and they sent an attorney to Dubuque loaded with contracts and receipts and paraphernalia for making trouble. The lawyer called on Graves and plainly told him that if he did not shut up shop he would get the law on him quick. Graves replied that he did not understand he had violated any law or any pledge and that he would go right along making bullets, suggesting to the attorney that he start proceedings. The attorney invited Graves' attention to the bond given by the latter that he would not engage in the manufacture of shot or bullets within 100 miles of Dubuque for ten years. Graves contended that he had entered into no such covenant; he had pledged himself not to 'erect a shot tower,' and asked the attorney if he had erected a shot tower. The attorney said that was boy's talk; that such byplay would not go in a court of justice.

"The case was tried, and notwithstanding that every inch of ground was contested by the St. Louis concern, which had able counsel, Graves won. The St. Louis lawyers could not make the jury believe that Graves had 'erected' a shot tower. And so he went right on pouring melted lead into the hole in the top of the hill and gathering up shot and bullets in his brick room 100 feet below and became a wealthy man." Frank I. Stillman in St. Louis Republic.

When Billy's Playin gBall.

The pup in out in centre field,
The cat is on first base,
Behind the mask in half concealed
The rabbit's stolid face.
There's no admission to the game,
There are no fans at all,
But there's excitement just the same
When Billy's playing ball.

The pup does all a pup can do
To keep 'em off the ground,
The cat says not so much as mew,
No matter how they bound.
The rabbit merely winces when
The fast ones bark his shins
They play the game like gentlemen,
But Billy always wins.

For though he's very, very small,
He's managed to achieve
A wondrous magic with the ball
That's known as make believe.
I've watched him as the days rolled round,
And I've discovered that He's always Matty on the mound
And Baker at the bat.

What is a good crop? Communities have different standards. Some years crops are much better than others owing to climatic conditions and better tilth. A good crop is one which gives large returns over the cost of production. It costs as much to produce a poor crop as a good one, and all over cost is profit. Careful seed selection and cultivation are essential factors.

J. D. TORRIE, Clothier & Men's Furnisher. Orangeville, Ont.

Half a day with a buzz saw and the co-operation of three or four neighbors, will cut up a supply of wood for next winter. Do it now, and another slack time, split and pile it ready for use, the women folk will appreciate it.

In some parts the stock fairly pulls the grass out by the roots in order to exist. When the pasture gets short and dried up the successful stockman has green feed for his cattle or else ensilage. His success has been in providing ahead that his animals may have plenty. If you have not provided green feed for this year, purchase bran or oats to feed and not keep the cows tramping all day for bare existence. Plan to build an extra silo for summer feed. It will pay.

GLORIOUS HAIR

Girls and women of all ages want to be beautiful and attractive, but unsightly, thin and lifeless hair destroys half the beauty of a pretty face.

If your hair is losing its natural color, is falling out, dull, streaky, full of dandruff, too dry, or if the scalp itches and burns do not be alarmed, use Parisian Sage. Rub it well into the scalp. It will go right to the hair roots, nourish them, and stimulate the hair to grow long and beautiful. It removes dandruff with one application, stops itching scalp, falling hair and makes the head feel fine.

Parisian Sage supplies the hair with what is needed to make it soft, thick and gloriously radiant. It is sold in fifty cent bottles by F. S. Pickering, and at all drug counters. Look for the trade mark—"The Girl with the Auburn Hair." Accept no other.

SOCIALISTS, CAPITALISTS.

In Germany They Control a Third of the Money.

Socialism and capitalism were once aligned as antagonistic ideas. It required the acquisitive mind of the German to unite the two.

It is in Germany, the hotbed of Socialism, that the new Socialistic capitalism is obtaining vogue. It came about this wise:

A representative of the Socialistic bank clerks' organization went to his directors and requested an increase in wages for himself and his fellows. He was discharged. Under threat of removing their united deposits from the Deutsche Bank, the great money bank of all Europe, the Socialist party demanded the clerk's reinstatement. The bank has refused again.

The General Commission of Social Democratic Labor Unions of Germany has now convoked a meeting to determine whether the unions of the country shall withdraw their deposits from the national bank and start a bank of their own.

The very threat to do this caused almost a panic in the money market of Europe. For the first time it caused capitalistic Europe to realize that the balance of power, capitalistic as well as political, had been transferred to the Socialists. This is an alarming thing for the old order. It means that in the future there will be few, if any, Morgans and Rothschilds, that the money power will be exerted by the people at large.

In Germany, specifically, Socialism now claims one-third of the country's population and at least one-third of its accumulated capital of $4,450,000,000 in the banks of the country. The doctrines of Socialism have attracted rich men to its ranks. Many millionaires have found in Socialism what they could not find in capitalism, a place to become influential. In the old regime a newly rich capitalist had little chance to exert a nation-wide influence. He finds, if he affiliates with the Socialist party that he becomes at once a power in finance, dictating the policy of a great and rich organization.

In Germany Socialists are abandoning the idea that all capitalism is wrong, and substituting therefore the idea that capitalism is right if it is Socialistic capitalism. To destroy capitalism as an evil, it is contended the first need is capital.

Already Socialistic capital has financed numerous loans, being obtainable at a lower rate than private capital. It is collective saving, collective bargaining, collective loaning and collective profit sharing. The large accumulations of members of the Socialistic party in Germany are due to the natural thrift of the nation and to the good business management. The Socialistic ranks in Germany are not conspicuous now for the unwashed and unkempt. Adherents of the doctrines of Herr Bebel are as well dressed and prosperous as members of the aristocratic National-Liberal party of avowed capitalism.

The entry of Socialism into capitalism means the elimination of the individual capitalist and the substitution of the collective capitalist; it means a cessation of accumulation of a few vast individual fortunes and a multiplication of the number of smaller, but more widely distributed fortunes. It is the latest Utopian idea of an intelligent proletariat.

Hitting the Pipe.

When Jones got home the other night he found the family in a panic and the house being flooded from a burst water pipe. The first thing he did was to scold his wife for not having sense enough to go down to the cellar and hammer up the supply pipe to prevent the water from escaping. Then he went downstairs and was soon heard hammering vigorously. After some minutes' strenuous work, giving one last mighty blow, he asked, "How is it now?"

"There is no difference in the flow of the water," his wife calmly replied, "but as the light has gone out I very much fear you have hammered up the gas pipe."

Soldiers In Battle.

Those who have taken part in a battle have confessed that were it not for the shouting and the noise they would lose their nerves and run away. There is always an interval of cowardice in the soldier, but it is quickly overcome, and he fights grimly, unmindful of impending death. Bands were, of course, invented to raise the spirits of soldiers. Martial music, whether from the drum or the bugle, has done a great deal in saving campaigns. Nobody can fight in a cold blooded manner, and in the excitement of a general engagement the most nervous of fighters recover wonderfully.

A Finland Festival.

Paul Waineman's "A Summer Tour In Finland" contains this pretty bit of folklore: "Midsummer is the great annual festival of Finland. From every height a bonfire leaps to the sky in honor of the mating of night and day, who are then united. The Finns possess a poetical legend relating to this annual custom. Kolt and Amarik, the sunset and sunrise, besought the lord of the sky to give them permission to be eternally a bride and bridegroom and once a year to clasp each other in their glowing arms."

Willie's Comeback.

The teacher was telling the children a long, highly embellished story about Santa Claus and Willie Jones began giggling with mirth, which finally got beyond his control.

"Willie! What did I whip you for yesterday?" asked the teacher severely.

"Fer lyin'!" promptly answered Willie.

Not Modesty.

"Sometimes," said the press humorist, "I think my jokes are rotten. I s'pose that's my modesty."

"No," explained a friend, "that's your common sense."

UP AGAINST IT.

Why the Chinese Don't Go In For Modern Improvements.

In China if a family desires to take advantage of the modern improvements and ideas, it has countless obstacles to overcome. First of all, there is the conservative traditional ruling of the Chinese family clan to be surmounted. The members of the clan may number several thousands, and no family is supposed to adopt an innovation unless the entire clan agree to the procedure. These native clans are presided over by certain elders, who possess arbitrary authority to dictate the policy of the clan. Their powers extend even to capital punishment. When they deem any project unwise or unnecessary for one or two families of their entire clan, the matter is usually settled and "sat upon" by their arbitrary rulings.

As these clan elders are among the aged type of the Celestial, with astrophied mental processes as well as an utterly withered spirit of youth, they are always counted upon to remain on the side of well-seasoned Chinese precedent.

The traditions of the native clans, like those of the family unit, are not considered matters of mere convenience. These traditions, in reality, possess the sanctity of a religion. It is simply another form of the ever-present ancestor worship. It is this latter which forms such a tremendously effective barrier against innovation and change among the Mongolians.

When the parent of a family dies, it is not so much a matter of reverence for parental memory that keeps the living family members in the paths of righteousness which the parent was supposed to tread. It is rather a fear which the children possess of offending the evil spirits if one lone native should dare depart from the ways approved by his clan, the elders immediately work upon the superstitious fears of the more ignorant members. These latter are fed with malicious insinuations to the effect that the erring one who dares adopt anything new will surely bring a curse down upon the whole community. Thus it has been that the constraint of one generation has been handed down unchanged to those of successive generations.

As you travel about and observe the yellow man in his native environment and see conditions at first hand, you are not surprised at the astounding and archaic conservatism of the Chinaman. It is indeed time for a great awakening, and our missionaries, as usual, are in the vanguard promoting the doctrine of modern education. But the modernizing of China is a tremendously hard nut to crack.

About one of the most powerful levers to give China another jolt would be to introduce, by some method, several hundred millions of bathtubs, with running water systems attached. This invitation to wash their filthy bodies would give some of the old clan fossils such a severe shock that they could not possibly recover. It would be a great thing in China if a lot of these withered clan elders could be induced to die from fright brought on by fear of a good, healthy, cleansing bath. They wouldn't continue to block progress as they now do.

Anticipating Samson.

An amusing incident occurred at a French theatre on the first night of the opera "Samson and Delilah."

A ballet dancer having fallen ill, the second trombone's wife acted as substitute. Of ample proportions, the woman, owing to a false movement, lurched heavily against one of the main supports of the temple and in an instant precipitated the collapse of the edifice which Samson should have brought about half an hour later. Samson and the Philistines and the members of the ballet were entombed in the debris of the temple. The audience applauded tumultuously. Two members of the chorus were badly injured.

Making a Silk Dress.

Times have changed a good deal since the days of the Garden of Eden, when a single fig leaf was supposed to have been the wardrobe of the mother of men, Mme. Eve. Nowadays, Japanese scientists have figured, it requires 288 pounds of mulberry leaves to make a single dress for the modern woman. Eighteen moths also do their part in making the dress, they having laid the eighteen packages of eggs from which were hatched the 6,400 worms that ate the 288 pounds of mulberry leaves. These worms produced about 5.6 pounds of cocoons, from which were reeled ten skeins of raw silk or 1.6 pounds of silk.

Training Canaries.

In the canary breeding establishments of Germany only the male birds are valued, because the females never sing. The method of training the birds to sing is to put them in a room where there is an automatic whistle, which they all strive to imitate. The breeder listens to the efforts of the birds and picks out the most apt pupils, which are then placed in another room for further instruction. These are the best singers and ultimately fetch high prices.

Turned Them Away.

It was morning in Grassville. An old citizen and a young one met and this conversation took place:

"How're you making out at the opera house?"

"We turned 'em away last night."

"G'wan."

"Fact. Sixteen of 'em. Manager said it was no use burnin' gas for a nine-dollar house."

What Fur Is.

Teacher—Tommy, can you spell fur?

Tommy—Yes, ma-am. F-u-r.

Teacher — That's right. Now, Johnny, can you tell me what fur is?

Johnny—Yes, ma'am. Fur is an awful long distance to go.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Doucette Tells of her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so bad that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what your good medicine has done for me."—Mrs. SIMON DOUCETTE, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and lassitude, and dizziness, are promptly headed by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The drinking fountain donated by the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Shelburne is being erected on Owen Sound street, opposite Messrs. Chalmers and Puckering's store.

R. J. Cunningham of the 2nd line, west, Mulmur, was found dead in bed on Sunday morning of last week. He had been in poor health for two or three years, suffering from heart trouble.

Rev. W. M. Kannawin, B.A., B.D., of Strathroy, Ont., son of Mrs. Robt. Kannawin, and brother of James A. and Alex. Kannawin, of Shelburne, has received a call from the North Broadview Presbyterian Church, Toronto, to become their pastor at a salary of $2,000.

A Strange Deadlock

And How It Was Broken

BY DWIGHT NORWOOD

My childhood till I was six years old is very hazy. I cannot go back of that period except for a dim remembrance of my mother. I must have been without any child to play with, for I remember my aunt, by whom I was brought up, coming into my lonely playroom one day leading a little girl and saying:

"Here's a little sister for you."

My childhood from Ethel's coming was very different from what it was before. Why we did not meet other children I do not know, but I think it was because my aunt lived in the country, with no one of her own class living near her. But neither Ethel nor I seemed to need other associates, studying together under a tutor and playing together in perfect contentment. From this continued association with a girl I did not become effeminate, but Ethel formed a taste for boyish sports. Indeed, as a girl she was quite a tomboy, rivaling me in tree climbing, horseback riding and other exercises pertaining rather to boys than to girls. One of our favorite sports was to toss a baseball to each other, Ethel being as good a catcher as I. But she never learned to throw a ball like a boy. I presume that this peculiarity in a woman is owing to the difference in the masculine and feminine figures.

There was no well defined reason why Ethel and I were permitted to grow up with the understanding that we were brother and sister. My aunt was responsible for it, and she never made her reasons clear to either of us.

The supposed relationship certainly gave us a freedom when we were emerging from childhood into youth that we would not otherwise have experienced. Up to the time when I was sixteen and Ethel fourteen there was not the faintest suspicion that we were not brother and sister. Then I was required to go to a lawyer's office about some property of which I was possessed, and a paper was presented to me in which I saw it stated that I had no brothers or sisters living. The secret was out, but I was so pained that I pretended not to notice it and asked no questions about it.

"I HAVE KNOWN THAT FOR A LONG WHILE."

When I met Ethel again I said nothing to her about my discovery, but felt that a great change had come over me.

When I came back from the city, where I had gone to the lawyer's office, Ethel threw her arms around my neck and kissed me. I had lost the brotherly feeling I had had for her, but it had not been replaced by any feeling differing from what I might have had for any other girl. I was filled with a deep regret. Ethel noticed it and asked me what was the matter, but I gave her no satisfaction. I did not care to distress her as I was distressed. I preferred that she should discover the truth herself.

From this time till I went to college Ethel was still my sister, but I was not her brother—at least, that describes our feelings toward each other. I wrote her regularly, addressing her as "Dear Sis," as I had always been used to doing, while she, replying, would begin with "Dear Brother" or "Dear Dick," sometimes one and sometimes the other.

During the four years I was in college I often wondered if Ethel had acquired the secret that I possessed. It seemed to me that she surely must know it, but I could not detect the slightest change in her treatment of me to indicate that she did. By the time I came home for my vacation between my sophomore and junior year she had grown to be a lovely girl, between seventeen and eighteen years of age.

I had recovered from the shock I had received in learning that I was not her brother and was now beginning to be rather pleased that some other fellow need not take her away from me. Indeed, if we chose we could enter upon a far closer relationship than brother and sister.

But I found myself in rather a peculiar position. I knew that there was no obstacle in the way of Ethel's being my wife, but she did not. At least, if she did she gave no evidence of such knowledge.

Meanwhile I was desirous of acting toward Ethel as a lover and not as a brother. But how could I do that while she supposed our relationship to be what we had grown up to consider it? She treated me precisely as she had always treated me. There was the same freedom that had always been between us—anyway, on her part.

Another year passed. I was twenty years old and had one more year in college before me. Ethel was eighteen and had returned from a seminary with her education completed. I was no longer able to treat her as a sister, and since I did not dare treat her as a lover I fell, so to speak, between the two. My treatment of her, being neither the one nor the other, was constrained. She made no complaint, but it seemed to me that the change in me had produced an equivalent in her. We played tennis and took long walks together, getting on well enough at the tennis, but on our walks there was none of that easy chat, mingled with jokes and laughter, of former times. I walked beside her with the secret between us, talking in that philosophic vein one is apt to fancy about the time he leaves his teens, while Ethel seemed at times a trifle bored.

Why did I not break the ice by telling her the secret? There were many reasons from one point of view and none from another. Why are certain events in families never referred to? For the same reasons that I shrank from telling Ethel that I was not her brother, and, as to telling her that the spark of love for her had been kindled within me, how could I say such a thing to one who believed herself to be my sister?

This condition continued during my senior year in college. My letters to Ethel were bereft of either brotherly or lover-like expression, and hers to me were also neutral. But when I returned home a graduate a new element had been injected into the problem that was bound very soon to change the situation. I found a young man hanging about Ethel whose intentions were as plain as the sun in heaven.

His presence threw me into a fever at once. I found it difficult to treat him with ordinary civility. If Ethel had been my sister I should doubtless have freely discussed the matter of the attentions of this young man with her. As it was, I did not feel the right even to mention the matter. Besides, I was so inordinately jealous of her suitor that I should have doubtless spoken offensively.

In Ethel there was no change toward me. She was the same as she had been for the past two years. She must have known that there were fires burning within me, but she did not appear to notice them. She said nothing to me about the attentions of Mr. Jackanapes, as I considered him, but a sister is not likely to speak of a suitor to a brother until the brother first speaks to her.

My pentup feelings kept rising until the dam burst. One day, coming unexpectedly upon Mr. Jackanapes pleading his suit with Ethel, I lost my grip on myself and blurted out:

"What do you mean, sir, by wooing my—my sister without first asking permission from me, her natural guardian?"

He looked at me in astonishment, then said: "I beg a thousand pardons. If it is not too late may I now have that permission?"

"I prefer before giving my permission to consult with her."

"That being the case, I will withdraw."

Rising, he left Ethel and me together. I stood with my back half turned to her, scowling. I should have been conscious of having made a guy of myself, but I was not.

"Dick," said Ethel, "what's the matter with you?"

"Don't you think I should be consulted in a love affair of yours?"

"How do you know that this is a love affair of mine?"

"It certainly is one if this fellow who has intruded upon"—

"I can't help what he may feel for me. I have not accepted him and don't intend to."

"Thank God!"

"Why are you so concerned about whom I marry? For some years past you have acted coldly toward me."

"That was because"—

"Because what?"

"I discovered"—

"What did you discover?"

"That you and I are not brother and sister. We are no relation."

"I have known that for a long while."

"You have known it a long while! Why didn't you tell me?"

"Why didn't you tell me?"

I went to Ethel. Now that the barrier between us was broken down, my former brotherly treatment of her was a help. Sitting beside her, I took her to my arms, and, beginning as a brother, I rapidly developed into a lover.

Ethel and I were the children of two bosom friends. My mother died when I was a baby, and I was turned over to my aunt. Ethel's mother died when Ethel was four years old, and my aunt, being a near friend of her family, was prevailed upon to take the child, being chiefly moved by a desire to furnish me with a playmate. She gave me in addition a companion for life.

I have never been sure but that Ethel encouraged Mr. Jackanapes in order to break the deadlock there was between her and me.

Had No Power Over the Limbs

Locomotor Ataxia, Heart Troubles and Nervous Spells Yielded to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It would be easy to tell you how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures locomotor ataxia and derangements of heart and nerves, but it may be more satisfactory to you to read this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D. 3, Sombra, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbors of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXIV.—continued.

"I had bolts fitted on the doors yesterday," she answered. "If he is not here now I can make myself safe."

It was certain that he was not there. Anna came back into the sitting-room with a little sigh of relief.

"Indeed," she said, "it is very fortunate that I should have you this afternoon. Esther Sydney or Mr. Brendon always comes home with me, and to-night both are away. Mary is very good, but she is too nervous to be the slighest protection."

"I am very glad," he answered, in a low tone. "It has been a delightful evening for me."

"And for me," Anna echoed.

A curious silence ensued. Anna was sitting before the fire a little distance from him—Ennison himself remained standing. Some shadow of reserve seemed to have crept up between them. She laughed nervously, but kept her eyes averted.

"It is strange that we should have met Annabel," she said. "I am afraid your broken dinner engagement will not be easy to explain."

He was very indifferent. In fact he was thinking of other things.

"I am going," he said, "to be impertinent. I do not understand why you and your sister should not see more of one another. You must be lonely here with only a few men friends."

She shook her head.

"Loneliness," she said, "is a luxury which I never permit myself. Besides—there is Sir John."

"Sir John is an ass!" he declared.

"He is Annabel's husband," she reminded him.

"Annabel!" He looked at her thoughtfully. "It is rather odd," he said, "but I always thought that your name was Annabel and hers Anna."

"Many other people," she remarked, "have made the same mistake."

"Again," he said, "I am going to be impertinent. I never met your sister in Paris, but I heard about her more than once. She is not in the least like the descriptions of her."

"She has changed a good deal," Anna admitted.

"There is some mystery about you both," he exclaimed, with sudden earnestness. "No, don't interrupt me. Why may I not be your friend? Somehow or other I feel that you have been driven into a false position. You represent to me an enigma, the solution of which has become the one desire of my life. I want to give you warning that I have set myself to solve it. To-morrow I am going to Paris."

She seemed unmoved, but she did not look at him.

"To Paris! But why? What do you hope to discover there?"

"I do not know," he answered, "but I am going to see David Courtlaw."

Then she looked up at him with frightened eyes.

"David Courtlaw!" she repeated. "What has he to do with it?"

"He was your sister's master—her friend. A few days ago I saw him leave your house. He was like a man beside himself. He began to tell me something—and stopped. I am going to ask him to finish it."

She rose up.

"I forbid it!" she said firmly.

They were standing face to face now upon the hearth-rug. She was very pale, and there was a look of fear in her eyes.

"I will tell you as much as this," she continued. "There is a secret. I admit it. Set yourself to find it out, if you will—but if you do, never dare to call yourself my friend again."

"It is for your good—your good only I am thinking," he declared.

"Then let me be the judge of what is best," she answered.

He was silent. The tinkling bell of a passing hansom seemed to ring into the room with curious distinctness. He felt his heart beat faster and faster—his self-restraint slipping away. After all, what did it matter?—it or anything else in the world? She was within reach of his arms, beautiful, compelling, herself as it seemed suddenly conscious of the light which was burning in his eyes. A quick flush stained her cheeks. She put out her hands to avoid his embrace.

"No!" she exclaimed. "You must not. It is impossible."

His arms were around her. He only laughed his defiance.

"I will make it possible," he cried. "I will make all things possible."

Anna was bewildered. She did not know herself. Only she was conscious of an unfamiliar and wonderful emotion. She gave her lips to his without resistance. All her protests seemed stifled before she could find words to utter them. With a little sigh of happiness she accepted this new thing.

CHAPTER XXV.

Her Sister's Secret.

"I think," Lady Ferringhall said, "that you are talking very foolishly. I was quite as much annoyed as you were to see Mr. Ennison with my sister last night. But apart from that, you have no particular objection to him, I suppose?"

"The occurrence of last night is quite sufficient in itself," Sir John answered, "to make me wish to discontinue Mr. Ennison's acquaintance. I should think, Anna, that your own sense—or—of propriety would enable you to see this. It is not possible for us to be on friendly terms with a young man who has been seen in a public place, having supper alone with your sister after midnight. The fact itself is regrettable enough—regrettable, I fear, is quite an inadequate word. To receive him here afterwards would be most repugnant to me."

"He probably does not know of the relationship," Annabel remarked.

"I imagine," Sir John said, "that your sister would acquaint him with it. In any case, he is liable to discover in at any time. My own impression is that he already knows."

"Why do you think so?" she cried.

"I noticed him call her attention to us as we passed down the room," he answered. "Of course he may merely have been telling her who we were, but I think it improbable."

"Apart from the fact of his acquaintance with Anna—Annabel," Lady Ferringhall said quickly, "may I ask if you have any other objection to Mr. Ennison?"

Sir John hesitated.

"To the young man himself," he answered, "no! I simply object to his calling here two or three times a week during my absence."

"How absurd!" Annabel declared. "How could he call except in your absence, as you are never at home in the afternoon. And if I cared to have him come every day, why shouldn't he? I find him very amusing and very useful as well. He brought his mother to call, and as you know the Countess goes scarcely anywhere. Hers is quite the most exclusive set in London."

"My feeling in the matter," Sir John said, "is as I have stated. Further, I do not care for you to accept social obligations from Mr. Ennison, or any other young man."

"You are jealous," she declared contemptuously.

"If I am," he answered, reddening, "you can scarcely assert that it is without a cause. You will forgive my remarking, Anna, that I consider there is a great change in your manner towards me and your general deportment since our marriage."

Annabel laughed gaily.

"My dear man," she exclaimed, "wasn't that a foregone conclusion?"

"You treat the matter lightly," he continued. "To me it seems serious enough. I have fulfilled my part of the marriage contract. Can you wonder that I expect you to fulfil yours?"

"I am not aware," she answered, "that I have ever failed in doing so."

"You are at least aware," he said, "that you have on several occasions acted in direct opposition to my wishes."

"For example?"

"Your dyed hair. I was perfectly satisfied with your appearance. I consider even now that the present color is far less becoming. Then you have altered not only that, but your manner of dressing it. You have darkened your eyebrows, you have even changed your style of dress. You have shown an almost feverish anxiety to eliminate from your personal appearance all that reminded me of you—when we first met."

"Well," she said, "has there not been some reason for this? The likeness to Annabel could scarcely have escaped remark. You forget that every one is going to the 'Universal' to see her."

He frowned heavily.

"I wish that I could forget it," he said. "Fortunately I believe that the relationship is not generally known. I trust that no unpleasant rumours will be circulated before the election, at any rate."

Annabel yawned.

"They might do you good," she remarked. "'Alcide' is very popular."

Sir John turned toward the door.

"It does not appear to me," he said, stiffly, "to be an affair for jests."

Annabel laughed derisively and took up her book. She heard her husband's heavy tread descending the stairs, and the wheels of his carriage as he drove off. Then she threw the volume away with a little impatient exclamation. She rose from her chair, and began walking up and down the room restlessly. Every now and then she fingered an ornament, moved a piece of furniture, or rearranged some draperies. Once she stopped in front of a mirror and looked at herself thoughtfully.

"I am getting plain," she said, with a little shudder. "This life is killing me! Oh, it is dull, dull, dull."

Suddenly an idea seemed to strike her. She went to her room and changed the loose morning gown in which she had lunched for a dark walking dress. A few minutes later she left the house on foot, and taking a hansom at the corner of the Square, drove to Anna's flat.

Anna was having tea by herself when she entered. She rose at once with a little exclamation, half of surprise, half of pleasure.

"My dear Annabel," she said, "this is delightful, but I thought that it was forbidden."

"It is," Annabel answered shortly. "But I wanted to see you."

Anna wheeled an easy chair to the fire.

"You will have some tea?" she asked.

Annabel ignored both the chair and the invitation. She was looking about herself, and her face was dark with anger. The little room was fragrant with flowers, Anna herself bright, and with all the evidences of well being. Annabel was conscious then of the slow anger which had been burning within her since the night of her visit to the "Universal." Her voice trembled with suppressed passion.

"I have come for an explanation," she said. "You are an imposter. How dare you use my name and sing my songs?"

Anna looked at her sister in blank amazement.

"Annabel!" she exclaimed. "Why, what is the matter with you? What do you mean?"

Annabel laughed scornfully.

"Oh, you know," she said. "Don't be a hypocrite. You are not 'Alcide.' You have no right to call yourself 'Alcide.' You used to declare that you hated the name. You used to beg me for hours at a time to give it all up, never to go near the 'Ambassador's' again. And yet the moment I am safely out of the way you are content to dress yourself in my rags, to go and get yourself popular and admired and successful, all on my reputation."

"Annabel! Annabel!"

Annabel stamped her foot. Her tone was hoarse with passion.

"Oh, you can act!" she cried. "you can look as innocent and shocked as you please. I want to know who sent you those."

She pointed with shaking finger to a great bunch of dark red carnations, thrust carelessly into a deep china bowl, to which the card was still attached. Anna followed her finger, and looked back into her sister's face.

"They were sent to me by Mr. Nizel Ennison, Annabel. How on earth does it concern you?"

Annabel laughed hardly.

"Concern me!" she repeated fiercely. "You are not content then with stealing from me my name. You would steal from me then the only man I ever cared a snap of the fingers about. They are not your flowers. They are mine! They were sent to 'Alcide' not to you."

Anna rose to her feet. At last she was roused. Her cheeks were flushed, and her eyes bright.

"Annabel," she said, "you are my sister, or I would bid you take the flowers if you care for them, and leave the room. But behand these things which you have said to me must be others of which I know nothing. You speak as one injured—as though I had been the one to take your name—as though you had been the one to make sacrifices. In your heart you know very well that this is absurd. It is you who took my name, not I yours. It is I who took the burden of your misdeeds upon my shoulders that you might become Lady Ferringhall. It is I who am persecuted by the man who calls himself your husband."

Annabel shivered a little and looked around her.

"He does not come here," she exclaimed, quickly.

"He spends hours of every day on the pavement below," Anna answered calmly. "He has attempted my life, I dare not even walk out alone. I have been bearing this—for your sake. Shall I send him to Sir John?"

Annabel was white to the lips, but her anger was not yet spent.

"It was your own fault," she exclaimed. "He would never have found you out if you had not personated me."

"On the contrary," Anna whispered quietly, "we met in a small boarding house where I was stopping."

"You have not told me yet," Annabel said, "how it is that you have dared to personate me. To call yourself 'Alcide'! Your hair, your gestures, your voice, all mine! Oh, how dared you do it?"

"You must not forget," Anna said calmly, "that it is necessary for me also—to live. I arrived here with something less than five pounds in my pocket. My reception at West Kensington you know of. I was the black sheep, I was harried out of the way. You did not complain then that I personated you—no, nor when Sir John came to me in Paris, and for your sake I lied."

"You did not——"

"Wait, Annabel! When I arrived in London I went to live in the cheapest place I could find. I set myself to find employment. I offered myself as a clerk, as a milliner, as a shop girl. I would even have taken a place as waitress in a tea shop. I walked London till the soles of my boots were worn through, and my toes were blistered. I ate only enough to keep body and soul together!"

"There was no need for such heroism," Annabel said coldly. "You had only to ask——"

"Do you think," Anna interrupted, with a note of passion trembling also in her tone, "that I would have taken alms from Sir John, the man to whom I had lied for your sake. It was not possible. I went at last when I had barely a shilling in my purse to a dramatic agent. By chance I went to one who had known you in Paris."

"Well!"

"He greeted me effusively. He offered me at once an engagement. I told him that I was not 'Alcide.' He only laughed. He had seen the announcement of your marriage in the papers, and he imagined that I simply wanted to remain unknown because of your husband's puritanism. I sang to him, and he was satisfied. I did not appear, I have never announced myself as 'Alcide.' It was the Press who forced the identity upon me."

(To be continued.)

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and skin as well as on the kidneys, and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Concentration

It is better to advertise intensively than extensively when the sum to be devoted to advertising is small. This means the regular use of THE BANNER—52 messages a year addressed to the same constituency of readers.

Intermittant or divided effort is not likely to be resultful. One full-powered blow is better than two half-blows.

Concentration of appeal will do a work of conviction and persuasion that will surprise you when the year's returns are totalled up.

A WORD TO THE PUBLIC.

There's advice for you in this little homily to advertisers: it is: Reward with a full—not divided—custom the merchant who steadfastly solicits your good-will. The more you strengthen the hands of the man who serves you, the better will be the service returned.

DEAF AND DUMB

But Regained Use of His Tongue When Angered.

A mendicant, but well dressed tourist struck town last Thursday and began operating on the "innocents" of Durham. He was deaf and dumb, and had one shrivelled arm tucked in his coat sleeve. He was fortified too, like the rest of his kind, with testimonials and character certificates. He was in need of money to be devoted to some laudable cause. He was in a bad state and an education was necessary to put him on the highway to opulence. He touched the tender spot of some and separated them from their coin. Soon, however, he began to smell a rat, and thinking discretion was the better part of valor, he thought he would go to Mt Forest, where the people are easy. His game was too slow when he wanted to make a hasty retreat, and when he faced the Grand Trunk ticket office his tongue loosened up all of a sudden and he enquired the cost of a ticket. Mr. Towner, whom he had interviewed a short time previously with pencil and paper, but without success, recognized his customer, and blandly intimated that he was the gentleman who proclaimed himself deaf and dumb only a few minutes before. The knight of the road denied the accusation, when Mr. Towner reiterated the charge, telling him he was a pernicious prevaricator, whose moral sensibilities had been sadly contaminated by associations with Ananias. On hearing his character read out, the poor deaf mute stretched forth his withered arm, wagged his dumb tongue, and threatened to annihilate the Grand Trunk and its officials, from Towner down to the General Superintendent. Just as the train pulled out, Constable Pettigrew came along to see how the poor unfortunate mute tallied with a picture he had from the rogues gallery. But his bird had flown; he was on his way to Mt. Forest. His reputation was ahead of him and the cop in the neighboring town took charge of him and notified Windsor, where he was thought to be wanted for theft and jail breaking. The authorities from Windsor, however, did not think the game worth the chase, and the authorities at Mount Forest let him go, giving him thirty seconds to leave town. The mute was talkative on reaching Mt. Forest, and was as full as a goat wherever he got the liller. Certainly not here, as local option is in force in this town. —Durham Chronicle.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

The Blind Children Should Attend School.

The expenditure of public money upon "schools and school-masters" is regarded by our legislators, and by the people who elect the legislators, as a good investment. The educated man is more useful to the community than his illiterate neighbor, his labour is more productive, he lives a happier and more contented life, taking an intelligent interest in the various questions that come before him for decision, he is not easily led by the demagogic agitator, and temptations in a criminal direction. For these and numerous other equally good reasons it pays the state to provide faculties for education for all the children of the people, whether born here or coming from a foreign country to make homes among us—hence our free school system, enforced to some extent by compulsory education laws. For the blind who cannot be taught to read by sight, a system for reading by touch has been devised, the printed characters representing letters, etc., being embossed on the paper, instead of being indicated by a difference in color. Having learned to read and write, the education of the blind person can be continued to any desired extent, including the subjects taught in public schools for the seeing, music and several handicrafts. Happily the blind are not sufficiently numerous to necessitate the equipment of many schools for their accommodation, so the scheme of taking the blind child to the free school instead of bringing the free school to the blind child has been adopted. The Ontario School for the Blind, located at Brantford, admits as pupils blind persons of both sexes, between the ages of seven and twenty-one, without charge for board, tuition or books, but parents are expected to provide clothing and pay travelling expenses. It is a school—not a "Home," nor a Hospital, nor an Asylum—and among the pupils are many who, though not entirely blind, have sight so defective that they cannot receive an education in the ordinary public schools. If any reader of The Banner has a child so afflicted, or knows of one in his neighborhood, a letter or post card addressed to H. F. Gardiner, Principal O. S. B., Brantford, giving the name and postoffice of parent or guardian, will help the school to do all the work for which it was established and is maintained by the Government.

Already we hear reports of heavy loss from forest and farm fires. It is a warning for us to be more careful, and do our share to prevent the fires getting a start. It is usually carelessness by the farmer clearing land, campers or railroads that has started some of our most disastrous fires. The fire-fighting service of the Government and timber owners is only a partial protection. Preventive measures are the most effective.

BUDDHIST IN ITS ORIGIN

SOME CHRISTIAN STORIES MAY HAVE COME FROM EAST.

Recent Researches Show That Psalms of the Brethren and Psalms of the Sisters In the Scriptures of Oriental Faith Parallel and Antedate Incidents Thought To Be Peculiarly Christian Ones.

Interesting evidence that the Buddhist writings contain stories and parables that are repeated in the Christian Gospels is discussed in a recent article by A. J. Edmunds, who with Mr. Anesaki, a Japanese scholar, has been making an exhaustive comparison of Christian and Buddhist scriptures, and has tabulated the result in a monumental work entitled "Christian and Buddhist Gospels."

Buddha, founder of the Buddhist religion, lived about six hundred years before the Christian era. Hence the suggestion of the theological magazine means that part of what we regard as Christian teachings originated with Buddha.

These Buddhistic teachings are found in "The Psalms of the Brethren," "The Psalms of the Sisters" and a "Compendium of Philosophy," three very ancient Buddhist works that have just been translated into English by Mrs. Rhys Davids.

"The Psalms of the Brethren" contains sayings ascribed to Buddha, and is said to have been written not later than 250 B. C.

Here is one passage which parallels a famous sentence in the New Testament. A nun was persistently tempted by a libertine and plucked out her eye. "There!" she exclaimed, "take your eye," and gave it to him. "One cannot help being haunted by the suspicion," says The Theological Review, "that this story became as famous as other Buddhist legends which we now know to have been translated into the vernaculars of the Parthian Empire, the buffer state between Palestine and India. Why should not the story have been familiar to him who said: 'If thine eye cause thee to offend, pluck it out!'"

These Buddhist works also tell a story of a "penitent thief" and a "beloved disciple," both of which suggest the corresponding figures in the New Testament. The story of the penitent thief is said to bear a particularly close resemblance to that of the Gospels. The reviewer explains this by the fact that the Buddhist writings were translated into the language of Persia, which was the favorite means of communication in the lifetime of the Apostles between Palestine and India and the farther countries of the East. It is possible, the writer suggests, that the people of the Holy Land were quite familiar with Buddhism.

"Certain it is," he writes, "that so early as 2 B. C. the Buddhist 'Sutras' were translated into a vernacular. This vernacular was not Chinese, for the 'Annals' declare that the religion, though known in China then, was not believed in. Moreover, the vernacular translation was presented to a Chinese official by an ambassador from the great Yue-chi that people whose coins have come down to us with Greek on one side and Pali on the other. Was the vernacular Greek itself? Probably not. More likely it was Tokharish or Sogdian, known to have been used by that people. Specimens of Buddhist books in both tongues have been found in Central Asia. And both were current in portions of the great Parthian empire.

"Such being the case, we need not be astonished if Luke and John had heard of two towering characters in these 'Psalms of the Monks,' viz., the Penitent Thief and the Beloved Disciple. Yes, here they both are, as large as life. Indeed, their absence would raise doubts as to the antiquity and genuineness of the 'Psalms,' so prominent are these characters in the oldest books and sculptures. Quite the reverse would be the case with the gospels. Were we to find a recension of Luke without the Penitent Thief we should say at once, 'That looks like an earlier edition.' And why? Because Luke has to do violence to the text of his master, Mark, to get the story into the Gospel at all. Compare the synoptic narratives:

"'And they that were crucified with him reproached him.' (St. Mark, chap. xv., verse 32.)

"'And the robbers also that were crucified with him cast upon Him the same reproach.' St. Matthew, chap. xxvii, verse 44.)

"'And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him . . . But the other answered and, rebuking him, said . . . . (St. Luke, chap. xxix., verses 39-40.)

"Why is Luke so anxious to introduce this character at variance with the older tradition? The answer is that he was a student of religion, and in the Syrian metropolis, which was the terminus of the Chinese silk trade, he had seen Kanishka's coins, which even now are found from India to Sweden. Upon these coins he had seen the name of Buddha in Greek letters.

"He had inquired who this Buddha was, and had found that he was the founder of a missionary religion of love and foregiveness, whose scriptures were being translated into Sogdian and Tokharish, two vernaculars of the neighboring Parthian empire. Scenes from these scriptures were being carved on temple gates in that empire, which ancient geography shows us was studded with a long line of hotels from Luke's own city to the Hindu frontier. He could not escape this knowledge in that great international metropolis. As a poet and an evangelist he made it his business to adapt the new Christian religion to the Gentile world. The Fathers of the Church are unanimous about this, as we all know."

RESIN IN COAL.

How It Gets There and Adds to Heating Power.

To the head of the family who has been shoveling coal during the long winter it matters not what his coal is made from as long as it gives a reasonable amount of heat and is paid for. And yet this question of the ingredient matter and the geologic processes to which peat from which coal is formed, is considered so important by those who are not simply shovelers of coal that the United States Geological Survey has made a study of the subject of the effects of resins in coals. Resins, under which is included the resin of commerce, the copal from which varnish is made, the amber used in jewelry, and many other similar materials, are secretions generated in some of the cells or vessels in plants of many different kinds. One of the most familiar resin-producing trees is the pitch pine, in which pitch is a resin.

Resins contain very much more hydrogen and carbon compared to the amount of oxygen than ordinary wood, so that, other things being equal, the resinous woods make much hotter fires than those containing no resins, the hydrogen and carbon being sources of the heat. The larger the amount of heat the hotter the fire. Many a Mississippi river steamboat was blown up in the oil days when, in order to win a race, the barrels of resin in the cargo were broached to feed the fires. Resin adds heat power not only to the woods which contain it, but also to the coals.

This is why there is resin in coal. Being more resistant to decay under water than the wood cells and other tissues of the plants and trees from which the peats of bogs and coal-forming swamps are produced, the resin lumps and particles are generally left to be buried in the peat deposits, even when most of the surrounding wood has rotted away and disappeared. In his way they are sometimes concentrated in quantity so that, together with waxes, likewise of heat value, they form considerable portions of the vegetable debris in the peat. Peat is the mother substance which, after deep burial on the crust of the earth, has been converted into coal. The kind of the peat largely determines the type of the coal.

As Good as a Porter.

It is curious how many people are in ignorance of simple little facts in connection with every day life which would save them a large amount of unnecessary labor and fatigue. Take the case of carrying a heavy bag or portmanteau, for instance. We all know the annoying way in which it knocks against our legs and the almost intolerable ache in the arm that is supporting the burden. Few people are aware, however, that by folding a couple of newspapers and putting them under one's armpit a large amount of the strain and inconvenience is immediately removed. Try it next time you are hurrying to catch a train.

An Odd Postcard.

The most curious post card ever produced, according to a leading philatelist, was one which the Japanese Government put out in 1873.

In describing it he says it is "really a sheet of paper folded so as to form four pages of a narrow book. On the front page is a border inclosing an impressed stamp for the postage rate and a space for the address. On the second page are printed in native characters only minute directions for use. On the third page are ruled a number of vertical lines, between which the sender was to write his communication, and the fourth page was a blank." They remained in use until 1875.

Bells and the Orchestra.

"Parsifal" is interesting quite apart from its artistic merit as having had a musical instrument invented for it and named after it. The reproduction of the sound of church bells in opera was long a difficulty. Real bells simply drowned the orchestra, and all substitutes were tried in vain until Dr. Mottl designed the Parsifal bell instrument, somewhat on the principle of the grand piano. Each of its five notes has six strings, which are struck by large hammers covered with cotton wool. And the result is as near to the solemn sound of church bells as the theatre has been able to get.—London Chronicle.

Languages of the World.

A very precise computation has been made by Adelung, representing the number of languages in the world at 3,424—937 Asiatic, 587 European, 276 African and 1,624 American. This number is far too small. It is impossible as yet to reckon the number exactly until we are sure that each unknown tribe of savage man has been brought within the knowledge of the world, but it is not an overstatement to estimate the languages of the world at more than 5,000.

Missed the Combination.

He is one of those gushing old beaus who think flattery the key to favor with the gentler sex. The other evening he was at a reception with his wife, and they met the handsome Miss Blank, at whom he fired a whole battery of compliments. Then, turning to his wife, he said, "It's a good thing I didn't meet her before I married you, my dear."

"Indeed it is," she smiled sweetly—"for her. I congratulate Miss Blank."

The Secret.

Sparks—I wonder why it is a woman lets out everything you tell her.

Parks—My dear boy, a woman has only two views of a secret, either it is not worth keeping or it is too good to keep.

He Knew.

Bacon—Why, he's even put a mortgage on his bedclothes.

Egbert—You must be mistaken.

Bacon—No; I'm not. I heard today he's got some money on a blanket mortgage.

WHALES IN THE HUDSON.

They Gave the Dutch Colonists a Scare in the Winter of 1646.

In 1646 the colony of Rensselaerswijk had a very hard winter of it indeed. On the 25th of November the North river was closed and remained frozen for four months. A very high freshet followed, which destroyed a number of houses in the vicinity, nearly carried away the fort and inflicted considerable damage in the colony.

This, however, was not an unusual thing to the colonists, who in Holland had been accustomed to equally hard winters. Much worse was the appearance of a sea monster that they had never seen in their native country.

"At the same time as the freshet," says Antonie de Hooges, secretary of Rensselaerswijk, "there appeared before us a certain fish of considerable size, snow white in color, round in the body and blowing water out of his head. What it portended God the Lord only knew. At the same instant this fish appeared we had the first thunder and lightning this year." The public astonishment had scarcely subsided when "another monster was seen, estimated at forty feet in length, of a brown color, having fins in his back and ejecting water in like manner high in the air."

This fish "which had first ascended the river (the North river) stranded on his return to sea on an island some forty miles from the mouth of the river, near which place four others grounded this year."

This island goes since by the name of Walvisch or Whale island.—Gazette de Hollande.

THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Those Who Are and Are Not Eligible to the House of Commons.

The British parliament consists of the king (or queen regnant), the lords spiritual and temporal and the commons. The crown virtually appoints the lords spiritual, and the peerages of the lords temporal have been created by the crown, but the members of the house of commons are elected.

Every male British subject of full age and sound mind is eligible unless he is a peer, a member of the clergy of the Roman Catholic church, the Church of England or the Church of Scotland, a judicial officer, a holder of an office under the crown which has been created since 1705 or a pensioner from the crown.

A member of the house of commons holds office until the dissolution of parliament by proclamation under the great seal. The king summons parliament to meet and prescribes the time and place of its meeting, prorogues and dissolves it and commands the writ for the election of members to the house of commons. The present statute law exacts the meeting of parliament once in three years, but the annual voting of supplies has superseded obsolete statutes.

In addition to the general elections held after the dissolution of a parliament, there are byelections, occurring when a seat has become vacant by the death of a member, by his succession to the peerage or by his acceptance of office under the crown.

Mazzini Loved London's Fogs.

What feature of London has the strongest appeal for the foreigner? Mazzini loved above all things else the London fogs.

"When you look up," he wrote, "the eye loses itself in a reddish, bell shaped vault, which always gives me, I don't know why, an idea of the phosphorescent light of the inferno. The whole city seems under a kind of spell and reminds me of the witches' scene in 'Macbeth' or the Brocksberg or the Witch of Endor. The passersby look like ghosts. One feels almost a ghost oneself."

And years after he had left London for Italy he writes to a friend, "I think very often under these radiant skies of the London fogs and always regretfully."—London Spectator.

Did His Part.

A little boy of five was invited to a children's party. The next day he was giving an account of the fun and said that each of the little visitors had contributed either a song, a recitation or music for the pleasure of the rest.

"Oh, poor little Jack!" said his mother. "How very unfortunate you could do nothing!"

"Yes, I could, mother," replied the young hopeful. "I stood up and said my prayers!"

He Drew the Line.

—A visitor who lives near Medicine Hat, states in a letter to relatives here that the crop in Southern Alberta is a complete failure this year and that many people are in fear of starvation as there is no work to be had either in town or country.

—Another victim, the former Orangeville man who was killed by falling from a car in Toronto on May 2nd, left an estate of $5,473. It consisted of household goods $200, insurance money cash $2,628 and an equity in 210 Perth Ave., $1650.

—His friends will regret to learn that W. H. Braden, Printing Instructor, Victoria Industrial School, Mimico, has been quite seriously ill. Mr. Braden is now convalescing satisfactorily and hopes to be able to resume work in a couple of weeks.

The Methodist sale in Caledon last Friday was a big success. A large crowd in attendance and practically everything offered was picked up at satisfactory prices. The standing crop was sold to T. H. Smith for $6 per acre. Mr. W. Hull, of Erin, conducted the sale.

—The Banner has received a letter from Miss Edna Hunter, in which the girl states that she calls a true story of the recent kidnapping case. The main feature of the letter is the girl's admission that the story that she was taken to the lake by a strange man. Most of the letter is irrelevant and is not suitable for those would be served to the public.

Holiday Week.

Next week The Banner will take its annual midsummer holiday and consequently there will not be another issue until Thursday, Aug. 18th. The office will be open as usual for general business, and orders for work will receive the customary prompt attention.

A meeting was held in Mayor Campbell's office on Wednesday night of last week to discuss the matter of building a Skating Rink. After discussing the proposition for some time, two committees were appointed—one to consider and make an effort to get prices on sites and the other to get figures showing the cost of rinks in some of the neighboring towns.

Institute Garden Party.

Marsville Women's Institute will hold a big garden party in Handley's grove near Orton on Wednesday evening, Aug. 5th. An excellent musical programme will be furnished by Lourie Bros., Scottish entertainers, from Hamilton, and the Orangeville Male Quartette, which will provide solos, duets, quartettes and instrumental music. Dr. Gibson, of Hillsburg, will occupy the chair. Refreshment tent on the grounds. Program at 8 o'clock. Admission 25 and 15c.

Mono Mills Garden Party.

Mono Mills Methodist Church is making arrangements to hold a big garden party on Mr. Wesley Kee's grounds, 6th line, east, Mono, on Wednesday evening, Aug. 5th. A varied musical programme will be provided, consisting of selections by St. Mark's orchestra, duets by the Misses Shaw, cornet solos by Mr. Russell Morrow, duets by Dr. Price and Mr. Clifford Henderson and instrumental music by the Misses Guest, Connor. Miss Rebie Kee, of Cheltenham, elocutionist, will also contribute and R. Blain, M.P., J. R. Fallis, M.P.P., S. Charters, registrar of Peel, A. H. Milner and the resident ministers are expected to give short addresses. C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., will preside. Supper from 6 to 8 o'clock. There will be a refreshment tent on the grounds. Admission 25c and 15c.

Stirred Up Hornets' Nest.

The Banner is in receipt of an interesting letter from an old Violet Hill boy, Mr. S. T. Newton, who is now Principal of the Kelvin Technical High School in Winnipeg. Commenting upon the recent Provincial election in Manitoba, Mr. Newton says:—"The man who tries to monkey with the Orange Order in this country is dealing with a hornets' nest. Roblin is throwing the Catholics overboard (since the election) and it will not be surprising if there is another election as his majority is made up of Catholic members, who want Separate Schools, and of the Conservative supporters several 'dasn't' vote for Separate Schools." Instead of holidaying in the usual way Mr. Newton is spending his vacation teaching in a Summer School for Teachers.

A Close Call.

Wm. R. Morrow, of this place, who is employed with a bridge gang on the Muskoka branch of the C. P. R., had a very close call while on duty on Wednesday of last week at Severn Falls, near Bala. There is a sharp curve through a rock cut approaching the bridge on which the gang was at work and they did not notice the Winnipeg Express till it was almost on them. Mr. Morrow had the longest distance to run for safety. In trying to make the end of the bridge he stumbled and fell. His knee cap was displaced and he was unable to go further. As his last chance for life he lay on the track outside of the steel rail and let the train pass over him. Fortunately no projection from the engine or cars touched him and he is congratulating himself on his escape from death. His injury was attended to at Bala and he arrived at his home here on Thursday. He moves around the house with the use of crutches.—Dundalk Herald.

Boy Scouts.

All Orangeville Boy Scouts who intend to attend the first annual Camp to be held in the Hockley Valley in August are requested to hand in their names not later than the 31st of July. The camp will be held for three or four days. A good programme is being arranged on typical scout lines. Every Scout in camp must be in correct scout uniform. Further details later.

The Orangeville Scouts have been asked to take a prominent part in the big Farewell Rally to the Duke of Connaught at the Toronto Exhibition in September. They are to man one of the big floats, demonstrating the Proficiency Badges, at the evening Pageant. Notification of this has been sent to Orangeville from headquarters. It is probable that the Orangeville contingent will start some days ahead of the Exhibition and trek down to Toronto, camping out on the way. Mr. Tobbe' Hespeler Scouts did this two years in succession, the distance from there being one hundred miles.

New Machinery.

New machinery, which the management expects will make a material increase in the output capacity and at the same time lessen the cost of production very considerably, has been installed in the Orangeville Novelty Co's factory during the last two weeks. Last week Armstrong & Robinson put in an 18 h.p. boiler, which will generate sufficient power to drive all the machinery in the factory. The old boiler was only 12 h. p. This week a new planer was bought in Toronto and will be added to the equipment right away. The new machinery will put the factory in much better shape to handle rush orders.

DEATH OF SOLOMON HILL

One of Markdale's Pioneer Merchants Has Passed Away

Was Prominent in Life of Town for 47 Years.

Mr. Solomon Hill, one of Markdale's best known business men, passed away about midnight on Wednesday night of last week. Deceased was the founder of the large mercantile establishment of Hill Bros., which has at the present time four branch stores in Orangeville, Tara, Alliston and Highgate. Mr. Hill was always a fairly healthy man until about nine months ago, when heart and liver trouble confined him to the house. The end came peacefully with nearly all his family at his bedside.

The Markdale Standard gives the following account of the departed merchant's career and the funeral on Saturday:—

Deceased was born on May 5th, 1844, at Barnstable, Co. Devonshire, England, and was thus in his 71st year at his demise. He came to Canada with his parents when only five years of age. His father died a week after they landed. The family settled near Toronto. His mother remarried and they moved to this part a few years later, settling on what was known as the Lockyer farm. This farm is now owned by Mr. Alex. Henry.

When about the age of fourteen years the lad commenced learning the mercantile business with R. McKnight, of Cookstown, with whom he remained only a short time. He returned to Markdale and entered partnership with the late William Dundas, and the firm opened a branch store in Dundalk, which they operated for about a year, when the partnership was dissolved. At the age of 22 Mr. Hill went into partnership with Mr. Thibaudeau in the mercantile business here, but after one year he determined to have a business of his own and bought out his partner's share. The store at that time was located on what is now known as Toronto street and was situated where Noble's blacksmith shop now stands. Later he removed to the corner and erected a store where the fine three-story building stands. For 47 years he has been connected with the mercantile business in Markdale, and by his strict integrity and business ability has built up a large substantial business, and has conducted it in such a way as to give him the reputation of an honest and honorable man. About twenty years ago he took his son, Frank, into partnership, and the latter with singular ability and foresight has not only successfully managed the large business here but has extended outside the confines of the county until now he has four branch stores located in Tara, Alliston, Orangeville and Highgate. It was Mr. Hill's good fortune to see the dense woods and swamps hereabouts give place to one of the most prosperous and inviting districts of Ontario, and in his own line he played a man's part right manfully in bringing the change about. Though he had had, as all the early pioneers had, but limited opportunities of education, he yet was well read and possessed of more than average intelligence. No one who knew him could fail to note his independence of mind and the strength of his convictions, and his perfect readiness to give to other men the privilege he had claimed for himself. One by one the links with the early days are broken. The men and women who faced and overcame the difficulties that presented themselves in a new land are deserving of all honor and respect. That the rising generation should bear themselves as nobly in the presence of their duties and tasks is still our country's hope. If they walk in the footsteps of the worthies who are gone all will be well.

Mr. Hill was married in 1874 to Miss Sarah Ellen Smith, of Trenton. Besides his widow, four sons and three daughters survive, viz.: Frank, Harold and Will, at home; Gordon, at Saskatoon; Mrs. (Dr.) Neely, Humboldt, Sask.; Mrs. W. A. Westwood, Humboldt, Sask., and Miss Nina, at home. One daughter, six years old, died about twenty-four years ago. Mr. Hill had four brothers and four sisters, but only two survive, viz.: Mr. Thos. Hill, who is now very ill at his home in Toronto, and Mr. John Hill, of thesuburbs.

Mr. Hill always took a keen interest in municipal matters, and after the incorporation of the village served on the council board for a term. He was a Liberal in politics and a member of the Anglican Church.

Citizens turned out in large numbers to the funeral on Saturday afternoon. Business was entirely suspended for over an hour, and blinds were drawn. A private service was held at the home on Saturday morning, conducted by Rev. Mr. Hosford. In the afternoon the body was conveyed to Christ Church. The handsome casket was smothered under the magnificent floral tributes, there being a floral pall and pillow from "Mother and Family"; a wreath of roses and lilies of the valley from Messrs. Wm. and Harry Jones, nephews, London, Ont.; heart of roses and lilies of the valley, from Christ Church; tower of white carnations, mauve orchids, lilies of the valley, Iarns and Easter lilies from "The Employees"; wreath of roses, carnations and lilies of the valley, Mr. M. Scully, Owen Sound; wreath of roses and lilies of the valley, Mr. R. J. Gilfillan, Markdale; sheaf of roses, Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, Owen Sound; sheaf of mauve sweet peas and lilies of the valley, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cleland and Mrs. Findlay, Meaford, and Mrs. McIntosh, Montreal; wreath of roses, carnations and lilies of the valley, Mr. A. Walker, Orangeville. The church was filled, many being obliged to stop at the entrance. The service was conducted by the Rector, Rev. Mr. Hosford, assisted by Rev. Mr. Graham. A large number followed the remains to the Public Cemetery, where interment took place. The pall bearers were Messrs. R. W. Ermis, John Boland, Wm. Lucas, J. W. Ford, Mark Armstrong and Hugh Mercer. Thus passes the glory of one of our foremost citizens—second to none in head or heart. Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jones, London; Mr. and Mrs. J. McKenzie, Willowdale; Mr. and Mrs. J. Cleland, Meaford; Mrs. McIntosh, Montreal; D. B. Neeley, Humboldt, Sask.; Geo. Hanbury and Thos. Lockhart, Dundalk; M. Sculley, Owen Sound; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Munshaw and Mrs. Hickling, Flesherton; and the managers of the four branch stores of F. T. Hill & Co.—Mr. A. E. Lee, Tara; Mr. A. L. Walker, Orangeville; Mr. Laurie Munshaw, Alliston, and Mr. John E. Crone, Highgate.

Death of Lorne McLean

The death of William Lorne McLean took place at the home of his father, Mr. Donald McLean, Margaret St., on Tuesday. Deceased, who had been ill most of the summer, was 32 years of age. He was a quiet, industrious young man well liked by everybody who knew him. Much sympathy is felt for the members of the bereaved family. The funeral will take place from his late home to Alton Cemetery at 2 o'clock this (Thursday) afternoon. Service at the house at 1.30.

Mrs. John Kyles.

Mrs. Florence Wells Kyles, widow of the late John Kyles, a Toronto barrister, died very suddenly Saturday evening at her home, 200 Robert street, Toronto. After tea she withdrew from the table, and was discovered by one of her sons a few minutes later sitting in her chair dead. She had not been ailing, and her sudden death came as a shock to her many friends. The deceased lady was a relative of Rev. Dr. Neil, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, and is survived by one daughter and three boys. In the death of Mrs. Kyles Knox Presbyterian Church has lost a zealous worker, as the late Mrs. Kyles was president of several of the woman's organizations, as well as actively engaged in the work of the Bible School.—Daily Star.

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.

Medical Opinion Recognizes That Alcohol Does Not Help in Sickness.

The light is breaking. There has been a wonderful change in medical opinion as to the medicinal or food value of alcohol in the last twenty years. Twenty years ago it was almost universally used in pneumonia, diphtheria, fevers and all debilitating diseases. Now we know that instead of being a stimulant, it is sedative; instead of being a food it is poisonous, and instead of helping a patient over a danger spot, it lessens his chance of recovery.

In my judgment, the greatest medical discovery in recent times is the fact that alcohol—whether in the form of beer, wine or spirits—lessens the power of the body to defend itself against the germs of disease.

Truth makes way very slowly against ignorance and prejudice but truth always prevails and when that truth permeates the public mind, we will have a healthier, happier and more prosperous people.

Some time ago I went to a hospital and investigated the amount of alcoholic liquors given per patient, and I found that the quantity was just about one-sixth of that which had been given ten years ago. Recent inventigations in the hospitals of old London showed that there also the amount of intoxicating liquors prescribed has fallen off wonderfully. Surely the truth is spreading and so we take courage and do our best to hasten that glad day when the poisoning of the innocents shall cease.

By the word innocents, I mean the babe that it is poisoned before it is born so that it is handicapped all its life with weakness of mind and body and often something worse than weakness. (The young man who takes his first drink is generally innocent of the wrong he is doing himself and his country. If he knew the truth, he would not touch it on any account. Then the hostess who entertains her guest with drink is generally innocent of the harm she is doing.

The great need of the people is a knowledge of the truth and we plead that everyone who knows the truth will do what he or she can to spread it.

ADDRESS— GALBRAITH & CARNEY

AGENTS FOR DUFFERIN COUNTY, ORANGEVILLE, ONT.

THE LATE RT. HON. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

In the death of the Right Honorable Joseph Chamberlain two weeks ago, Great Britain has lost one who for many years was one of the central figures in Imperial politics. About seven years ago a paralytic seizure caused a sudden cessation of his political activity, and his health has since been gradually failing. He had almost reached his 79th year. His political career was erratic and stormy. In his early days he was a Radical of the Radicals, a most pronounced free trader, and was even called a republican; but he veered around until he became the strongest opponent of Home Rule and the greatest champion of protectionism in England. He was a most effective public debater, and his influence upon the Home Rule question, when he antagonized the Gladstone Government, was sufficient to secure the defeat of the Government. In later years he became an ardent Imperialist, and hoped to carry the Unionist party with him in advocacy of an Imperial preference in Great Britain's tariff, but in this he signally failed. His aggressive speeches and measures and his breaking with his old party friends and allies won him bitterest enmity, but he kept his way undismayed, and he was as much loved by his friends as hated by his enemies. He has been blamed as the author of the South African War, and it may be that in other hands diplomacy would have accomplished what the war was intended to do; but to offset this there can be no doubt that Mr. Chamberlain's influence did much, very much, to foster Imperial sentiment, to focus British attention upon the value of her great colonial empire, and to cement more strongly the Imperial bonds.—Selected.

ART AT THE "EX."

Paintings from England, Scotland, United States and Canada.

The display of paintings at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, this year promises to be more varied and interesting than before.

From the United States is coming an exhibit by the famous artists who paint pictures of the Great West. Scotland is sending those splendid pictures of loch and ben that have carried the fame of her scenery around the world. England's foremost painters will be well represented, while our own Canadian artists will uphold the reputation of our native land.

Into this list are woven the names of the greatest living artists. The art exhibit at the Canadian National has a grand reputation to sustain. This year it will add to that reputation.

AN AGE OF MIRACLES.

The wonders of science increase and multiply. The strains of a gramophone playing the Merry Widow waltz and God Save the King were heard lately by wireless in the Nelson steamship Highland Scot during a voyage to Buenos Ayres by the third officer of the boat passing Vigo at the time. It was afterwards found that the ship from which the wireless came was a private yacht 200 miles away. Signor Marconi, commenting on this report, said:

"They were probably experimenting with a gramophone and wireless telephone transmitter aboard a private yacht. Tunes are transmitted and caught up in this way. I never heard of it before done over such a long distance, but it is quite possible. Gramophone tunes have been sent by wireless telephone from a Marconi house at Fawley, near Southampton."

The age of miracles seems to be returning. A few generations ago some one would have been burned at the stake or pulled asunder by horses for being connected with this sort of thing. Now people take it as a matter of course. Even an upside-down to-day causes but a minor thrill to the jaded villager who attends a fair. It is possible that our remote ancestors only took a languid interest in the Jonah-and-the-whale incident.—Brockville Times.

MUSIC AND HORSES

The Biggest Horse Act in the World at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The Musical Ride will be at the Canadian National Exhibition again, of course. It is the biggest and best display of horsemanship on this continent. Those 32 wonderful dragoons, on their spirited horses, whirling through their crazy figures to the music of the band, are old favorites of "the regulars" at the Fair and a never-failing delight to new visitors.

THE PILEATED WOODPECKER

By Gladys A. Beebe

I wonder how many of the younger readers of Our Dumb Animals have ever seen one of the great pileated woodpeckers in their wild state? They are fast becoming rare. The cutting of the forests and the sportsman with his gun have driven them out or killed them.

It has been my good fortune to see this largest of our woodpeckers in his native haunts. A few years ago a pair nested near my home. There is something particularly free and wild about these birds. Every spring for several years I saw one of the pair at a distance and heard its clear metallic call, much louder and more penetrating than the call of the flicker. It would fly swiftly away before I had more than a fleeting glimpse of his black coat and shining scarlet head, and in a moment I would again hear his resonant call away among the trees.

How these woodpeckers tear the decaying trees in search for food! They fling the pieces far and near from the tree, some of them quite large chips. I have seen deep trenches cut in upright trees where the luckless grubs nestled until torn out to make a meal for Mr. Woodpecker.

But, alas for my pair! One spring one of them ventured too near the abode of man, and for idle curiosity was shot "to see what he looked like!" The other bird came back the next year but soon disappeared, and now I listen in vain to hear their call ringing through the woods.—Our Dumb Animals.

Much Pain From Kidney Disease

Doctored in Vain Until Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Used.

Kidney derangements are often associated with disorders of the liver and bowels, and under these conditions ordinary kidney medicines usually fail to effect cure. It is because of their unique, combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so generally successful, even in the most complicated cases.

Mr. Emanuel Bernard, farmer, St. Paul's, Kent county, N.B., writes:—"About eighteen years ago my wife was bad with kidney disease, and suffered greatly from headaches, pains in bowels and stomach, and her heart was affected. For a year she was treated by her doctor, with no apparent benefit. She then used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with most satisfactory results. This gave us such a good opinion of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills that we always keep them in the house to be used for all derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

GETTI G MOVIE FEATURES.

Operators Run Great Risks to Get Sensational Films.

Do you ever stop to consider the many difficulties that assail a motion picture photographer? No soldier was ever more a hero than the man who goes into the heart of South Africa, or the wilderness of South America, and with a camera for a weapon stalks big game that the world may see them in their own haunts and in a natural position. This last is the hardest thing to do. To take a picture of a tiger, depicting its every action, and not to let the beast know that it is being done, this as much for the photographer's own sake as for the picture's future, is no easy task.

As may be imagined, there are many methods in vogue among photographers to obtain truthful pictures of animals. It is entirely a case of strategy on the man's part. He must wait in the jungle sometimes for days until his odor becomes familiar to the animal. He builds himself a house, sometimes inside a hollow tree trunk, sometimes in the tree itself, and bides his time.

But this is not enough, for under ordinary circumstances the moment he started to turn the handle of the camera the noise would be such that the beast would either fight or run away, and either would be bad for the man.

So again resorting to strategy, he invents a machine, small and compact, that will exactly imitate the clicking of a camera. This is turned by the action of the wind, and it is not long before the animal becomes accustomed to the noise. Sometimes, though, it is necessary to bribe the animal with a wounded deer or a lame goat.

Probably the hardest picture of the kind to obtain is that of a fish under water. Much patience is necessary and much skill. The first step is the manufacturing of a glass caisson, which is semi-submerged and contains the man and his machine. The top is open to the sky and there the operator must receive his meals from an associate. It is compulsory that the man shall stay there for an abrupt movement might scare the subject beyond recovery.

A fish is noted for its curiosity and it is upon this fact that the camera man works. A shot fired in the water will bring fish from all over to the spot to investigate. Likewise with the cage. They want to see what it is, and it is not long before they will be close to it. Then for the pictures.

The camera snaring of birds is an undertaking that requires much skill and greater patience. To get a good picture of a bird on the nest actually hatching eggs without frightening her is very hard. Prof. Frank Newman, the well-known English photographer, tells many interesting stories of his adventures in this work.

He cited one case in particular in which he had lain in wait for a week with his imitation camera going full speed, grabbing a meal when he could, only to have the bird take fright and leave her nest forever, thus wasting all his time. He has, however, been able to catch near pictures of the moor hen, probably the most timid of birds.

Newman has also been very successful in his pictures of large birds, such as the South American condor, the American eagle and the buzzard and vultures of the South. As may be surmised, a different sort of skill is required to get such pictures as these.

Editor In Name Only.

Fictitious "editors" are regular members of the staff of many Russian newspapers. Some time ago the so called "responsible editor" of a laber journal was charged under a statute relating to the incitement of class enmity. He pleaded not guilty, and it turned out that he could not even read and could only write his own name with much difficulty. He had been promised $15 monthly for giving his name as responsible editor of the paper. Although the journal was issued in St. Petersburg, the "editor" worked in Riga as a factory hand and was actually serving a sentence for robbery when the charge was brought against him.

Brilliant Fish Hues.

Like birds, many fishes assume their brightest hue when they wish to attract the opposite sex of their species. The colors of the male common pike become exceedingly intense, brilliant and iridescent in the breeding season. The eel also puts on an intense silvery hue at the breeding time which is very noticeable and at one time caused naturalists to distinguish it as a distinct species. The males of the tench, roach and perch also show a marked increase in brilliancy in the breeding season.

Polished.

A certain newspaper artist, noted for his large feet as well as his facility with the pencil, sat down to have his shoes polished.

"Give me a fine shine, Tony," he said to the operator, "I'm going to see a pretty girl and want to make a hit."

When the contract was completed and payment made, Tony said: "Say, boss, if youse doesn't make a hit wid dat skirt to-night it won't be cause you doesn't shine downstairs."

Men and Women and Love.

Swedenborg once observed that woman seeks in man something good which she really loves as true, as an expression of wisdom; the man, on the other side, seeks in woman something good which he really loves as beautiful.

Painfully Frank.

Caller—Is your mistress in?

Maid—Did you see her at the window as you came up the walk, ma'am?

Caller—No.

Maid—Well, she said if you hadn't seen her to say that she was out.

WHY DO TOPS SPIN?

Even Scientists Would Like To Know More About It.

Few boys ever stop to think why their tops spin. Neither do the grown-ups who pause to watch the top-spinning which is so universally popular every spring.

Yet engineers, astronomers, physicists and inventors would all like to know more than they do about spinning tops. A great many matters of the utmost importance to the human race depend on finding out all we can about this subject.

The earth on which we live is a top. So are Mars, the North Star, the sun itself, and all the other celestial bodies. It is even suspected that atoms and electrons are spinning tops. The dirigible torpedo is a top, the monorail car is a top, the bullet sped by a gun is a top.

A new form of compass, called the "top" or gyroscopic compass gives direction without being affected by the iron of a battleship or the rolling and pitching of the steamer.

All speed machinery has "top" action, which must be reckoned with. Rotary engines, turbines, Diesel engines and all machines which drive fly wheels and propellers have the spinning top behavior.

Submarines, aeroplanes and dirigible balloons would be more stable and less dangerous, if we could only solve the mystery of a spinning top's action.

The gyroscope is a toy top within a tin rim. It is made of a heavy rimmed metal fly wheel mounted in a frame. Friction is reduced to a minimum by the spindle rotating on ball bearings. Thus a great velocity is possible. Engineers and inventors learned from boys to spin this gyroscopic top. They are always hoping for a clear understanding of the spin.

The gyroscopic action of the paddle wheels of a steamer exerts a steadying effect upon the vessel at the expense of her steering qualities. The effect of this is to cause the steamer to run away to starboard when acted upon by a cross sea. This makes her turn to starboard when the sea would be expected to send her the other way.

On the other hand, when a paddle steamer is steered to port she heels over to starboard because of the top-spinning action of her paddles. This causes the wheel on the starboard side to become more deeply immersed in the sea than the port one, and the steering is exaggerated.

The top-spinning action of the fly wheel of an automobile is interesting, too. The axis of an automobile fly wheel runs backward and forward and the flywheel crosswise. If you stand behind an auto you see the wheel revolving as do the hands of a clock. If a man or a woman in a car tries to turn the auto toward the left the flywheel tries to spin its way upward. In consequence a "couple" as it is called, acts on the car and throws the weight of the machine on the back wheels.

When an automobile turns to the right the weight is thrown on the front wheels because of this top-spinning action of the flywheel. Many accidents to motor cars are due to interference with this top-spinning action when turning a corner sharply or at great speed.

Turning a motor boat, a ship's head and an aeroplane, as well as the rolling and pitching of great vessels all bring about unlooked-for catastrophes by virture of this mysterious top-spinning.

Man and His Tailor.

A man can be measured to the best advantage, tailors say, away from a glass. Standing before a mirror he is almost certain to throw out his chest, if he does not habitually carry it so, and take an attitude that he would like to have rather than the one he commonly holds, whereas the tailor wants him, as the portrait painter wants his subject—in his natural pose and manner. With the man in that attitude the tailor can bring his art to bear, if that is required, in the overcoming of any physical defect and produce clothes that will give the best attainable effect upon the figure as they will be actually worn.

Whispering.

What is the most arresting noise—the human shout, the fire bell, the toot or scream of the motorcar? Not a bit. A doctor will tell you that the human whisper is the wakener. A patient may sleep through all the noises but that, which some people think secret, is a railway train. And the first thing a nurse has to learn is not to whisper, for you can waken the soundest sleeper with that when a conscientious carpenter's hammer would leave him sound asleep.—London Standard.

No Fiction.

It was a clerk in a bookstore of whom a prim matron demanded a book for her son. "No fiction, please," she explained, "but absolute, literal truth, without unnecessary verbiage or absurdly fanciful pictures."

"Well, madam"— the bookseller paused, his eye running over his shelves; then, with a flash of inspiration, he took down a volume. "I should think this might meet your requirements," he said, and he handed her a popular geometry.

An Easy Problem.

Prove that 9 taken from 6 and 10 taken from 9 and 70 taken from 40 when all added together is only 6. Easy when you know how. Take IX (9) from SIX and you have S left; take X (10) from IX (9) and you have I left; take L (50) from XL (40) and you have X left, and when you add S and I and X together you have SIX, haven't you?

Unappreciated Talent.

Tramp—Yes, mum, I was once quite a musician, an' I guess I ain't forgot all about it yet.

Mrs. Housetop—Indeed! Well, you can take the ax and chop a few cords out of that woodpile.

Bolton village carried a money by-law to expend $9,500 in purchasing the electric plant of the Bolton Light, Heat and Power Co., and converting it for use as a Hydro-Electric power station. Only four votes were given against the by-law.

Surveyors are at work on the proposed Toronto-Hamilton highway. They reached Oakville last week. Mayor Foster, of Oakville, is proposing to raise Aberdeen Bridge in the lakeside town about 15 feet to lessen the grade in the hills at each end.

Harry Kipp, a well known South mouth farmer, died from lockjaw. Two weeks ago he had one of his thumbs torn from the socket when a cow he was leading tried to get away, and the rope became twisted around his thumb. Blood poisoning set in.

A few days ago a wild flax plant was found in J. M. Laycock's strawberry patch and upon investigation it was found to contain 2465 well developed seed pods, besides many that would have matured, if left. Several of the pods were opened and each contained 21 seeds, so allowing 20 seeds to the pod this one plant produced something over 49,300 seeds.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, AUG. 13th, 1914.

Tax Rate Slightly Higher.

At the regular meeting of the town council it was found necessary to raise the tax rate by two mills on the dollar, making the rate for the current year 29½ mills. This was done to clear off the slate, and it was certainly a sensible idea to strike a rate that will prevent deficits. Not a dollar of unnecessary expense has been incurred by the council, and dollar for dollar value will be received for every cent spent. Taxes, like Topsey, grow spontaneously, and it is only by the most careful management that they can be kept within reasonable bounds.

FOR ACTIVE SERVICE.

Several Orangeville Men Volunteer—Also One Lady

War's alarms reached Orangeville in due time, but to all outward appearances they did not alarm the inhabitants of this community to any great extent, and if coolness under startling news is a sign of encouragement, then our people are certainly the bravest among the brave. Not a cheer was heard, not a procession formed, but each man went about his customary work just as though the world moved along as usual. So far several men have volunteered for foreign service, and the stern features and grim determination of scores of our young men show that many more of them are but awaiting the call to take the field to fight for home and country. The 36th Battalion has not been ordered for duty, but a general call for volunteers has been issued, and when Col. Windeyer of the 36th Regiment asked for volunteers for service at the parade of the three Toronto companies of the regiment, every man in the ranks stepped forward.

The following members of the Orangeville Company have volunteered for active service :—

Capt. H. B. McGuire
Col.-Sergt. W. G. Snooks
Corp. H. A. Anderson
Corp. H. Wilcox
Pte. Ernest H. Cullimore
Pte. D. A. Cameron
Pte. C. T. Wickens
Pte. R. B. Heard
Pte. B. Robinson
Pte. D. Donnelly
Pte. Allen Tyner
Pte. L. Cavers
Pte. G. Gordon
Pte. R. D. Endacott.
Pte. Field
Pte. Meyers

The local Company is holding weekly parades and is ready to move when the regiment is called upon. There are a few vacancies for recruits, men between the ages of 18 and 45, 5 ft. 3 in. in height and chest measurement 33½ in.

Miss Menary, of Orangeville, has volunteered her services as a nurse and has signified her willingness to go with the first contingent that leaves for the front.

Lt.-Col. J. A. V. Preston, commanding officer of the 46th Durham Regiment has volunteered for service at the front.

Orangeville Boy Scouts.

Through the kindness of Mr. I. J. Murphy, of Monb, the Boy Scouts will camp on his property in the Hockley Valley near the old Wheelock Dam. The camp will begin on Monday, August 24th, and continue until Thursday, August 27th, inclusive. There will be daily Scout routine work such as signalling, tracking, fire lighting competitions, swimming and life saving instruction. (There are two good swimming holes near Camp). Camp cooking competitions, fishing contests, as well as various Scout games, lectures, etc., so that a good time for the Scouts is ensured. This Camp will be preparatory to the Toronto Trek. The last order for uniforms will be sent next week. No one will be eligible for Camp without the correct uniform. This regulation is to protect our Scouts from anything other lads might be responsible for.

A PATENT REVERSIBLE POEM.

The following lines may be read either up or down without altering the sense :—

The stars were all alight,
The moon was overhead ;
I named her queen of night,
As she my footsteps led.
So wondrous fair was she,
I asked her to be mine,
As she glanced up at me
I thrilled with love divine.

Beside the meadow bars,
As she stood lingering there,
Her eyes were like the stars,
In radiance, wondrous fair.
"You're all the world to me,"
She murmured, sweet and shy,
A thrill of ecstasy
I felt at her reply.

Love led us all the day,
As we turned home again,
Our hearts were light and gay,
The world was blissful then,
Though shadows cross the sky,
No gloom our hearts can know,
True bliss is ever nigh
When hearts are blended so.

Chas. Lethbridge was accidentally drowned in Owen Sound harbor a week ago Saturday.

GERMANY WAS READY TO INVADE BELGIUM

Little Country the Natural Battleground of Her Big and Powerful Neighbors

But a few weeks ago, though the war clouds were lowering over Europe and a general war was expected, nothing was said about Belgium. Eyes were turned from Servia to Austria, and to Russia, Germany and France, but Belgium escaped notice. Now this little country, with an area of a little more than 11,000 square miles, and a population slightly larger than the population of Canada, is earning the plaudits of the world for the gallant resistance she is presenting to the German invasion. The Belgians feel that they are fighting for their homes. The tide of war has rolled to their very doorstep. They know that should they fail, and their allies fail, Belgian independence is lost, and that she will be swallowed up in a huger German Empire. Moreover, Belgium is spurred on by one of the greatest insults, one of the grossest and most deadly affronts ever offered by one nation to another. Germany has tried to brush her aside contemptuously, has laughed at her own treaty obligations, and is slaughtering the sons of Belgium, whose worst crime is that they are defending their country.

Germany's Broken Pledge.

Belgium in 1830 was made what is called a neutral state. That is to say, Belgium pledged herself never to attack another country upon any pretext, and the countries that signed the covenant with her pledged themselves never to attack Belgium nor to permit any other country to invade her. The signatories to their treaty were Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. When it became almost certain that war was to break out between Germany and France, Great Britain, as one of the guarantors of Belgium's neutrality, asked France for a pledge that she would not invade Belgian territory in case of conflict with Germany. France immediately gave the undertaking. Then Germany was asked. Germany refused to promise, and that was the immediate cause of Britain declaring war upon her.

Neutrality Observed in 1870

The resistance that Belgium is putting up is evidence that she was not altogether unprepared for some country breaking its pledge to respect her neutrality. Only once before was it seriously threatened, and that was at the time of the Franco-Prussian War. Then, as now, before the outbreak of hostilities, there was grave uneasiness in Belgium, and Britain, which has acted throughout as the guardian of the little nation, asked both Germany and France if they would keep their armies off Belgian soil. Both agreed and the promise was kept. After the war France spent millions of money in protecting her frontier against further German aggression, but the 340 miles of frontier between France and Belgian was not strongly fortified. It is on this account, and also because the nearest road to Paris from Germany lies through Belgium, that the Kaiser has torn up the treaty and is now attempting to force his way through the little buffer State.

Belgium Apprehensive

In recent years the people of Belgium have been apprehensive more than once that their neutrality might be disregarded, and always it has been German invasion that was feared. In 1910, however, Holland, as a result, it was thought, of German pressure, began to fortify her sea coast about Flushing, and in the neighborhood of the Scheldt River, which is in Belgium. These fortifications, it was feared, were designed as a menace to Belgium, and military critics then began to point out signs that proved Germany to have prepared for the invasion of France by way of Belgium. There is a multiplicity of railroad tracks leading to within a few miles of the Belgian border, and at Treves and Aix there are large yards and great terminal facilities, out of all proportion to the needs of the country in times of peace. Apparently the invasion of Belgium has been part of Germany's plan.

British Force For Belgium

While Belgium has always realized that her sole hope was in Britain, she has not failed to take some precautions on her own account, as the stiff battle she is offering to Germany proves. She is capable of placing 170,000 trained men in the field, and from her population of more than 7,000,000 she can draw many more at need. Her idea has been that if she were invaded by Germany, Britain having control of the sea, could land a large expeditionary force at Antwerp. This force, co-operating with the Belgians, might attack the German army in the flank as it was on its way to France, or might cut it off from its source of supplies.

WHEN FOOD TAXES YOUR STRENGTH

You Need the Tonic Treatment of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

When the food you take fails to nourish, when it causes you pain and often a feeling of extreme nausea, the cause is indigestion. Your stomach is too feeble to do its work and you will continue to suffer until you strengthen your digestive powers. Your digestion has failed because your stomach is not receiving the pure, red blood of health to give it strength for its work.

The tonic treatment of indigestion by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People succeeds by building up and enriching the blood supply, so that the enfeebled digestive organs are strengthened, appetite is restored and tone given the whole system. Thousands have proved this by personal experience, as is shown by the following typical instance. Mrs. James Boyle, Dartmouth, N.S., says: "For years I was a sufferer from indigestion. I could not take food without feeling terrible distress afterwards, and in consequence I was badly run down. Sometimes after eating I would take spells of dizziness with a feeling of numbness throughout my body, and at other times my heart would palpitate so violently that I feared I would die. Naturally I was doctoring continually, but without getting better. Then my husband got me a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and before long I found they were helping me, and I continued to take them until I was restored to health. I was never in better health than I am now, and I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DESCRIPTIVE BOOKLET

Department of Interior Issues Beautiful Souvenir.

An unusual Government publication has recently been issued by the Dominion Parks Branch of the Department of the Interior. It consists of a small souvenir booklet artistically bound in duplex leather, wild grass paper and tied with an olive green silk cord. The lettering is embossed in gold and a very unique design has been chosen for the cover. The latter is cut out so as to form a sort of frame and in this is inset a spray of Canadian Heather from the Rocky Mountains Park, the purplish flowers of the heather against the woodbrown background making a very attractive colour combination. The matter is set up in 10 point Caslon Old Style type and the booklet is illustrated throughout with vignettes of scenes in the Banff and Yoho Parks printed in golden olive by the offset method. By this method, which has so far been but little used in Canada, the difficulty which formerly existed in printing half tones on anything but smooth-faced paper has been overcome. The process involves taking an impression from the plate on a cylinder covered with a rubber blanket and then transferring or offsetting it to the paper which is carried round a third cylinder.

It will no doubt be a matter of surprise to many to learn that Canada possesses a heather of her own. This plant is not, as it has sometimes been called, a "poor relation" of the Scotch heather, but has a family connection and standing of its own well recognized by botanists, and is nearly allied to the Heath of the British Isles. The booklet gives an interesting account of the locality from which the souvenir was gathered, Simpson Pass, about thirty miles south of Banff, and of some of the legends and stories connected with the heather in other lands. Its main purpose, however, is to call the attention of Canadians to the National Parks of the Dominion, not only to the attractions they offer to those who are able to visit them, but also to their value in the national life. Their commercial potentialities are somewhat startling. It is pointed out that owing to the increased modern taste for travel, striking scenery has become one of the most valuable sources of revenue a nation can possess. The tourist revenue of Switzerland per year is placed at 150 million dollars, that of France at 600 millions, that of Italy at over 100 millions. The sum which Americans annually spend abroad is estimated at the enormous total of five hundred million dollars. It would appear, therefore, that the creation of national parks, which are one of the best means of attracting and providing for tourist travel, may well be considered as it is now being considered in the United States, as a "solid business proposition."

It is on other grounds than the commercial, however, that the Parks lay claim to recognition. Chief of these is an aid to producing efficient citizens. These great natural reserves are reservoirs of vitality for the race. As an antidote to the ills of over-civilization and the complex life of modern cities, they offer the opportunity for life in the wilderness and the best sort of re-creation where fresh air, sunshine and beautiful natural scenery are combined. The problem of the preservation of the vitality of the race is admitted by all conservationists to-day, to be the first of all conservation problems, and the value of parks, playgrounds and recreation in this respect is each year being given a larger place.

The educational and patriotic influence of the Parks is also touched upon as well as the work which the Dominion Parks Branch is doing in the preservation of native wild life in connection with the buffalo, elk, antelope, etc., as well as bird life. There is also pointed out the need for the creation of Historic Parks as a means of preservation for our historic sites, many of which we are allowing to disappear.

TRAGIC DEATH.

Local Young Man's Body Found in Nearby Bush.

A sad and very lamentable death occurred on Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning about three miles west of the town. Railroad men going west on the early morning way freight saw a body suspended from a beech tree a short distance south of the track, just one mile this side of Fraxa Junction. On arrival at the junction they reported the discovery to the station master, Mr. Brawley, who immediately secured help and proceeded to the scene of the tradegy, which was on the farm occupied by Mr. Charles Hughson. Here they found the body of Louis Wallace May, a young man, 23 years of age, a native of Orangeville and an employee in the yards of the C. P. R., or more strictly speaking, a contractor for filling engines with coal. The body was cold in death, and the men came to town and notified the constable and friends, who went out and brought the body to Mr. Hulse's undertaking establishment. The event caused a shock in the community, as the young man was a steady worker and an exceptionally quiet and civil citizen.

No reason can be given for the apparent suicide further than that the man had been fined, a day or two before, on an alleged charge of being the worse of liquor. Deceased had strenuously denied the charge to personal friends, but had pleaded guilty rather, he alleged, than introduce and expose a friend whose position would likely be lost if publicity were given the facts. Time was given him to pay the fine and no pressure whatever was used in the case, but despite this he worried very much and very unnecessarily over the matter, and this may have been the deciding factor in the awfully tragic finality.

To his parents, deceased appeared to be in his customary good health and spirits. On Tuesday night he went home and retired as usual, but got up some time before 4 o'clock in the morning and going out, without hat, coat or boots, walked the three miles up the track, and there, using barbed wire, accomplished his terrible purpose. He carried with him from home an axe and a large pair of scissors.

A jury was empanelled by Coroner Dr. James Henry and, after viewing the scene of the tragedy, a session was held in the town hall, where immaterial evidence was taken and an adjournment made until Monday night next.

ROSEMONT.

(Intended for last week.)

This will be a very busy week with the farmers around here.

Mr. Henry McCartee, of Shelburne, was in our village on Sunday.

Miss Maggie Armstrong, who has been spending the last few months visiting Western friends, has returned home.

Miss Armanda Wilson, of the Queen City, spent the holiday with her sister, Mrs. A. G. McNabb.

Mr. Rosa Horsley, of Shelburne, spent Sunday at Mr. Wm. Ludlow's.

Mrs. Gardener, of Toronto, is visiting Mrs. H. Hunter.

Mrs. Robt. Hunter, of Toronto, is holidaying with friends here.

It is reported that the early potatoes around this part are all growing to stalks.

The harvesting will be far advanced this week. Some will finish cutting. The crops are fair in this part.

We expect to hear the sound of the threshing machine now as

We expect to hear the sound of the threshing machine now as soon as Wm. Thompson's outfit arrives.

Mr. A. Lewis was in our midst last week threshing clover.

Mr. Geo. Ladd, of Mono Centre, is doing the brickwork of Mr. Jno. Murphy's kitchen.

Some of our farmers have built cisterns at the back of their barns and expect to have water handy for threshing.

MONO MILLS.

The Annual Meeting of the local branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society will be held in the Methodist Church on Tuesday evening, Aug. 25, beginning at 8 o'clock. Mr. H. D. Martin will give a lecture illustrated by stereopticon views.

The Lawn Party at Mr. Wesley Kee's last Wednesday evening was very successful in every way. The best of weather, a large turnout of people from all parts of the country, an excellent program well rendered, and efficient committees to look after every department of the work all went to make up a pleasant evening thoroughly enjoyed by all. The proceeds amounted to about $185.00.

Mrs. Wm. Snell and Miss Edith Rusk, of Toronto, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Duke.

Miss Lyons, of New York, who has been spending a while with her aunt, Mrs. G. Lemon, has returned home.

Dr. Hazel Fagan is now holding down the job of Inspector for the Meat Market at Chatham, Ont.

We are pleased to note that Miss Jean Hillock, who had the misfortune to break her arm some time ago is again recovering the use of the limb.

The trustees are making arrangements to place a new floor in the school house.

Miss Alma Dowling is a guest at Mr. Mack's beautiful summer residence at Belfountain.

Mr. Wm. Crawford, of Sleswick, raised a fine new barn on Thursday of last week. Mr. Geo. Irwin had the contract for the framing and Mr. Ross Coleman, of Hockley, built the stonework.

Mrs. Cameron, widow of the late Capt. Cameron, of Collingwood, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mills.

Miss Ethel Allen, of this village, has returned from a visit to New York.

Miss McFarlane, of Hockley, has been engaged to teach at school here.

A number of young people of the village and vicinity enjoyed a pleasant evening on the school grounds on Wednesday.

PILES Do not suffer another day with Itching, Bleeding, or Protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as certainly cure you. 60c. a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Sample box free if you mention this paper and enclose 2c. stamp to pay postage.

MARSVILLE.

The garden party, which was held in the Grove on Wednesday, under the auspices of the Marsville Branch of the Women's Institute, was success in every way. The evening was fine and the attendance large. The Lourie Bros., of Hamilton, proved themselves excellent entertainers with their singing and dancing and every number they rendered was loudly applauded. The Orangeville Male Quartette also contributed to the evening's enjoyment. The total receipts were almost $140.

The army worm has made its appearance about two miles north of the village and has done considerable damage to the crops. John Simpson, Jas. Hillis and Arch. McKitrick are the chief sufferers. Some of the pests have also been found on the farm of Mr. Wm. McGowan, Price Corners, but the damage done is light.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Boggs, of Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. Wm. Walker, of Eramose, spent last week visiting friends in the community. Ill-health has forced Mr. Boggs to retire from work and it will be some time before he will be able to resume duties.

Mrs. Herbert Jestin, of Grand Forks, N.D., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Keith.

Mr. John Leader has purchased the James Gibson farm, lot 4, 10th line. The price paid was $3900.

WALDEMAR.

The village is quite these days owing to the busy time with farmers in the harvest field. In course of another week or so the cutting will be done around this part. The general report is that the grain crop is up to the average and is of good quality. The root crop promises to be good.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. John Groskurth is ill. We hope for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Irvin, of Markdale, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Tolton, Twin Creek farm.

Mrs. Adair, of Toronto, paid her sister, Mrs. Isaac Scott, a brief visit a few days last week.

Mr. W. P. Tolton and son, are busy remodelling the old dwelling house on Main St., and converting it into a fine structure with modern conveniences. The house will greatly add to the appearance of the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Groh, of Hespeler, are spending a month's holidays with old acquaintances in this vicinity and are at present the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Lomas, 9th line, Amaranth.

Mrs. Charles Tate, of Manitoba, a former resident of this neighborhood, is spending a few weeks with old neighbors and friends in the village and surrounding district and is at present the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Tate, Main St.

Miss Maria Young, of Fergus, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Tate, adjoining the village.

Mrs. Charles Bryan and family, of Toronto, are spending a month's holidays at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Rodgers, Main St.

Miss Spence, of Brampton, is spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Joseph Lomas.

Mr. George Hunter, of Parry Sound, is spending a few days in this section.

Miss Mary Hastings, of Toronto, who has been spending a couple of weeks with her many friends and acquaintances, returned home last Tuesday evening to have an operation performed on her hand, which was injured while at her work in Hamilton a little over six months ago. We wish Miss Hastings a successful operation.

Percy, the 10 year old son of Mr. W. M. Byers, was successfully operated on for appendicitis on Saturday last.

Mr. John McFadzean got badly hurt one day last week while putting his binder together. He has the tongue propped up temporarily and went under the table to adjust some part of the gearing, when the tongue dropped from its position, throwing the whole weight of the table and gearing on him.

ALTON.

The National Council of Women, of Toronto, is appealing to the Women's Institutes for assistance in aid of the Hospital Ship Fund. The Women's Institute, of Alton, will hold a meeting on Thursday, August 20th, at which arrangements will be made to receive subscriptions from the County of Peel Institutes.

The Barber Carriage Works has a a large staff of workmen employed in constructing a large addition to their works. We understand they have large orders for buggies, which require, in construction, additional room to their present works.

An accident, which may have had serious consequences, occurred on Sunday evening, Aug. 2nd, between the automobile of Mr. John Dods' and a livery rig from Erin. When trying to pass each other the two vehicles came in contact, injuring the horse and doing some damage to Mr. Dods' auto. No one was seriously hurt.

Misses Annie and Minnie McFaul, of West Toronto, have been visiting their father, Mr. A. M. McFaul.

Miss Annie Neely, of Toronto, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Neely.

Mrs. McClellan, of Wolseley, Sask., is on a visit to friends in Alton.

Mrs. John Richardson, of Orangeville, paid Mrs. Wm. Hawkins a visit last week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hawkins, of the C.P.R., London, are now on a visit to their parents.

Mr. Wilbert McClellan, wife and children, of the Rock Island Railway, Chicago, have been visiting at Mr. Peter Lemons.

The European war is causing some excitement in this village. The morning and evening papers from Toronto are watched for eagerly for any scrap of news from the seat of the fight.

Mr. Thomas Houston, youngest son of Mr. Robt. Houston of the 5th line, west, Caledon, is home from British Columbia on a visit to his parents.

CALEDON.

There was quite an exciting time in our village on Thursday last when it was discovered that the stable belonging to Mr. Wm. Rutledge was on fire. When the alarm was first given there were not many men here but the heroic efforts of the women kept the flames in check until some of the sterner sex arrived. It was only after a desperate struggle that the house which was only a few feet away was considered safe. There was great danger of an explosion as the gas plant was very close to the burning building, but plenty of water was available and the ajoining buildings kept soaked till the danger was past. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Rutledge in his loss.

Rev. Mr. McKay, formerly of Alton, is visiting his father-in-law, Mr. Thos. Canning, and conducted service in Knox Church last Sunday.

Mr. Robt. McFarlane, of Hamilton, is visiting friends here.

Miss Phoebe Judge returned home after spending a couple of weeks with Queen City friends.

Mr. W. J. Sutton has had concrete walks built around his house which greatly improves the appearance of his place and will be a great convenience to the public.

(Intended for last week.)

Mrs. John Atkinson, wife of our genial and obliging station agent, has gone for a visit to her brother, who resides in New York. We wish her a pleasant sojourn.

Mr. and Mrs. William Moffatt attended the wedding of their nephew, Mr. Jas. Moffatt in Toronto, last week.

Mrs. William McCartney is visiting Thamesville and Stratford relatives this week.

Miss Maude Scarland is to be congratulated on passing her Norman School examination. She has already been engaged to teach in S. S. No. 8.

Mr. Geo. Hillyard, who met with a rather serious accident two weeks ago, is still confined to his room, and is not making the progress towards recovery which his many friends would like to see, but we hope to be able to report his convalescence in the very near future.

Miss Ruby Laughlin was successful in passing her Entrance to Faculty, pt. I., exam. Congratulations.

Farewell Services.

Special services were held by the Salvation Army on Sunday to mark the farewell of the local officers, Capt. Chapman and Lieut. Luxton. At night an enrolment service was held, when a number of converts were sworn in as blood and fire soldiers of the Army. Capt. Chapman and Lieut. Luxton, were capable and popular officers, whose departure from Orangeville will be generally regretted.

Kilsyth Presbyterians presented Mr. Hugh Linn, Superintendent of the Sunday School for many years, with an address and a handsome shawl.

S. Kerr took his team over to Lester Montgomery's to assist him haying, and while driving the sulky rake something startled the mare and off she went. The racket unnerved Lester's horse, and in a moment there was a merry race across the field. Both horses cleared the fence, but Mr. Kerr's landed on a side delivery rake smashing it, and injuring her leg so badly that a veterinary had to shoot her. Mr. Kerr refused over $250 for the animal not long ago.—Star & Vidette.

CANCER A PUZZLE

In Many of its Phases It Baffles Medical Science.

ITS CAUSES ARE NOT KNOWN.

Neither Is It Revealed Whether the Disease Is Hereditary or Not—In Its First Stage It Is Curable—How the Malignant Growths Spread.

"The word 'cancer,'" says World's Work, "though it figures largely in popular speech, is used with less and less frequency in medical literature. There is probably no word comprehensive enough to include all the kinds of abnormal growths to which the human frame is subject. Cancer is merely one shape in which this tendency to malformation manifests itself.

"The human body in its ideal condition is a symmetrical product. It consists of a multitude of parts, each developing not only with reference to itself, but in perfect harmony with the rest of the organism. A subtle influence, known as the power of organization, regulates this highly important matter. An arm, a leg, a nose, a chin—any organ or member which one cares to name—does not develop independently, but preserves important relations with the rest of the body. Our four fingers and thumbs have constantly in mind the rights of one another. When one reaches a certain size it does not keep on growing, but stops. If it still went on a single finger would reach a length of several feet in a lifetime.

"Any observant person, however, is aware that this law is constantly violated. On almost any part of the body little independent growths start into existence. These are composed of minute groups of rebellious cells, small colonies which for some reason ignore this law of development and start on an independent existence of their own. They serve no physiological purpose. When harmless, as they frequently are, they are merely inconvenient blemishes. When dangerous they end by destroying life.

"Mild manifestations of this lawless tendency are the queer formations commonly known as warts and moles. There are other more noteworthy protuberances, such as 'wens,' that grow inexplicably, frequently upon the scalp, reach a certain size, and then stop. This latter growth belongs to the general class of tumors known as benign. They are benign simply because after developing sluggishly to a certain point their growth is mysteriously arrested. Between benign tumors and the most malignant cancers there is only this difference: That the latter have the power of unlimited growth.

"The true cancer, once started on its riotous career, keeps on and digs deep into healthy surrounding tissue and destroys it, until finally, for a variety of reasons, it kills the patient. In some cases a benign growth which has remained quiescent for years suddenly develops a new vitality and becomes malignant. There are those who maintain, though the occurrence is certainly rare, that a harmless wart may sometimes develop into a genuine cancer. The point to be brought in mind is that all these abnormal growths are related; that the only thing that makes one malignant and another not is this tendency to keep growing.

"A genuine cancer in its final stages has another development. It no longer confines its activity to the original seat, but starts new cancers in other parts of the body. Certain groups of cancer cells break away from the primary headquarters, escape into the blood stream and start new growths elsewhere. This is the phenomenon known as 'generalized cancer.'"

Millions of dollars have been devoted to the study of cancer and its cure, and every known scientist is wide awake to the study of the disease and to grasp hold of anything that may indicate a possibility of its alleviation. The points upon which the authorities on cancer in this country agree, says the New York World, are as follows:

First.—Cancer in its first stage is local and is curable.

Second.—The causes of cancer are not known.

Third.—It is not known whether or not cancer is hereditary.

Fourth.—There is absolutely no cure for cancer except to cut it out.

Fifth.—Go to a physician at the first sign of trouble. Preferably, be examined by a physician at frequent intervals anyhow.

Sixth.—The idea that cancer in plants may give rise to cancer in man is fantastic. Tumors are not contagious.

Seventh.—Radium does not permanently cure internal cancer. It may check the growth for awhile, but sooner or later it comes back. Popular belief in radium is based on the fact that only the occasional cures are heard from—not the failures. The failures outnumber the cures 100 to 1.

A Good Sign.

In digging out an apothecary's shop in Pompeii the workmen brought to light a notice that confronted visitors to the place 2,000 years ago: "Otiosis non est locus; discede, morator." It is a good sign for the modern office or place of business. Callers who know Latin will read it for themselves. Those who do not will ask what it means. Then comes your opportunity. "This is no place for idlers. Loafer get out!"

One day is worth two tomorrows. Have you something to do tomorrow? Do it today.—B. Franklin.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th, 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Moderate Drinking.

To the Editor.

Dr. G. Von Bunge, professor of physiology in the University of Basle, Switzeriand, says truly:

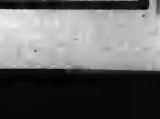
"Every drunkard was once a moderate drinker and everyone who leads by his example to moderate drinking leads some of them to immoderate drinking. He sets a stone rolling which it is out of his power to stop. It is not the drunkard who has to bear the reproach of seducing others. The seducers are the moderate drinkers, and as long as the seduction continues immoderate drinking with its consequences, disease, insanity and crime will continue. Anyone who is not aware of this does not know the history of the battle against drunkenness."

"The chief cause of drinking is the tendency to imitate. The first glass of beer does not taste any better than the first cigar. Men drink because others drink. When once they have formed the habit there is no lack of excuses for repeated drinks."

"From the first glass to insanity, crime, despair, suicide, there are a thousand stages of misery. Only those who sink to the lowest levels are taken account of by statistics. We must not forget also that all of these miseries spoil the happiness of others. How much family happiness is lost, how many tears of innocent fellow sufferers, how much deep rankling pain of which no intimation is to be found in statistics."

"What shall we say of the man who thinks to himself: 'Let millions of my fellowmen every year languish in hospitals and asylums; let millions plunge themselves and their families into ruin, so long as I get my glass of beer?'"

H. ARNOTT, M.B., M.C.P.S.



MAKING GOOD

Processes Coming Back to Their Own at Canadian National Exhibition

The Processes are coming back to the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. Last year the Austrian exhibit chased the whirring wheels out of their home in the Process Building. This year the manufacture of goods will be resumed. A prominent exhibit will be a joint one, in which A. R. Clarke, the United Shoe Machinery Co., the Minister-Myles Co. and the T. Eaton Co. will get together and show the entire process of turning a hide into a shoe. There will be many another process besides, and this department, always one of the most important of the entire exhibition, will come into its own again.

W. G. Kenney, accountant in the Royal Bank at Grand Valley for the last two years, was presented with an address and a handsome club bag prior to his departure for North Bay.

WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Female Ills—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Belleville, N.S., Canada.—"I doctored for ten years for female troubles and did not get well. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I write now to tell you that I am cured. You can publish my letter as a testimonial." —MRS. SUVERNE BABINE, Belleville, Nova Scotia, Canada.

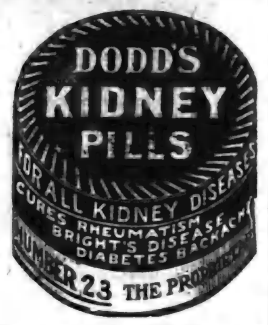
Another Woman Recovers.

Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years, and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health."—MRS. WILLIAM H. GILL, No. 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Unsympathetic.



"Willie," whispered auntie in the street car, "why don't you get up and give your seat to your father? Doesn't it pain you to see him reaching for the strap?"

"Not in a car," responded the youngster, settling back comfortably in his seat.—People's Home Journal.

Laughs First.

"What makes you begin to laugh every time you see me?" asked Mr. Growcher.

"I'm taking time by the forelock," replied his wife. "I know there won't be a chance in the world for me to laugh after I have talked with you for five minutes."—Washington Star.

OUR WORD "GARDEN."

In the Old Anglo-Saxon It Meant Private Inclosed Land.

We speak so freely and often of a "garden," assuming that there is some well defined common use of that word even among the authorities on gardening subjects. But the fact is that it has reached mighty elastic limits in their writings and speech and can be taken to mean anything from the enormous private parks and estates to the tin can glories of a back yard.

The word garden is from the old Anglo-Saxon root "gyrden," meaning an inclosure. At that time, due to the uncertain character of community life, it was either inclosed within fortifications or left unprotected and exposed without. This private inclosed land was the garden of that time. That is the meaning of garden in the Song of Solomon.

Gradually the sense of the word has changed to cover those parts of the land devoted to the cultivation of plants either for pleasure or for use; thus, we have the vegetable or fruit garden, and on the other hand, the wall, water or rose garden, etc.

Liberty Hyde Bailey defines a garden as "the personal part of an estate, that area which is most intimately associated with the private life of the home."

Whatever the sense in which it is used, the word "garden" always succeeds in carrying with it an atmosphere of romance and beauty, which countless ages of use cannot dim.—Philadelphia Record.

HUMAN INSTINCT.

More Potent at Times Than Reason in Directing Our Actions.

That even in man instinct is sometimes stronger than reason is illustrated by these two cases:

There had been shipped on a Mississippi river steamboat a box with a glass cover, containing a very active rattlesnake. Whenever any one approached the box the serpent would strike the cover. The owner of the reptile challenged any one to hold his finger on the glass and let the rattler strike at it. There was no danger, and it seemed an easy thing to do. First one and then another tried it, but when the snake gave its vicious spring the finger was invariably drawn back with a jerk. Instinct was stronger than reason and will combined.

A young man in Paris had lost his last sou at the gambling table. Not only was he without means, but he had lost a large sum belonging to his employer. He started for the Seine with the intention of drowning himself. On the way there was a great commotion, caused by the escape of a lion from a strolling menagerie. The animal came galloping down the street, and people fled in every direction.

Instantly the man who was seeking death climbed a lamp post and clung to the top of it, trembling in every limb. When the animal was captured and the danger was over he proceeded to the river and plunged in.—Washington Star.

Spanish Nicknames.

One of the peculiar ways in which Spanish differs from English is in the names the language gives to all people with a certain infirmity or peculiarity. A blind man is referred to as el ciego, a man with but one eye is a tuerto, a pug nosed man is chato, one who is cross eyed is a bisojo, a cojo is a lame man, and a manco has but one arm. If he is humpbacked he is a jorobado, if baldheaded a calvo, and if his hair is very short he is a pelon. The feminine titles for the same classes are the same, with the exception that they end in "a" where the masculine terminate with "o." These short names are used most commonly. In fact, they are applied as nicknames in many cases, and especially among the lower classes persons are addressed or referred to only by these names.

Europe's Diamond Industry.

Years ago Amsterdam was at the head of the diamond industry in Europe. Of late Antwerp has forged ahead and taken first place. Amsterdam very largely specializes in small stones, and its superiority over Antwerp in cutting these diamonds is unquestioned. Antwerp, on the other hand, cuts large diamonds and small ones, according to what happens to be most in demand. It works on the larger Transvaal stones furnished by the London syndicate, and at the same time it monopolizes the small southwest African business.

The Word "Lurid."

The word "lurid" is misused by many people as a synonym for "glaring" or "fiery." One speaks in this sense of "lurid" language, "lurid" flames, "lurid" dramas. It is probable that not one person in three knows the real meaning of "lurid." The dictionary defines it as "ghastly, pale, wan, gloomy," which in no way carries out the general and mistaken idea of the word.—New York World.

Postage Stamps.

There was stamped postal letter paper as early as 1818, but postage stamps proper begin with those used in Great Britain between 1833-1840. It was not until 1839 or 1840 that the adhesive stamp was used on letters and other mail matter.—New York American.

Not Worrying.

"Oh, Luella! There's a man just fallen off that next pier, and I think it's your husband."

"Well, dear, don't get excited; we'll soon know. If he doesn't come up it's probably Jim—he can't swim, you know."—Life.

ONE SORT OF MURDER.

It Doesn't Take Human Life, but It Shortens Its Usefulness.

Several well known financial men were talking the other day when the name of a man well known in the street for his proclivity to take up valuable time of friends with useless discussions about nothing was mentioned.

One of the men in the party promptly burst out with: "That man! He's a murderer."

"What's that?" said another. "I never heard that he had killed any one unless he talked them to death."

"I mean just what I say. He's a murderer on the installment plan," came the answer.

The speaker was begged to explain, and he said: "I have just so many days to live, and all of them are filled with business of importance. That man comes in and steals my time, and I claim that he has just as much murdered me as if some time in the future he had struck me down, for the time he talks with his nonsense is that much gone out of my life and is lost. I say that he is a murderer on the installment plan."

And when the other members of the party recalled the many times they had been treated in the same way by the man under discussion they agreed with the first man in his verdict.—Wall Street Journal.

LONDON'S UGLY CHURCH.

The First Sacred Edifice in the World to Be Lighted by Gas.

Readers of "Our Mutual Friend" will remember that Dickens gives a whimsical description of St. John's, Westminster, when referring to the home of the doll's dressmaker, Miss Jenny Wren.

"In this region," he writes, "are a certain little street called Church street and a certain little blind square called Smith square, in the center of which last retreat is a very hideous church, with four towers at the four corners, generally resembling some petrified monster, frightful and gigantic, on its back, with its legs in the air."

Lord Chesterfield said St. John's reminded him of an elephant with its legs in the air, and Charles Mathews likened it to a dining table in the same position.

St. John's enjoys the distinction of being the first sacred edifice in the world to be lit by gas. As may be imagined, the introduction of the new illuminant was deeply resented by many conservative spirits, some of whom went so far as to describe it as a sacrilege.—Manchester (England) Courier.

Varieties of Bridges.

Bridges are seen hanging over rivers and upon noses. They also span some streets. They should not be confused with the game called bridge, which spans only time and money. Some bridges, like poker, depend entirely upon the draw. Bridges spend their time in heaving up and down and leaning against their towers. The object of bridges is to give very one a chance to get back from where he has been, or to go whence he can get back. Sometimes bridges are built over railroad tracks and spend all their time in saving people from being run over. A bridge which is thus employed is very happy, because it leads an upright life; also because the railroad company was sad when obliged to put it there.

Bridges are also used over chasms. Every chasm ought to have one. It provides a place for children to fall from; also it gives the chasm something to look up to.

Friendliness of London.

There is no friendliness like the friendliness of London. Six or seven years ago I went rather frequently to a certain tea shop, which has every afternoon a crowd of men taking their tea and playing dominoes and chess. We used to talk occasionally, but none of us ever knew the name of any of the others. Then for five years I did not go near the place until one day when I dropped in almost by accident. At once there was a greeting and a welcome from at least half a dozen. The other day I went in again after another absence of six months, and the greeting was the same. This will do to tell those people who insist that London is an unfriendly place.—London Citizen.

Nicely Explained.

A second hand picture dealer was trying to sell what he described as a genuine Raphael.

"The signature does not look like Raphael," remarked the prospective customer after using his magnifying glass. "It reads more like 'Rachel!'"

"Ah," said the dealer, "I will tell you the history of that. When Raphael painted that picture he was heavily in debt, so he put it in the wife's name for safety."—Argonaut.

No Chicken Herself.

Miss Sweetner—Isn't it laughable to see the youthful airs Fan Billiwink gives herself? She must be at least ten years older than I am. Miss Capsicum—Fully. And you wouldn't tear under the wing, you know, either.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Insulted.

The young man leading a dog by a string lounged up to the ticket office of a railway station and inquired, "Must I—aw—take a ticket for the puppy?"

"No; you can travel as an ordinary passenger," was the reply.—London Tit-Bits.

It requires little exertion upon our part to bring misfortune upon ourselves.—Mecander.

Renewed Vigor in Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes:—"At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roses over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their health and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. A SERIAL STORY

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXV.—continued.

"They were my posters," Annabel said. "The ones Cariolus did for me.'

"The posters at least," Anna answered quietly, "I have some claim to. You know very well that you took from my easel David Courtlaw's study of me, and sent it to Cariolus. You denied it at the time—but unfortunately I have proof. Mr. Courtlaw found the study in Cariolus' studio."

Annabel laughed hardly.

"What did it matter?" she cried. "We are, or rather we were, so much alike then that the portrait of either of us would have done for the other. It saved me the bother of being studied."

"It convinced Mr. Earles that I was 'Alcide,'" Anna remarked quietly.

"We will convince him now to the contrary," Annabel answered.

Anna looked at her, startled.

"What do you mean?" she asked.

Annabel set her teeth hard, and turned fiercely towards Anna.

"It means that I have had enough of this slavery," she declared. "My husband and all his friends are fools, and the life they lead is impossible for me. It takes too many years to climb even a step in the social ladder. I've had enough of it. I want freedom."

"You mean to say," Anna said slowly, "that you are going to leave your husband?"

"Yes."

"You are willing to give up your position, your beautiful houses, your carriages and milliner's accounts to come back to Bohemianism?"

"Why not?" Annabel declared. "I am sick of it. It is dull—deadly dull."

"And what about this man—Mr. Montague Hill?"

Annabel put her hand suddenly to her throat and steadied herself with the back of a chair. She looked stealthily at Anna.

"You have succeeded a little too well in your personation," she said bitterly, "to get rid very easily of Mr. Montague Hill. You are a great deal more like what I was a few months ago than I am now."

Anna laughed softly.

"You propose, then," she remarked, "that I shall still be saddled with a pseudo husband. I think not, Annabel. You are welcome to proclaim yourself 'Alcide' if you will. I would even make over my engagement to you, if Mr. Earles would permit. But I should certainly want to be rid of Mr. Montague Hill, and I do not think that under those circumstances I should be long about it."

Annabel sank suddenly into a chair. Her knees were trembling, her whole frame was shaken with sobs.

"Anna," she moaned, "I am a jealous, ungrateful woman. But oh, how weary I am! I know. If only—Anna, tell me," she broke off suddenly, "how did you get to know Mr. Ennison?"

"He spoke to me, thinking that I was you," Anna answered. "I liked him, and I never undeceived him."

"And he sat at my table," Annabel said bitterly, "and yet he did not know me."

Anna glanced up.

"You must remember," she said, "that you yourself are responsible for your altered looks."

"For the others," Annabel said tearfully, "that is well enough. But for him——"

"Something in her sister's tone startled Anna. She looked at her for a moment fixedly. When she tried to speak she found it difficult. Her voice seemed to come from a long way off.

"What do you mean, Annabel? You only knew Mr. Ennison slightly——"

There was a dead silence in the little room. Anna sat with the face of a Sphinx — waiting. Annabel thought, and thought again.

"I knew Mr. Ennison better than I have ever told you," she said slowly.

"Go on!"

"You know—in Paris they coupled my name with some one's—an Englishman's. Nigel Ennison was he."

Anna stood up. Her cheeks were aflame. Her eyes were lit with smouldering passion.

"Go on!" she commanded. "Let me know the truth."

Annabel looked down. It was hard to meet that gaze.

"Does he never speak to you of — old times?" she faltered.

"Don't fence with me," Anna cried fiercely. "The truth!"

Annabel bent over her and whispered in her sister's ear.

CHAPTER XXVI.

An Old Fool.

Lady Ferringhall made room for him on the sofa by her side. She was wearing a becoming tea-gown, and it was quite certain that Sir John would not be home for several hours at least.

"I am delighted to see you, Mr. Ennison," she said, letting her fingers rest in his. "Do come and cheer me up. I am bored to distraction."

He took a seat by her side. He was looking ill and pale. There were shadows under his eyes. He returned her impressive greeting almost mechanically.

"But you yourself," she exclaimed, glancing into his face, "you too look tired. You poor man, what have you been doing to yourself?"

"Nothing except travelling all night," he answered. "I am just back from Paris. I am bothered. I have come to you for sympathy, perhaps for help."

"You may be sure of the one," she murmured. "The other too if it is within my power."

"It is within yours—if anybody's," he answered. "It is about your sister, Lady Ferringhall."

Annabel gave a little gasp. The colour slowly left her cheeks, the lines of her mouth hardened. The change in her face was not a pleasant one.

"About my sister," she repeated slowly.

Her tone should have warned him, but he was too much in earnest to regard it.

"Yes. You remember that you saw us at the Savoy a few evenings ago?"

"Yes."

"And you knew, of course, that we were old friends?"

"Indeed?"

"Lady Ferringhall, I love your sister."

Lady Ferringhall sat with half closed eyes and clenched teeth. Brute! Fool! To have come to her on such an errand. She felt a hysterical desire to strike him, to burst out crying, to blurt out the whole miserable truth. The effort to maintain her self control was almost superhuman.

"But—your people!" she gasped. "Surely Lady Ennison would object, even if it were possible. And the Duke, too—I heard him say that a married secretary would be worse that useless to him."

"The difficulties on my side I can deal with," he answered. "I am not dependent upon any one. I have plenty of money, and the Duke will not be in the next Cabinet. My trouble is with your sister."

Lady Ferringhall was conscious of some relief.

"She has refused to listen to you?"

"She has behaved in a most extraordinary manner," he answered. "We parted—that night the best of friends. She knew that I cared for her, she had admitted that she cared for me. I suppose I was a little idiotic — I don't think we either of us mentioned the future, but it was arranged that I should go the next afternoon and have tea with her. When I went I was refused admittance. I have since received a most extraordinary letter from her. She offers me no explanations, permits me absolutely no hope. She simply refuses to hear from me again. I went to the theatre that night. I waited for her at the back. She saw me, and, Lady Ferringhall, I shall never forget her look as long as I live. It was horrible. She looked at me as though I were some unclean thing, as though my soul were weighted with every sin in the calendar. I could not have spoken to her. It took my breath away. By the time I had recovered myself she had gone. My letters are returned unopened. Her maid will not even allow me across the doorstep."

"The explanation seems to me to be reasonably simple," Annabel said coldly. "You seem to forget that my sister is—married."

"If she is," he answered, "I am convinced that there are circumstances in connection with that marriage which would make a divorce easy."

"You would marry a divorcee?" she asked.

"I would marry your sister anyhow, under any circumstances," he answered.

She looked at him curiously.

"I want to ask you a question," she said abruptly. "This wonderful affection of yours for my sister, does it date from your first meeting with her in Paris?"

He hesitated.

"I admired your sister in Paris," he answered, "but I do not believe that I regard her now as altogether the same person. Something has happened to change her marvellously, either that, or she wilfully deceived me and every one else in those days as to her real self. She was a much lighter and more frivolous person, very charming and companionable—but with a difference—a great difference. I wonder whether you would mind, Lady Ferringhall," he went on, with a sudden glance at her, "if I tell you that you yourself remind me a great deal more of what she was like then, except of course that your complexion and coloring are altogether different."

"I am highly flattered," she remarked, with subtle irony.

"Will you help me?" he asked.

"What can I do?"

"Go and see her. Find out what I have done or failed to do. Get an interview with her."

"Really," she said, with a hard little laugh, "you must regard me as a very good-natured person."

"You are," he answered unconsciously. "I am sure that you are. I want her to tell me the whole truth about this extraordinary marriage. We will find some way out of it."

"You think that you can do that?"

"I am sure of it," he answered, confidently. "Those things are arranged more easily in any other country than England. At any rate she must see me. I demand it as a right. I must know what new thing has come between us that she should treat me as a lover one day and a monster the next."

She leaned back against the cushions of her chair. She was pale, but she reminded him more at that minute than at any time of 'Alcide' as he had first known her.

"I wonder," she said, "how much you care."

"I care as a man cares only once in his life," he answered promptly. "When it comes there is no mistaking it."

"Did it come—in Paris?"

"I do not know," he answered, "I do not think so. What does it matter? It is here, and it is here to stay. Do help me, Lady Ferringhall. You need not be afraid. No trouble will ever come to your sister through me. If this idiotic marriage is binding then I will be her friend. But I have powerful friends. I only want to know the truth, and I will move heaven and earth to have it set aside."

"The truth," she murmured, with her eyes fixed upon him. "Well——"

She stopped short. He looked at her in some embarrassment.

"Forgive me," he said, "but I want to hear it from your sister. It is her duty to tell me, and I would not have her think that I had been trying to work upon your sympathies to learn her secrets."

She was silent.

"You will go and see her," he begged.

"Yes, I will go," she promised, with a queer little smile. "It is against my husband's orders, and I am not sure that my sister will be particularly glad to see me. But I will go."

"I shall always be grateful to you," he declared.

"Don't be too sure of that," she answered enigmatically.

* * * * * *

She looked at herself in the glass, long and earnestly.

"Blind fool!" she exclaimed under her breath. "Why cannot he guess the truth? I have done my hair in the old way and left off the rouge. Yet he hasn't the faintest idea."

Sir John came in from a Board meeting, and she gave him some tea. It chanced that there were no other callers. He looked at her once or twice curiously.

"Is it my fancy, Anna?" he asked, "or have you done your hair differently?"

She laughed bitterly.

"It is pleasant to have some one to notice these things," she declared. "You were complaining the other day, were you not, that I had changed so much. For your private benefit, and for this afternoon only, I have reverted to the old style. I can't alter the colour, but you must take that for granted."

Sir John rose solemnly from his chair, and coming over to her side stooped and kissed her.

"It is an unusual compliment, my dear," he said. "I thank you."

She accepted his embrace passively. He returned to his seat.

CURIOUS PIPEFISH.

The Males Have Pockets In Which They Carry Their Young.

The kangaroo has always seemed to have the monopoly of that convenient way of carrying its babies in a pouch, but it has been discovered that a fish has the same useful receptacle, which it uses for the same purpose. The pipefish, as it is called from the length of its jaws, has a pocket on the under side of its body nearly half its length. It is found in the male species only and is the only part of its body which is unprotected by large flat plates, which take the place of scales in its protective armor.

If a pipefish is taken from the water and its little ones shaken out of the pouch back into the water they always seem either unable or disinclined to run away. But if the father is placed in the water again all the small fish immediately swim back into the pouch. These curious little creatures have prehensile tails, which they use to hold on to the seaweed to protect themselves from being carried away by the tide. The pipefish is similar to the small eel, being about a foot in length and an inch in thickness. But, unlike the eel, it has a very long jaw and the peculiar defensive armor already mentioned.—New York Sun.

Facts Versus Fancies.

Richard Le Gallienne was sympathizing with a young writer whose book of poetry had been refused by twelve publishers.

"Real lovers of poetry," said Mr. Le Gallienne, "are unfortunately becoming rare. Too many people nowadays are like the judge.

"This judge was recommended by a poetic friend to read Shelley. The great man of the law said he supposed he ought to read a little poetry, and, having heard so much of Shelley, he would try him.

"'And what do you think of it?' said his friend to the judge after he had waded through a few pages of 'Epipsychidion.' 'Isn't it beautiful?'

"'Well, well—oh, yes. I daresay it is,' said the judge. 'But what I want to know is when are we going to get at the facts?'"—Washington Star.

OVER A BILLION FOR WAR FUND

Lord Kitchener Asks for 500,000 Men as an Addition to the Army—Premier's Statement

The House of Commons unanimously passed a war credit of $500,000,000 for the increase of the British army. This is the second war credit passed by the House, the sum of $535,000,000

Premier Asquith informed the members that Field Marshall Earl Kitchener wanted power to increase the British army of 500,000 men. On the new War Ministers' behalf the Premier asked the House of Commons to consent to this. The Premier defended England's course in joining in the war. In strong language he defended intervention, denouncing Germany's attempt to bargain with England at the expense of France.

"It would have been infamous for England to violate her treaty obligations," he declared, amidst a storm of cheers. "We had pledged our honor, and to have refrained from action would be to say we were no longer capable of keeping our word."

The Premier told the House that the white paper issued by the Government showed how strenuous and unremitting had been the efforts of Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, to secure for Europe an honorable and lasting peace.

"An Infamous Proposal."

After reading Sir Edward Goschen's despatch, saying that Germany had made "a strong bid for British neutrality," the Premier remarked that Germany's suggestion amounted to "the infamous proposal that we should give her a free hand to annex the whole of the extra-European possessions of France. If Great Britain had accepted, what reply could she have made to the Belgians' appeal? She could only have replied that we had bartered away to the power threatening her our obligations to keep our plighted word. What would have been Great Britain's position if she had assented to this infamous proposal, and what was she to get in return? Nothing but a promise given by a power which at that moment was announcing its intention of violating its own treaty. "We should have covered ourselves with dishonor and betrayed the interests of our country if we had accepted it. We are entitled to say for our country that we have made every effort for peace, and that war has been forced upon our country. The Government is confident that the nation is unsheathing the sword in a just cause. We are fighting, firstly, to fulfil international obligations which, if entered into by private individuals, no self-respecting man could have repudiated; and secondly, to vindicate the principle that small nations were not to be crushed in defiance of international good faith at the arbitrary will of a strong and overmastering power.

A Clear Conscience.

"No nation ever entered into a great contest with a clearer conscience or a stronger conviction. It is striking for the defence of a principle, the maintenance of which is the vital civilization of the world. As we have entered the struggle let us now make sure that all our resources, not only those of the United Knigdom, but those of the vast Empire of which it is the centre, are thrown into the scale." The Premier made a brief reference to the appointment of Field Marshal Kitchener as Secretary for War. He said that Earl Kitchener's connection with the Government did not identify him with any political party. In a great public emergency he had responded to a great public call, and he would have in the discharge of his most arduous task the complete confidence of all. In behalf of Lord Kitchener, the Premier asked power to increase the army by not less than half a million men. "I am encouraged to ask this," he said, "not only by reason of our own sense of the gravity of the circumstances, but by the knowledge that India is prepared to send us two divisions, and every one of the self-governing Dominions has spontaneously offered to the utmost limits of its possibility, both in men and money, all the help it can afford the Empire. The mother country must set an example while at the same time responding with gratitude and affection to the filial overtures of the outlying members of the family."

CANADA SENDS FLOUR

One Million Bags to be Sent Over to Britain

Canada is giving a million bags of flour to the Motherland. Action has been taken already, the offer made and accepted and the flour purchased. Within the next few days the first cargo of this gift will leave the shores of Canada for Liverpool, British cruisers keeping within striking distance all the way to safeguard the passage of the flour ship. The price paid was $2.80 per bag. As indicated in the cable acceptance, and in other messages received by the Government, the gift is a most welcome one to the Imperial Government.

In addition to the free contribution of flour the Government is acting for the home authorities in the purchase of other stores. Members of the Government are now obtaining from representative packers in Canada an estimate of the available surplus of meat, etc.

French Army Advancing

Unofficial despatches reached Paris Sunday saying that the French army which is invading Alsace, and which broke through the German defences at Altkirch occupied the heavily-fortified town of Muelhausen and has pushed on to Colmar, 22 miles beyond Muelhausen.

British, French and Belgium troops are said to have effected a junction across the line of the German advance through Belgium.

AGAINST THE WORLD

Kaiser Says Will Fight to Finish—Claims Commercial Jealousy.

A proclamation by Emperor William, addressed to the German nation, was made public in the Official Gazette on Saturday. The text was as follows:

"Since the foundation of the German Empire it has been for forty-three years the object of the efforts of myself and my ancestors to preserve the peace of the world and to advance by peaceful means our vigorous development.

"Our adversaries, however, are jealous of the success of our work, and there has been latent hostility to the east and to the west and beyond the sea. This has been borne by us till now, as we were aware of our responsibility and our power.

"Now, however, these adversaries wish to humiliate us, asking that we should look on and watch our enemies preparing themselves for the coming attack. They will not suffer that we maintain our resolute fidelity to our ally, who is fighting for her position as a great power and with whose humiliation our power and honor would equally be lost.

"So the sword must decide.

"In the midst of perfect peace the enemy surprises us. Therefore to arms.

"Any dallying and temporizing would be to betray the fatherland.

"To be or not to be is the question for the empire which our fathers founded. To be or not to be is the question for German power and German existence.

"We shall resist to the last breath of man and horse, and we shall fight out the struggle even against a world of enemies.

"Never has Germany been subdued when she was united.

"Forward with God, who will be with us as He was with our ancestors."

CANADA'S PART IN WAR

More Men Volunteering For Duty Than Are Required.

Reports received by the Militia Department at Ottawa indicate that enlistment all over Canada is now proceeding smoothly, and the numbers who are applying bear out the forecast that far more than the total number actually required will volunteer. Altogether there will be twenty-five thousand men mobilized at Quebec, and of these twenty-one thousand will be sent across the Atlantic as soon as the word comes from the Imperial Government. There will be ample work for the remaining four thousand in Canada, for garrison and patrol duty.

There will also be available sufficient for a second army contingent from the Dominion. According to the opinion of military authorities at Ottawa, there is a strong probability that a second army contingent will be required from here. Military experts believe that there will be a prolonged European land campaign before the issues of the war are finally decided.

At all regimental centres in Canada recruiting for enlistment in the Canadian contingents is of the most active kind. Volunteers to do battle for Great Britain are coming forward from every part of the country. From various parts of Ontario 250 naval officers have already gone forward. The 48th Highlanders under command of Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., will go to the front as a unit. The first contingent of 20,000 men from Canada will be all trained men. Several batteries of heavy artillery are being centred at Quebec and Val Cartier in the presence of the Duke of Connaught. On Monday all the Canadian ports were closed to shipping at the same time as the British ports, which means that during the time of prohibition no trans-Atlantic steamer is allowed to leave either port. This is taken to mean that German cruisers are hovering in the neighborhood of the British trade routes and until this menace is removed there will be no sailings.

MUST STAY IN CANADA

German Reservists Will Not Be Allowed to Leave Country.

There is trouble in store for German officers or reservists in Canada who attempt to leave for the fatherland to fight against Great Britain. In accordance with instructions from the Imperial authorities all such who are found attempting to leave Canada for the purpose will be summarily arrested and detained. Orders from Ottawa have been given to the authorities at all ocean ports and at all border towns and cities to have this action taken, and it is expected that numerous arrests will follow the orders.

Hundreds of reservists have been collecting from outside points in the centres of railway transportation, whence they have taken passage to the Atlantic seaports with the intention of shipping home. These men are now avowed enemies of Great Britain, and as such are not allowed to leave for the scene of war. They are also enemies of Canada. They will therefore either have to stay quietly and peaceably in Canada or become prisoners of war.

Germans or Austrians who attend strictly to their vocations as Canadian residents will not be molested.

A Skirmish on the Sea

The Admiralty announced on Sunday that one of the cruiser squadrons of the British fleet was attacked by German submarines. The British ships were not damaged, but the German submarine U-15 was sunk. It is not stated where the engagement took place.

BRITISH SOLDIERS NOW ON CONTINENT

No Time Lost by Kitchener in Sending Aid to Brave Belgians—Big Army Soon to Cross Channel.

Official announcement was made by the French War Office that English troops are landing on French soil under the direction of French officers.

The British troops who landed Saturday comprise the first British expeditionary force of 22,000 men, and include some of the crack regiments of the British army. They were taken across the Channel by a fleet of transports under the convoy of two battleships and three armored cruisers, and landings were made at Ostend, Calais and Dunkirk.

Ostend is the nearest Belgian port from the English coast, eighty miles from Dover; Dunkirk is just across the French border from Ostend and is sixty miles from Dover. Calais is farther south and is only some twenty miles from Dover.

The troops, it is well understood, will be rushed to Namur to assist in the defence of that town, where it is expected the chief stand against the German invasion of Belgium will be made.

This force is only a part of the expeditionary force which England is expected to send to the defence of Belgium, the British War Office admitted. It was said that the British Government already had completed arrangements including the commandeering of sufficient transports, to send an army of 100,000 men into Belgium.

GERMANS IN LIEGE

Kaiser's Forces Occupied Town But Forts Still Unconquered

The City of Liege is in the hands of the Germans, but the forts are still holding out. The Belgian garrison, realizing that the citadel in the centre of the city could not be held, blew it up to prevent the invaders using it. It was an old disused fortress.

A peaceful occupation of Liege by the Germans was carried out during Friday and Saturday nights. The entry into the city was effected through an interval between the forts at Evignee and Fleron.

Ten thousand German troops marched into the city. General von Emmich immediately issued a proclamation declaring that the civilians had fired on the troops, and warning the inhabitants that if this is repeated he will bombard the place with his artillery, which is now stationed in the citadel. There is little likelihood of anything so frightful, as the burgomaster has ordered the people of the city not to carry arms.

During the first hours of the occupation the Germans remained hidden in the outskirts, but at night they marched boldly into the city and took up their quarters in the university and public buildings. They refrained from intruding into private residences. They are conducting themselves well, paying for everything they get in the few shops which are still open. They are giving German money.

FRENCH ROUTED GERMANS

Awful Slaughter at Small Alsatian Town—Bayonets Were Used

An official report of the capture by the French of the village of Altkirch, in Alsace, says that the French advance guard arrived before the place before nightfall Friday. The town was defended by strong earthworks and occupied by a German brigade. The French, in about equal number, carried the breastworks in a fierce bayonet charge. The Germans broke, abandoning the trenches and the town. A regiment of French dragoons pursued the retreating Germans in the direction of Wallheim and Togoschen, inflicting further great losses. The Germans are said to have lost 20,000 men and the French 15,000.

AWFUL GERMAN LOSSES

Requested a Day's Armistice to Bury Dead at Liege.

News despatches from Brussels state that the Germans on Friday evening abandoned the attack on Liege, and requested an armistice of 24 hours. It was stated officially that the Germans admitted their casualties numbered 25,000. They had 30,000 men before Liege when the attack commenced.

Japan Ready to Act

The first and second squadrons of the Japanese fleet put to sea Sunday. The destination of the fleet is kept secret, but there have been reports that a German squadron is threatening British shipping in the Orient and it is believed that the movement of the Japanese warships is connected with this report.

Indian Troops Offered

The Maharajah of Nepal has offered the entire military resources of his independent kingdom to the British Government. Other Indian independent kingdoms are making similar offers.

The Maharajah of Nepal is a Major-General in the British army by virtue of an honorary commission. His regular army numbers 30,000 men, with an artillery force of 250 modern guns. The majority of his troops are of the Gurkha tribe, the most famous soldiers in India.

Henry Geercke, a German living at Scarboro, near Toronto, was arrested on Sunday, and a search of his house revealed 96 sticks of dynamite hidden in the cellar.

SIR EDWARD GREY A SILENT DIPLOMAT

His Life Overshadowed by Great Sorrow—Belongs to Proud Old Family

Sir Edward Grey, Britain's Secretary for Foreign Affairs, is to-day one of the outstanding figures in Europe, on account of the part that he played in the fruitless negotiations to prevent the whole of Europe being plunged into warafre.

To understand Sir Edward's character, it is necessary to bear in mind two things. He is an aristocrat of aristocrats, and the greatest living authority on fly-fishing. The first explains why he is in politics. The second reveals the temperament of the man. He was also once the amateur tennis champion of England. There is no nobler blood in Britain than his. He inherited his title from his grandfather, Sir George Grey. As far back as English history can be traced the Greys of Northumberland have helped make history. He is 52 years old, has been Foreign Secretary for eight years, and is the only commoner decorated with the noble order of the Garter, a special honor for which King George singled him out in 1912.

He is cold, reserved, correct in pose and consistent in poise. His character is so strong and his record so clean that no breath of scandal can cling to him. None would believe it. Nobody believes he would lie, either diplomatically or personally. He has never sat for any but the one constituency, and he has represented it since he was 28 years old. He will probably continue as its representative until he offers himself for election no more.

Sir Edward Grey guided Britain through some anxious days. At the end of 1911 the British fleet was out in the North Sea for three days and three nights without lights with the torpedo nets dropped and the decks cleared for action. How war with Germany was averted then is as great a mystery as how war with Germany was threatened. But it was the second incident of its sort since the present Government came into office and men do not pass days of that kind and not age. Sir Edward Grey kept the peace of the days past and has striven to keep peace for days to come; but who can foretell what may come? War is born in silence and darkness.

Yet of all men he has shown the tragedy of a great personal sorrow—a sorrow that has marked him with the furrows of pain suppressed and given to his eyes a depth and expression that only men who have watched the treasure of the heart take wings can know. For the year that gave him his place in public life, a mere lad of 23, gave him his place in private life, when he married the daughter of a neighboring squire, Miss Dorothy Widdrington.

She shared his political life and sportsman's life. At the times of general election she would start at one end of the constituency and he at the other, so that there should be two meetings in each place, and it is not too much to say that she was as popular with the audiences as he. And always was she with him in that other great part of his life when he whipped the silent streams for trackless trouts.

Then came the great day when King Edward made him Secretary of State for Forign Affairs. A few weeks later whilst in London he received a telegram that Lady Grey had met with an accident, and to return at once. A special train rushed through the night, but he found her with he rskull broken; there had been a carriage accident in is own park at Falloden.

There remained for him his work—and her memory. He gave it to be understood that he never wished it referred to, and shortly returned to his work in London. He slid out of all public functions and began and has continued to spend his week-ends alone in a little cottage on the side of the Thames, with a man servant to look after him. He has never since varied in his dress, just a black morning coat and a black tie.

BIG BATTLE ANY DAY

Allied Troops Combining to Oppose German Advance

Henceforth news from Brussels of the operations in Belgium will be scarce, but the situation is satisfactory, and the world may expect any day to hear of a great battle. It is impossible to predict when this battle will take place. It is likely, however, that it will be some distance west of Liege and that British, French and Belgian troops in great force will be opposed to the big German army which is trying to force its way through to France.

France vs. Austria

France formally declared war upon Austria on Monday.

CASH COST OF WAR

Figured at normal prices, it will cost nearly fifty millions of dollars a day to support the war, is the estimate of Prof. Charles Richet of the University of Paris. The increase of prices will raise the total accordingly.

His table of cost, translated from francs to dollars, follows:

Feed of men	$12,000,000
Feed of horses	1,000,000
Pay (European rates)	4,250,000
Pay of workmen in arsenals and ports	1,000,000
Transportation (sixty miles, ten days)	2,400,000
Transportation of provisions	4,200,000
Munitions—infantry, ten cartridges a day	4,200,000
Artillery, ten shots a day	1,200,000
Marine, two shots a day	400,000
Equipment	4,200,000

NAPOLEONIC WARS AND WAR OF TO-DAY

A Glance Over European History of 100 Years Ago and a Comparison of Methods

A hundred years have passed since the great nations of Europe gathered on battlefields in titanic struggle, combining their hatreds and their men to curb the genius of Napoleon.

That century has changed every method of warfare, bringing new implements of death and increasing the power of each soldier as a killer many fold.

Napoleon gathered 200,000 men at Leipsic in October, 1813, to stand against the armies raised by Austria, Russia, Sweden and Prussia. The allies had a total of 350,000 men.

There were mixtures of races on each side. To the eagles of Napoleon rallied not only his own Frenchmen, but Italians, Spaniards, Portuguese, Belgians, Dutch, Swiss, Poles and Germans.

Against him were pitted Slavs, English, Germans, Swedes, Hungarians and savage Bashkirs, a mixed Tartar tribe from northern Russia, who fought with bows and arrows.

It was fighting at close range. The infantry carried flintlock muskets. To reload was a matter of minutes. Their sharp bayonets were often more deadly than their bullets.

The artillery of the period was primitive. The guns were muzzle-loading, firing with fuse or match. The round ball schrapnel or chained shot carried but short distances. The clash was between men who could look into each other's eyes, who rode down each other with circling sabers.

In that battle, the first important battlefield defeat of Napoleon, 54,000 of the allies lost their lives. Of Napoleon's army, 40,000 dead and wounded were left behind when the retreat began towards Paris. The battle lasted from October 14 to October 20, 1813.

Now, with millions of men under arms, the chances of carnage are multiplied not only by the number engaged, but by the new weapons of warfare which turn each soldier into a platoon.

Bombs, capable of killing hundreds or tearing down great fortifications, may be dropped from airships in the night.

The cannon have grown to mechanical monsters. The flintlock has become a repeater, sending not one bullet, but a volley. The Gatling gun speaks a hundred death sentences a second. The machine guns multiply the man behind into a squad, while upon the sea the great steel ships of death carry the means of wiping out cities from distances almost beyond the range of vision.

Even with the primitive weapons waste, sorrow, starvation and unspeakable suffering blighted the cities and countries these armies visited. Each contested city became a group of hospitals. Livestock and crops were swept away, taking the result of years of industry in an hour.

Following the beaten army of Napoleon, the allies entered Paris and forced him to abdicate. He was banished to Elba, but within a year had escaped and gathered an army of 360,000. England, Russia, Austria and Prussia gathered an army of 600,000 and England and Prussia ended the last war in which all great nations were involved, at Waterloo.

In men involved in the present war, the armies have increased nearly ten times. In addition, the armament of battleships brings to the contest greater death-power than existed in the entire equipment of a century past.

The greatest drama of death of all ages, impends, say the the military experts.

The clash of battleships at sea, of men on land who fire from distances beyond the range of human eye, of airships which dart like great vultures through the air, presents a spectacle that history has never yet recorded.

The world knows the awfulness of 1813.

What picture will 1914 paint?

Mills—Mellor.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Mellor, Grand Valley, on August 4th, when the daughter, Jessie Florence, was united in marriage to William Hammond Mills, of Orillia, son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Mills, of Tullsonburg.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wm. Poole. The bride, who was brought in and given away by her father, wore a beautiful gown of white duchess satin, trimmed with pearls and shadow lace. She wore a long tulle veil in cap effect, trimmed with orange blossoms, and carried a large bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her gift from the groom was a pearl necklace. Miss Lillian Mellor, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore a gown of yellow charmeuse, with Juliet cap of tulle to match, and a pearl sunburst, the gift of the groom. The two little flower girls were Miss Audrey Turner, of Grand Valley, and Miss Grace Hallet, of Toronto. They were dressed alike in dainty lingerie frocks and little tulle bonnets. Mr. Roy Mills was his brother's best man, and received a pearl tie pin from the groom. The groom's sister played Lohengrin's Wedding March, and Miss Mae Eisler, of Mitchell, sang "Because" during the signing of the register. They both received gold bar pins from the groom. After the ceremony a reception was held by Mr. and Mrs. Mellor, the latter wearing a handsome gown of mauve silk veiled in black lace. Mr. and Mrs. Mills were also present, Mrs. Mills wearing a becoming dress of grey silk. After the usual toasts and speeches the bride changed for her travelling suit of French blue gabardine, with which she wore a hat of white felt. The happy couple left on the five o'clock train for a trip to Quebec.

Atkinson-Dynes

"Lilac Grove," the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Dynes, Redickville, was the scene of a large and pretty wedding on Wednesday, July 29, at high noon, when their second daughter, Elizabeth, was united in holy matrimony to John Atkinson, of Redickville. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Mr. Hunter, in the presence of over two hundred guests, who were received by Misses' Maggie and Bertha Dynes, cousins of the bride. Miss Winnie Atkinson, sister of the groom, rendered Lohengrin's wedding march while the bride, who was given away by her father, took her place under an arch of evergreens, daintily decorated with flowers. The bride looked charming, gowned in white satin with tunic, and draped front trimmed with crystal and pearl ornamentations. She wore a bridal veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. Little Myrtle Stevenson, cousin of the bride, who was flower girl, was attired in pale blue silk with shadow lace trimmings and carried a basket of white roses and lilies of the valley. Roy Mortimer, nephew of the bride, who acted as page, was attired in white and carried a shepherd's crook. During the signing of the register a quartette entitled "Indeed," was rendered by Mrs. Bailey, Miss Ruby Bell, Misses Harriett and Pearl Black. The groom's gift to the bride was a solid gold bracelet, to the flower girl a gold chain and cameo drop, to the page a pearl set tie pin and clip and to the Misses Dynes, who received the guests, a gold brooch each. After the usual congratulations the guests repaired to a beautifully decorated dining room where they partook of a sumptuous wedding feast, while the choir, of which the bride had been a member for years, sang several selections. Mrs. Atkinson received many beautiful and costly gifts, among them being a piano from her parents. The bride travelled in a suit of steel grey garberdeen cloth, wearing a white hat with mounted plume. The happy young couple motored to Shelburne where they took the evening train to Toronto, Hamilton and other points amid showers of confetti and the well wishes of a host of friends. After their return they will reside on their farm, "Sunny Acres," at Redickville. We wish them bon voyage.

Those from a distance who attended the wedding were: Mrs. M. A. Walker, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, U.S.; Mrs. J. Anders, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mortimer, Miss Mary and Master Roy, Brampton, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dynes, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Dynes, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dynes, Mr. and Mrs. E. Dynes, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Dynes, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bryan, and sons, Aylmer and Wilson, all of Amaranth; Mrs. Will Drake, Georgetown.—Economist.

Moffatt—Gray.

A pretty wedding took place at 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barnabas Lyons, Pape Ave., when Mary Alice, daughter of Mrs. Mary and the late John Grey, formerly of Millbrook, Ont., was married to Mr. James Alexander Moffatt, son of Mrs. Margaret and the late John Moffatt, Crawford St., Rev. J. A. McKenzie officiating. Miss Gladys McMaster played the wedding march while the bride entered the drawing room with Mr. Barnabas Lyon. She was gowned in ivory duchess satin trimmed with shadow lace and pearls. Miss Bell Gilchrist was maid of honor, and wore mauve silk brocade trimmed with shadow lace and hat to match. Mr. Hilliard Moffatt supported his brother, and Miss Catharine Lyon sang "O Perfect Love," during the signing of the register. Supper was served in a marquee on the lawn, after which the bride changed her wedding gown for a travelling suit of navy blue taffata over ivory crepe de chine blouse and Panama hat, and Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt left for a honeymoon trip to the Thousand Islands, Montreal and Quebec. Upon their return they will reside at 76 Grace street.—Toronto Globe, July 31st.

A. E. WILLIAMS, Reeve. E. HAMILTON Clerk.

Nothing Like It for Colds.

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Mrs. Graham, of the Centre Road, near Derry West, was driving in a buggy to visit a friend when a dog ran out at her horse. The animal became frightened and ran away. Mrs. Graham was thrown from the vehicle, sustaining fractures of the ribs.

John Cowan, son of R. Cowen, of Luther, has a dislocated shoulder, the cause of which is this: He was leading a cow with a rope, when she took fright at something and tore along the slippery grass. John had taken a wrap of the rope around his hand, and when his shoulder came in contact with a fair sized stone and an excited cow pulling on the rope, something had to give way.

The Bowling Tournament.

The fifth Annual Tournament of the Orangeville Lawn Bowling Club, which is in progress this week, is easily the best Tournament the local Club has yet held. Forty-nine rinks entered and there was only one default, so that 48 rinks or 196 players participated in the different competitions. The home Club was represented by no less than 15 rinks. Grand Valley sent down five and Bolton, Mount Forest, Fergus, Shelburne and Owen Sound three rinks each. The other clubs represented were Arthur, two; Erin, two; Markdale, two, and Harriston, Comestogo, Parkdale, Elora, Southampton, Tilsonburg and Paisley. The greens were in fine shape, excellent playing was the order of the Tournament and the games were nearly all closely contested. Kearns, of Arthur, and McGuire, of Tilsonburg, were the contenders in the trophy final, which was played Wednesday evening in the presence of a large gallery. The players in the two rinks were, Tilsonburg—Rev. J. J. Brown, C. E. Rennie, A. M. Hare, Wm. McGuire, skip. Arthur—B. F. Houston, E. E. Snyder, Ed. Brocklebank, J. M. Kearns, skip. Both rinks played excellent bowls, and it was anybody's game until the last bowl was played. The Kearns quartette managed to win by a score of 15 to 12 and therefore achieved the distinction of being the first winners of the McKeown trophy, the handsome prize donated by Mr. C. B. McKeown, M.P.P. for Dufferin. The skip of the winning rink, Mr. J. M. Kearns, is an old Orangeville boy, being a son of Mrs. John Kearns, First St. It is interesting to note that Mr. McGuire, of the Tilsonburg rink, is also a native of Orangeville, being a brother of Alderman B. McGuire. Mr. Kearns is a barrister in Arthur and Mr. McGuire is Postmaster of Tilsonburg. At the conclusion of the game the prizes were presented by Mr. McKeown. With the trophy the winners got four beautiful cut glass sets while the runners up received four handsome steamer rugs. At time of going to press Wright, of Owen Sound, Skales, of Mount Forest, and Mills, of Parkdale, are still in the Association. Mills got a bye into the final and Skales and Wright are playing the semi-final. The Consolation is also in full swing and will be concluded late to-day. A detailed report of the results will be given in next week's issue.

At the Ranges.

A great deal of interest is being taken by the local rifle shooters in the annual competitions for the Dominion of Canada Salver, and other prizes, with the result that quite a number of new members have been enrolled in the Orangeville Rifle Association, bringing the total membership up to about 40. The Ross Rifle is used at the butts and the gun seems to be a favorite with the crack shots. The Rifle Associations all over the Dominion are doing good work in teaching young men of Canada to shoot, a necessary adjunct to the knowledge of every able-bodied Canadian, especially at the present time of war and invasions. That some crack shots are in the making will be seen by the following scores, the ranges being 200, 500 and 600 yards, 7 shots at each range, with a possible total score of 105. The best four scores of each day's shooting are given.

Wednesday, July 29th—A. Firth, 88; D. McCallum, 74; J. Robertson, 74; A. Tyner, 70.
Wednesday, Aug. 5th—A. Firth, 88; J. E. Dyer, 85; J. Robertson, 62; Dr. G. H. Campbell, 62.
Wednesday, Aug. 12th.—A. Firth, 98; J. E. Dyer, 81; L. T. Kellie, 80; J. Robertson, 75.

The final match will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 26th. Practices are also held on Saturday afternoons. Lt. Col. J. A. V. Preston is captain of the local Association, and Mr. A. Firth, secretary.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Rev. G. A. Rix Relates Experiences on Trip to Portland Canal.

Prince Rupert, B. C.
July 18th, 1914.

Editor, The Banner:

With about one hundred and fifty Prince Rupert citizens, it was my good fortune to take a trip up the North Coast this week in one of the G. T. R. palatial steamers. We were a day and a half on the journey and were well repaid for the time and money spent. It may be of some interest to your Orangeville readers to hear something of what was seen.

The trip was under the auspices of the Prince Rupert Board of Trade, and everything was done to make the journey enjoyable and instructive.

The boat itself was most luxurious and everything was on a scale to ensure every possible comfort to the passengers. The Board of Trade had arranged for the entertainment of those on board by a whist tournament, a fine concert, and there was of course the usual shuffle board contests on the upper deck. The party was one of the most orderly I ever saw, not more than half a dozen men took a little too much fire water, and at the concert, when I was called upon for an address, I excused these few delinquents by saying that they had no doubt feared that the weather was going to be rough, and had heard that a cocktail was the best cure for seasickness, for it tasted as good coming up as it did going down. The Board of Trade held a banquet on board the boat, at which Mr. McGaffrey, the new Secretary of the Provincial Government's Publicity Department, gave an address, which made us all think we lived in the coming pivotal province of the Dominion.

The first place visited was Granby. This was an eye-opener. The reason of the place is a large copper deposit, and a wealthy corporation has undertaken the development work. We went through what seemed to be miles of tunnels and only touched about a quarter of what is worked. There is literally a mountain of the ore. The climb to get to the main entrance of the mine was a strenuous one of about 100 feet. The ladies were taken up in a small tram, drawn up the steep incline by a cable, but it was such a nerve wracking experience, that many of them preferred to walk down. It was certainly a weird sight to see crowds of sightseers wending their way through the mine tunnels each carrying a blinking candle. But it's a dirty experience, for what with the muddy floors, the dripping water, and the falling wax from the candles, the party came out a somewhat soiled procession of humanity. The mines are a couple of miles from the dock and we were taken out to them on flat cars upon which had been built seats for the whole party. The town of Granby with the huge smelter is built right around the dock. The smelter was a most interesting place, where one can see the ore in the rough going in and coming out pure molten copper. It is made into 350 lb. blocks and shipped to New York to be refined. There is a small amount of gold—one dollar to the ton of ore—obtained, which goes to help out in the profits to the extent of $2000 per day, for that is the number of tons of ore reduced every day.

There are fully 1000 men working for this company and they, with their families, have to be provided for, so the company has had to build a town, which they have done in the most complete way. Exceedingly neat houses have been built, from three rooms up to six, which they rent to their employees at the rate of $5 per room, supplying electric light, water, bath and sewage in every house. They own everything in the town, the store, the hotel, large boarding houses and a hospital. The only things they have not built are two churches—the Roman Catholic and the Church of England. The latter is just about completed, and will be a very good building indeed. Granby is one of the places which is looked after from a Church of England point of view by the Rev. W. F. Rushbrook, who is well known around Orangeville. He, so far, has been paying it a monthly visit, but upon the completion of the church there will have to be a permanent man appointed as soon as possible.

Our next point of call was the town of Stewart, which lies at the head of the Portland Canal, which is one of those wonderful arms of the sea which extend for as much as forty and fifty and one hundred miles into the mainland. They are usually about a half mile or a mile wide and with water twenty or more fathoms deep, the largest vessels being able to sail up to their very end. Rising up on each side of the narrow reach of ocean are huge and picturesque mountains, snow capped and with here and there great glaciers, which are creeping down the sides and being melted as they near the lower parts.

Up the Portland Canal furnishes one of the most beautiful sails it is possible to imagine with British Columbia on one side of the ship and Alaska on the other. The dock at which we landed is equally distant from a village of a few houses called Portland City in Alaska, and Stewart in British Columbia. We chose to visit the Canadian town, and found it to be a good type of the deserted village. House after house and store after store are empty. Stewart is the place which a few years ago was advertised in the English papers as having five miles of solid gold mountains and Englishmen with the English money came teaming in and a town sprang up like magic. Mining schemes were projected and soon the bitter truth was discovered, that there was mineral all right, but in limited quantities and of such a kind as to require large capital to develop. There is a little mining of silver lead being carried on now about 14 miles inland from Stewart in the Nass Valley. Mrs. Rix and myself with some friends had the pleasure of driving up this valley for about three miles. This is the land of the brown bear and the mountain goat. We saw a tamed mountain goat in Stewart, while there.

We left this most northern Canadian coast town with its beautiful situation and many natural advantages, feeling that some day it will be an important seaport. When Sir Donald Mann gets Canadian Northern troubles off his hands, he may find time and capital to complete a railway, of which he was already built fourteen miles, to the Groundhog coal fields, where it is said good anthracite coal is found and which, if as good coal and in as large quantities as it is said to be, will do more for Stewart than the mythical mountain of gold which first brought it into being.

The return trip to Rupert was made during the night, arriving home at 6.30 a.m. after a good night's rest in the comfortable beds of the ship's staterooms.

It gives us great pleasure to read the Orangeville news in the home town papers and to find that progress is being made in many lines. With best wishes to Orangeville and old friends there,

I am
Yours Truly,
G. A. RIX.

William Mandley, Sr.

William Mandley sr., lot 25, con. 4, Amaranth township, an old and respected resident of this county, died on Tuesday, July 28th, in his 76th year. Deceased was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, and when he was six years old came to Canada with his parents. They first resided in Erin township and afterwards moved to near Fraxa Junction. Deceased married Elizabeth Carleton, of Amaranth, who survives him, along with four sons and three daughters, Wm. J., Shelburne; Jos. W., Toronto; Ed. G., Shelburne; Alfred, Toronto; Mrs. Geo. Budd, Amaranth; Mrs. Wm. Grenner, Toronto; Mrs. Wm. Stoddart, Melancthon.

Hospital Ship Fund.

The women of Orangeville and surrounding country are earnestly requested to attend a meeting in the Auditorium of the Public Library, on Friday evening, Aug. 14th, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing to raise funds towards the Hospital Ship, which is being equipped by the women of Canada. Let every true Canadian feel the urgency of this appeal. The men are doing their part. Let the women do theirs.

Lacrosse.

Orangeville and Wingham, having tied in their district, have been ordered by the O.A.L.A. to play off at Fergus next Wednesday, Aug. 19th. The Dufferins after their fine performance last week think they can repeat the trick at Fergus. The management is arranging for a special train, leaving here at 1 o'clock, and expect a large number of supporters. This should be a good opportunity for the people of the town to have an afternoon's fun and incidentally see the sights of Fergus.

Hospital Notes

The verandah has been pulled down and the lumber which is in good condition will be sold to the highest bidder.

Miss Barclay, the Superintendent, is taking a well-earned holiday and a graduate nurse from the Royal Alexandra Hospital is in charge.

The Turner Re-Union.

About the year 1835, Anthony Turner, then a young man, emigrated from Cumberlandshire, England, to Canada. Some years after that he married Margaret Galbraith, who had also previously come from England. They took up a homestead on the 11th line of East Garafraxa. A few years later his brother, Joseph, and his wife, came from England, and took up an adjoining farm.

There were born to Anthony Turner and wife thirteen children, eleven of whom grew to manhood and womanhood, and eight of whom are still living. To Joseph and wife 12 children were born, ten of whom are still living.

A large number of the descendants of these two families met at Stanley Park, Erin, on Saturday, July 25th. The day was an ideal one in every sense, and by noon quite a gathering sat down to well filled tables, and at the tea hour some 112 were registered as present. All of these except perhaps a dozen, were near or distantly related. Letters of regret from others who were unable to be present were received from Texas and many other places. Among those present were:—Mr. and Mrs. Thos. A. Turner, Arden, Manitoba; Mr. Joseph Turner, wife and family, Orton, (and still on the Anthony Turner homestead); Mr. John J. Turner, wife and family, of Mono; Mr. Hugh Turner, wife and family, and Mr. Hubert Atcheson, wife and family, Guelph; Mr. Wilfred Turner, wife and boy, Mr. Norman Turner, wife and family, Hillsburg; Mr. Clarence Turner, wife and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Currie, Milbon; Herbert Galbraith, wife and family, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bates, and family, Grand Valley; Norman Everson, wife and boy, Marsville; George Bryan, wife and family, Hillsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Nevills and Miss Margaret, Erin; Mr. and Mrs. W. Atchison, Mrs. Sherwood and daughter, Erin; Rev. and Mrs. J. Melvin Smith and daughter, Marguerite, Erin; Mr. Jas. Nevills, jr., and wife, Erin; Mr. and Mrs. B. Parr, Terra Cotta; Mr. and Mrs. Davidson and family, Terra Cotta; Mrs. Lillico and family, Guelph. These were all connections, who, with a few intimate friends made up the company. Only a few faces were missed since the last re-union, and these are they who greet us no more in this world. After a pleasant day spent in renewing old acquaintances, and the young people with boating, swinging and the merry-go-round, the company scattered for trains, motor cars and carriages, after singing "God be with you till we meet again."—Star & Vidette.

Death of a Mono Pioneer.

In the passing of Mrs. Geo. Parker, sr., at Sheldon, on Saturday, July 25th, Mono loses one of its oldest and most respected citizens. Though Mrs. Parker was eighty years of age and had been an invalid and confined to her bed for the past three years the end came unexpectedly. Harriet Waite was born in Lincolnshire, England, in 1834, and came to Canada with her parents when eleven years of age. They settled in Brampton, where in 1853 she was married to Geo. Parker. Fifty-five years ago, when this country was but sparsely settled, Mr. and Mrs. Parker moved to Sheldon to take charge of the Sheldon Mills, which Mr. Parker afterwards purchased. In those early days when the mode of travel was mainly by ox cart and settlers had to travel long distances to the mill the Parker home was a centre of hospitality known far and wide throughout this country. Since Mr. Parker's death eighteen years ago Mrs. Parker has lived almost continuously with her son, John, at Sheldon, where, during the past three years, she has been tenderly cared for by her youngest daughter, Mrs. Webster. Mrs. Parker was a life-long Methodist, having united with the church in Brampton in her fifteenth year. Since coming to Mono fifty-five years ago she has been a member of Wesley and Rosemont Methodist churches. Mrs. Parker was the mother of thirteen children, ten of whom survive her, Mrs. Murray, of Mono Mills, Mrs. Penelton, of Virginia, Mrs. Firth and Charlie in Adjala, George and William in Allieton, James in Mono, Mrs. Gallaugher, of Everett, John and Mrs. Webster in Sheldon. Mrs. Wilson, of Hockley, predeceased her mother by three years. She had forty grandchildren and twenty-five great grandchildren. Three sisters, Mrs. Scott, of Brampton, Mrs. Penelton, of Mono, and Mrs. Wilson, of Toronto, also survive. The funeral service, held in the old Wesley Church, was attended by a great many friends and over seventy relatives of deceased, including all the sons and daughters, with the exception of Mrs. Penelton, of Virginia. Six grandsons acted as pallbearers. There were many floral offerings as a tribute to the memory of the deceased. The service was conducted by the pastor Rev. J. W. Dadgeon, and the remains were laid by the side of the deceased lady's husband in the Wesley cemetery.—Alliston Herald.

GRADUATION EXERCISES.

Eight Nurses Get Diplomas—Large Crowds Witness Event.

The annual graduation exercises in connection with the Royal Alexandra Hospital were held in the Opera House on Thursday evening, July 16th. when eight graduating nurses received their diplomas. The night was very warm, but the building was packed with people. The platform was banked with flowers, ferns, roses, lilies and carnations. Dr. J. B. Mullen, of Elora, president of the board of directors, occupied the chair, and in his opening address congratulated Dr. Groves and the community on the doctor's splendid recovery from his recent very severe illness, which all but ended fatally. On the platform were seated the staff of nurses from the hospital, and the lady superintendent. Miss O. Griffin, the graduates in white, carrying flowers presented by Dr. Groves, and the others in their uniforms of blue and white.

The orchestra rendered several fine selections. Miss Jessie Norris and Miss Ruby Sargent sang beautiful solos, Mrs. W. G. Beatty and Mr. J. H. Stevenson sang well together in a duet, Miss Dorothy Beatty gave the scene from Materlinlinck's "Blue Bird," by special request, and short speeches were heard from Rev. Messrs. Smith and Craw and Dr. Groves. The address to the nurses was delivered by Ven. Archdeacon Davidson, of Guelph, who gave the nurses some good advice, interspersed with some flashes of humor.

The nurses who graduated this year are Bessie W. Burgess, Hanover; Ida S. Ewing, Leith; Violet M. Cluff, Seaforth; Frances M. Cooper, Harriston, Ethel M. McKenzie, Harriston; Eliza E. Foster, Fordwich; Elizabeth M. Anderson, Lucknow, and Mabel S. Grant, Harriston. Miss Burgess read the valedictory essay, which was as follows :—

When we entered here as probationers three years ago, the way seemed long indeed, but now that it is over it appears to have been too short for the work there was to do in order to become competent nurses.

We found, as all will who desire success, that the road thereto is not easy or the task light, but like every other thing that is worth while it means hard work.

When the class of 1914 started we numbered eleven, but three dropped out for various reasons, so that eight remain to graduate to-night.

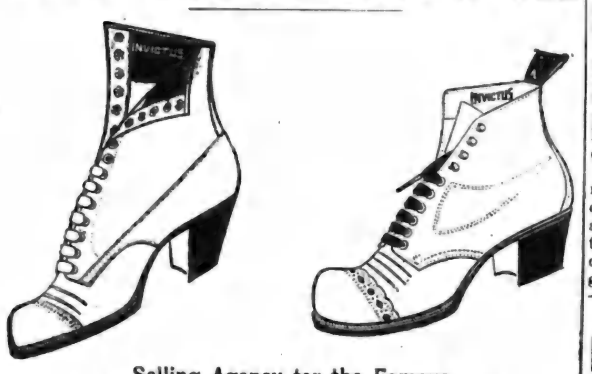
Permit me, in the name of the graduating class, to you—the hospital staff and fellow nurses—a few words of farewell.

To the medical superintendent, Dr. Groves, allow me to address the first regretful good-bye. To you we owe a debt of gratitude which words cannot fitly express, not only for your labors in our behalf, to render us efficient for the duties which in future shall devolve upon us, but also for the kind and fatherly interest which you have always manifested towards us. In leaving the hospital we all unite in wishing you the same success in the future as you have had in the past, and trust you may be spared many years to continue your good work here.

To our lady superintendent, Miss Griffin, I express the highest regard of the entire class. Upon you has devolved the arduous task of our training. Your classes have not only been instructive, but interesting as well. Our wish as we part from you is that each succeeding class may benefit by your instructions as we have done.

To the remaining members of the medical staff we wish to express our gratitude and thanks for the practical and instructive lectures which were always of such a nature as to make us feel desirous of a more intimate knowledge of the subject.

And now comes the sorrowful task of saying farewell to those who have been more closely associated with us—our fellow nurses. As we are here to-day in due time you will be. Let us leave the school impressed with the great responsibilities attached to our work and the many opportunities which, if we do our duty, will, without doubt, open before us.



Let us do our utmost to reflect credit upon the school in which we have received our training by being earnest and faithful in our duties keeping in subjection any unworthy motives, and bringing into our work the determination to succeed and attain the highest efficiency in our profession, always remembering there is no royal road to success, and that our ideal can only be realized by hard work, conscientiously and faithfully performed.

After the nurses had risen and repeated the Hippocratic Oath, Dr. Groves presented them with their diplomas, tied with the hospital colors, purple and gold, and Mrs. C. K. McGregor pinned on each the class pin.

The good wishes of this community go with the nurses as they enter upon their chosen profession, and whether they "marry the doctors," as Mr. Mullan said they so often do, or not, we know they will give a good account of themselves. —Fergus News-Record.

DON'T GROW BALD

Use Parisian Sage

If your hair is getting thin, losing its natural color, or has that matted, lifeless and scraggy appearance, the reason is evident—dandruff and failure to keep the hair roots properly nourished.

Parisian Sage applied daily for a week and then occasionally is all that is needed. It removes dandruff with one application; almost immediately stops falling hair and itching head; invigorates the scalp and makes dull, stringy hair, soft, abundant and radiant with life. Equally good for men, women or children—every one needs it.

A large bottle of this delightful hair tonic can be had from F. S. Pickering or any drug counter for 50 cents. You will surely like Parisian Sage. There is no other "Just-as good."—Try it now.

CANADA'S RESOURCES

See Show in the Government Building at Canadian National Exhibition

The display of Canada's natural resources in the Government Building at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, is the most complete ever got together. The Dominion Government is sending a complete exhibit of the fish that swim in the Atlantic, the Pacific and the streams that flow between. Ontario is showing her grains, her fruits and her minerals; British Columbia is sending her timber, her fruit and her grains; the Premier Provinces are showing their grains and the Maritime Provinces their minerals. If you are a Canadian the display will make you proud. If you are a visitor it will interest and amaze you.

Skin Trouble on the Scalp

Skin Dried and Cracked and Hair Fell Out—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Eczema is annoying and distressing at any time, but doubly so when it gets into the scalp and causes the hair to fall out. Here is a grateful letter from a lady who was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hector Currie, Tobermory, Ont., writes:—"I was cured of a disagreeable skin disease of the scalp by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. The trouble started with itching and pain in the scalp, the skin would get dry and crack, and at times would bleed, and the hair would fall out. I tried three doctors without benefit, and suffered for three years. Reading in the almanac about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I began its use, and am now completely cured. The hair has grown again, and I am as well as I ever was. You are at liberty to use this letter, for I am glad to recommend so excellent a treatment."

Dr. Chase's Ointment has no rival as a cure for itching skin disease.

ELECTRICITY.

And the Terms Energy, Pressure, Intensity and Quantity.

What is electricity?

The question was put directly to Dr. Charles Proteus Steinmetz, the famous expert, in the hope that he—than whom no one knows more about it—might be able if not to tell what it is at least to give a definite idea of what it may be. Dr. Steinmetz replied:

"Electricity is a loose term, used miscellaneously in referring to all matters electrical.

"To give it definite meaning one must know whether reference is made to electrical energy, electrical pressure, electrical intensity or electrical quantity.

"Electrical quantity (represented in the electrical current) is generally assumed by scientists to be a substance with atomical structure, the unit of which is the electron.

"Electrical pressure is meant in referring to the voltage. Electrical intensity is the voltage per unit lengths.

"Magnetism is a similar term, which does not mean anything to the scientist. Two pieces of steel may have exactly the same structure as far as science can determine, and yet one may contain magnetic quantity and the other be without it, or the two may contain the same amount of magnetic quantity and have different magnetic intensity. Quantity times intensity equals energy.

"There may be the same quantity of water in two pipes and different pressure, or there may be the same pressure and different quantity. If water, the liquid, water pressure and water power were all loosely called water we should have the same confusion that the words electricity and magnetism suggest to the scientist."

"Is there such a thing as electricity?" he was asked.

"I cannot state positively that electrical quantity is a substance," Dr. Steinmetz replied, "or that there is such an atom as the electron. I say simply that this is the most commonly accepted theory."

POE AND "THE RAVEN."

His Comment on the Tinkling Footfalls and the Bird's Shadow.

In a letter written on Dec. 15, 1846, to G. W. Evelett of Phillips, Me., Edgar Allan Poe, in commenting on his famous poem, "The Raven," said:

"For the purpose of poetry it is quite sufficient that a thing is possible, or at least that the improbability be not offensively glaring. It is true that in several ways, as you say, the lamp might have thrown the bird's shadow on the floor. My conception was that of the bracket candelabrum affixed against the walls, high up above the door and bust, as is often seen in the English palaces and even in some of the better houses in New York.

"Your objection to the tinkling of the footfalls is far more pointed and in the course of composition occurred so forcibly to myself that I hesitated to use the term. I finally used it, because I saw that it had, in its first conception, been suggested to my mind by the sense of the supernatural with which it was at the moment filled. No human or physical foot could tinkle on a soft carpet—therefore the tinkling of feet would vividly convey the supernatural impression.

"Your appreciation of 'The Sleeper' delights me. In higher qualities of poetry it is better than 'The Raven,' but there is not one man in a million who could be brought to agree with me in this opinion. 'The Raven,' of course, is far the better as a work of art—but in the true basis of all art 'The Sleeper' is the superior. I wrote the latter when quite a boy."

The Book of the Dead.

The ancient Egyptian "The Book of the Dead" is probably unique among books, inasmuch that it was intended for use not in this world, but in the next. It consists of a collection of prayers and exorcisms composed of various periods for recitation by the soul during its passage through hades and was indeed regarded as a safe conduct through that region. For this reason the Egyptians, who themselves entitled it Per-em-hrs, "to go forth from day," buried a copy of the work, or portions of it, with their dead.—West minster Gazette.

Test For Silk.

If silk splits or cracks it is a sign that its fabric has been weighted. There is a simple and a sure test by which the quality of the material may be determined. A bit of the silk and a match are all you need. Light the match and apply it to the fabric. If it holds its shape the silk is adulterated with some of the various minerals so used. If it runs together in a puffy mass the silk is pure.

A Fond Mother.

Called to the bedside of a fond mother's baby boy, the doctor diagnosed the ailment as acute rheumatism. The mother responded quickly:

"Acute rheumatism. I might have known it; everything he does or says is just as cute!"

Breaking It Gently.

Little Floyd—Why don't you kill that old hen, Mr. Neighbors? Mr. Neighbors—What old hen do you mean, my boy? Little Floyd—The one that picks you all the time. I heard mother say you had been henpecked ever since you got married.

Forewarned.

Caller—Will you see if your sister is in? Susie—Yes, sir, but I don't think she will be. She saw you coming up the steps.—Albany Journal.

A Washington Farmer's Good Roads Endorsement

MR. FRANK TERRACE, ADDRESSING THE Good Roads Convention at Tacoma, Washington, gave the following enthusiastic testimony in favor of good roads:

"I am a cabbage grower. I haul my produce to the sauerkraut factory at South Seattle. Before the road over which I travel was built, I had to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning to start on my journey. The limit of the load I could haul with a team of 1800 pound horses was 2500 pounds, and after visiting the factory I would arrive back at my home late in the evening. But look at the difference now that a permanent hard surface has been laid down. I start on my trip about 8 o'clock and need only a team weighing 1400 pounds to haul a load of 5000 pounds of cabbage, which is double my previous capacity. And, best of all, I find on my return to the house early in the afternoon, that I have finished the day's work without the horses having turned a hair."

Concrete Roads Mean Road Economy

They prevent your road taxes being spent in patching up roads that never will be good roads.

They are the cheapest kind of roads at the end of ten, fifteen or twenty years because they practically eliminate the cost of upkeep. They enable you to haul bigger loads with less effort and less wear and tear on horses and vehicles. They increase land values, better conditions generally, and decrease the cost of living.

Write for, free, Good Roads literature, and learn how good roads will benefit you.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

MODERN DIPLOMACY OR HOW THE WAR STARTED.

Said Austria—"You murderous Serb,
You the peace of all Europe disturb;
Get down on your knees,
And apologize, please,
Or I'll kick you right off my front carb."

Said Servia—"Don't venture too far,
Or I'll call in my uncle, the Czar;
He won't see me licked,
Nor insulted nor kicked,
So you'd better leave things as they are."

Said the Kaiser "Push in that Serb's face,
It will teach him to stay in his place;
If Russia says boo,
I'm in the game too,
And right quickly we'll settle the case."

The Czar said "My cousin the Kaiser
Was always a good advertiser;
He's determined to fight,
And insists he is right,
But soon he'll be older and wiser."

"For forty-four summers," said France,
"I have waited and watched for a chance,
To wrest Alsace-Lorraine
From the Germans again,
And now is the time to advance."

Said Belgium "When armies immense
Pour over my boundary fence,
I'll awake from my nap,
And put up a scrap
They'll remember a hundred years hence."

Said John Bull "This 'ere Kaiser's a slob,
And 'is word isn't worth 'arf a bob,
(If I lets Belgium suffer,
I'm a blank bloomin' duffer)
So 'ere goes for a crack at 'is nob."

Said Italy "I think I'll stay out
Till I know what the row is about;
Its a far better plan
Just to sell my banan',
Till the issue is plain beyond doubt."

Said our good Uncle Sam "I swasow
I had better keep aout of this rnow,
For with Mormons and Niggers,
And Greasers, I figgers,
I have all I kin handle just now."

A severe hail-storm passed over a part of Bentinck township a week ago Monday, doing considerable damage. Mr. James Turnbull, about a mile and a half north of Vickers, had six large panes of glass broken by the heavy hail stones, which came down with terrific force and lay quite thick on the ground.

Inspector Beckett was at Meaford recently prosecuting a charge against the Reinhardt Brewing Co., of Toronto, of soliciting orders through an agent in a local option municipality. Mr. John Birnie, of Collingwood, appeared for the defendants, who were found guilty and ordered to pay a fine of $200.00 and costs.

A teachers' meeting was in progress, and it was decided that the more difficult subjects should come in the morning, and those that required less application later in the day. History was last on the list, and Miss Wheeler, the young teacher, protested.

"But it certainly is easier than science or mathematics," the principal insisted.

"As I teach it," replied the young teacher, "no subject could be more difficult and confusing."

FRIDAY SUPERSTITIONS.

In olden times it was not a proper occasion either in England or Holland to engage a new servant, nor would any servant go to service in a new place, on Friday.

Portuguese sailors have a custom of dressing their ships in mourning on this day and of scourging and hanging an effigy of Judas at the yardarm.

The Talmud tells that Adam was created, sinned and was chased from paradise on Friday. Mohammed, to prove his prophetic powers, declared the same.

It has been claimed as a lucky day for America. Columbus discovered land on that day, and Washington was born on Friday.

Many persons reverse the rule and declare that this is to them a lucky day. Dickens said that it was fortunate for his undertakings, most of which were successful when begun or ended on Friday.

WHEN SHE WOULD RETURN.

"I saw your mother going to one of the neighbors as I crossed the street," said the lady caller to her friend's little son. Do you know when she will be back?"

"Yes, 'm," answered the truthful Jimmy; "she said she'd be back just as soon as you left."

Neil Campbell, a former resident of Caledon, died at his home at Mosark, Sask., on August 4th. The body was brought to Mono Road station and interred at the Stone Church cemetery, Caledon.

Master Johnnie Arnold, of Dundalk, received a severe kick from a young colt a couple of weeks ago. The sharp hoof cut quite deeply from the upper part of the nose over the eyebrow and Dr. McWilliams had to put in several stitches to close the wound.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, AUG. 20th, 1914

ONE MAN'S CRIME.

It is a terrible thing that one man should have it in his power to plunge nearly the whole civilized world in a war such as that which is now raging in Europe.

If Emperor William had died a month ago the peasants of Europe would now be reaping their harvest. There would be hope and happiness in a million homes where fear prevails to-day and misery will come to-morrow. For it is not only the hundreds of thousands of men who will be killed, but the millions depending upon them, and who love them, and whose lives will be darkened by their death, that must be taken into the awful account.

We venture to say that the German people do not want war. The men who fill the ranks never want war. If it had been possible to submit the question to the German people, or if free institutions had existed in Germany, the nation would not have spent the hundreds of millions of dollars which were taken from profitable industry to create the great war machine of the Empire. But the diplomacy of the nation would have been directed towards assuring prolonged peace.

Surely the time has come at last when the power will be taken out of the hands of any one man to launch such an avalanche of misery and suffering, of death and disease, as seems inevitable throughout Europe. It is an awful thing, however, that such slaughter should be necessary to put an end to German autocracy. But as the die has been cast there seems no other way. And for the unparalleled crime of which the German Kaiser has been guilty, he should meet the same fate as the man who a hundred years ago was filled with the same insane ambition to rule the whole world.

It was ninety-nine years ago that the Battle of Waterloo was fought and Napoleon exiled to the Island of St. Helena. The Sentinel trusts that the same fate is in store for Emperor William, who has shown himself to be careless of the happiness and safety of his people, and has allowed his insatiable ambition to control him, though it cost the lives of a million people. Civilization stands aghast to-day at the awfulness of the conflict which he deliberately precipitated.—Orange Sentinel.

Talk Up Your Town.

If you live in a town you should believe in it. If you don't believe in your town, you should move out of it. Like other places it has advantages that other places have not, and modesty should not prevent you from making the fact known whenever the opportunity presents itself. At home or abroad, whether pursuing pleasure or engaged in business, do not neglect to give those with whom you come in contact to understand that you live in a live town, populated by enterprising go-ahead, progressive people and one that is advancing instead of retrograding.

If you can truthfully speak in commendation of the ability of your professional men, the square dealing methods of your merchants, the excellence of your mechanics, the superiority of your churches, schools and public institutions, and the industry, energy and sobriety of your citizens generally, let nothing prevent you from exercising that privilege. You should learn to believe, if you do not already, that we have all these and in addition, the best located town, the finest country surrounding it, with the most fertile farms tilled by the most intelligent class of farmers to be found in Canada.

If there are any drawbacks it will not be necessary to mention them. The people and newspapers of the competing towns will relieve you of that task by attending to that part of it themselves.

Strangers seeking a location are always greatly influenced in favor of any place whose citizens are enthusiastic in its praise. No city or town can expect to attain prominence over its rivals unless its inhabitants appreciate the excellence and virtues of each other and will collectively spread abroad their faith in the present prosperity and future greatness of their own locality. Talk is cheap commodity, but when rightly utilized it can be made effective in many directions and this is one of them.

Verdict of Suicide.

After hearing some unimportant evidence on Monday night the Coroner's jury, in the case of the death of Lewis W. May, brought in the following verdict :—

"We find that the deceased, Lewis Wallace May, came to his death on Wednesday morning, August 12th, 1914. Death was caused by dislocation of the neck. The evidence points to suicide by the deceased by hanging from a tree by means of a coil of wire affixed by himself while laboring under a state of temporary insanity. We find no evidence indicating foul play."

James R. Barnhart, eldest son of the late S. J. Barnhart, owner of the first Streetsville Review, died at Kamloops, B. C., last month. Deceased was born in Streetsville in August, 1857. He leaves one son and one daughter. He at one time was paymaster on the old Credit Valley Railway, and lived in Toronto a number of years before going West.

THE INVISIBLE FOE

Silent, Deadly Submarines Constitute Greatest Danger in Naval Warfare

Unlike the dirigible or aeroplane, the submarine is invisible. Its periscope or "eye" is so minute an object and is above the water so seldom that the detection and forestalling of a submarine attack is practically impossible. In night attacks, such as may take place when harbors are blockaded, a fleet must keep moving perpetually, and then it is not safe. The submarine, being invisible, can lie in the track of the battleships and deal its death blow as they pass. The strongest searchlights cannot pick submarines up, except when they are running on the surface, and then it is no easy thing to do.

That the submarines are as deadly to themselves as to the enemy is the view accepted by those who serve on them. Leaving out all accidents, it is safe to say that the shock of the submarine's torpedo exploding against the side of a Dreadnought will be, in many cases, sufficient to cave in the sides of the submarine and cause its loss and the death of its crew. A recent test at Portsmouth, showed that 30 pounds of gun-cotton exploded under water had sufficient force to destroy a submarine within a radius of 100 feet. All defence against submarines is based on a knowledge of their position, either exact or superficial. The Orling-Armstrong torpedo as used by the British navy can be controlled and exploded by wireless. One plan is to direct a number of torpedoes of this type to a spot where a submarine is suspected and explode them when they are near the spot. This is the same idea as the man who takes a ten-bore gun and goes after deer with buckshot. Ninety per cent. of his shot miss, but the others do the work.

It is generally accepted that a submarine detected is a submarine destroyed, and several ingenious plans have been evolved to do away with it. In Portsmouth a short time ago extensive experiments were made with "spar-torpedoes." These are explosives on the end of a long spar, and are carried over the bow of a 30-knot destroyer. The tests were made with a large barrel, to which was fixed a periscope. The barrel was sunk so that just the "eye" would show as the waves washed over it. A destroyer, the Starfish, was sent after it, and on the first trial blew the barrel to atoms.

Dragnets have been tried with success. Destroyers with these great nets between them have been able to catch the submarines, but in several of the tests the destroyers have been technically destroyed by a torpedo from the submarine. Of course, the submarine would have been destroyed itself, but the naval advantage lay with the submarine.

Taking all things into consideration, it is safe to say that there is no defence against the submarine unless it is detected, and as it can remain under water from 20 to 24 hours and has a cruising radius of more than 30 miles, it is very hard to discover.

England has by far the greatest number of submarines, and it is conceded that they are more highly developed than those of the other nations. Her submarine corps has had much experience and is most efficient. There are now about 75 submarines fit for active service in the British navy. Many of these can be carried on the deck of a Dreadnought and slipped into the water just before a battle or an attack on a blockading fleet. Germany has 27 submarines, France 55, Russia 14, Austria 6, and the other European nations have about 30 between them.

Queen a Prussian Colonel

One of the curious touches of the present war, which involves so many royal relations throughout Europe, is the fact that Queen Alexandra is an Honorary Colonel of the Prussian Royal Dragoons. Her portrait hangs in the regiment's messroom and her health has been drunk by the officers after that of the Kaiser and the Kaiserin. Queen Mary is also an honorary German Colonel-in-Chief, and is said to look very well in the gorgeous shako and jacket of the 5th Regiment of Prussian Hussars. It is safe to say that little thought was given to these Royal ladies when their regiments honored the toast to "Der Tag," the day when William might strike at that Empire whose strength, "broad-based upon the people's will," has roused his insane jealousy.

Sulphur in Gunpowder

Sicily furnishes 85 per cent. of the sulphur product of the world. This constitutes one of the chief sources of revenue for Italy. Sulphur is used in the manufacture of gunpowder and high explosives.

WELL-EQUIPPED FORCE IS THE SERVIAN ARMY

Little Country Has About the Same Population as Canada But Every Man Must Carry Arms

Under the defence law of Servia, service in the army of that country is for twenty-four years, namely, ten years in the first category or active army, seven years in the second category or reserve army, and seven years in the third category or garrison army. The active army is the Regular Army, in which color service lasts for two years, followed by eight years in the reserve of the active army; this army has "cadres" with a reasonably strong peace establishment, like other regular armies. The reserve army has virtually no peace establishment. The garrison army likewise has no peace establishment, and it is only formed in time of war.

Servia, as it existed before the recent extension, is divided into five divisional districts, each producing one division of the active army and one division of the reserve army;; the divisional headquarters are respectively at Belgrade, Valjevo, Kragujevats, Zajecar, and Nish. An active division on a war footing consists of sixteen battalions, four machine gun companies, a cavalry regiment of four squadrons, and nine field batteries, besides engineers and departmental corps. The active army further includes a cavalry division of sixteen squadrons and two horse artillery batteries; it also includes six field howitzer batteries and nine mountain batteries, besides garrison artillery, railway troops, and so forth. Each of the five divisions of the reserve squadrons, and nine field batteries; the reserve army also includes seven mountain batteries, and possibly some field howitzer batteries. Adding in certain reserve units, not directly available as portion of the field army, the active and reserve armies on a war footing consist altogether of 186 battalions, 47 squadrons, and 122 horse, field, mountain, and howitzer batteries, making up, with engineers, garrison artillery, and departmental troops, a total of about 230,000 men. The garrison army would probably represent about 60,000 more.

The newly-acquired territory has been divided up into five divisional districts with their headquarters at Uskub, Novibazar, Pristina, Istip, and Monastir.

The Servian infantry is armed with the Mauser, the huge captures from the Turks having probably provided enough to arm all the troops available. The batteries mostly have the Schneider Canet gun, but it seems likely that some of the batteries of the reserve would be armed with Krupps captured from the Ottoman forces; they had older guns in 1912. The field howitzers are quite up-to-date, at least in the active army. As far as weapons are concerned the Servian military forces are in fact in a very efficient condition.

UNNECESSARY TO KILL

In Modern Warfare an Opponent Need Only be "Stopped"

In theory, there is no particular need to kill anybody in war; it is only necessary to stop a foeman from reaching a certain point, but he must be stopped; and ever since war began killing has been incidental to the stopping.

The latest type of bullet is constructed on a principle which gives it a pronounced tendency to turn immediately after impact, thus plowing its way sideways through its living target and inflicting a terrible wound.

The rifle of to-day is capable of delivering 28 rounds of aimed fire in a minute. Years ago, an infantryman had to aim at a point twice the height of a man above his body. Now the trajectory of a magazine rifle is so flat that, with the latest type of bullet up to 600 yards' range, there is not enough curve to render any alteration in the back sight necessary.

The modern bullet is a compound, consisting of a core and two parts—the front portion being an alloy of aluminum 90 per cent., zinc 10 per cent., and the rear portion being an alloy of 90 per cent., lead and 10 per cent. antimony.

The bullet is enclosed in an envelope of 80 per cent. copper and 20 per cent. nickel. As many as 6,000 bullets of this type can be fired from a service rifle without wearing the weapon out.

Blind Boy Athlete

At the sports of the East Anglian Institution for Deaf and Dumb Children, at Gorleston, a blind lad named Cullum won the 100-yards race in 12 4-5 seconds, lowering the school record by a second. He felt his way by means of handles attached to

BLOOD-STAINED EUROPE

Take up the map of Europe.

Between the fortieth and the sixtieth parallels lie the central battlefields of the world. For thousands of years not fifty years have passed without some blood conflict in that great area, roughly twelve hundred by two thousand five hundred miles, harboring the many nations from which the greater new world has drawn her sons, and of which Canada is a mighty unit. From St. Petersburg to Constantinople, from Athens to Madrid, from Bordeaux to Aberdeen, Copenhagen to Christiania, within and around those lines the most sanguinary battles have raged—doubtless since the creation, and to them there is no end, despite civilization, science, the spread of education, and the influence of religion.

Great have been the battles on these great battle-grounds. Rivers of blood have flown, yet the land still thirsts. Like an old, abandoned toper it has become seasoned to the vintage of man, and drink of its fill it must seemingly until creation ends.

COMMANDS FRENCH NAVY

De La Peyrere a Man of Pluck—Completely Reorganized Service

The French navy is under the supreme command of Admiral de la Peyrere. Acknowledged both at home and abroad as the most distinguished officer of the French navy, he has both in his capacity as chief of the Admiralty staff and as Minister of Marine, completely reorganized that service, eliminating the dead wood, abolishing hundreds of almost incredible abuses, consigning to the scrap heap battleships and cruisers that were out of date and paying particular attention to the development of submarine navigation.

His popularity among all grades of the service is very great, and when Minister of Marine he still further enhanced it on one occasion by an exhibition of personal pluck thoroughly in keeping with his character and antecedents. Learning that in consequence of the number of disastrous explosions in connection with the handling of the charges of the big guns, notably the terrible destruction of the ill-fated battleship Jena at Toulon, the sailors and officers had become convinced that it was almost as dangerous to stand behind the gun or anywhere near its breech as at its muzzle, he hastened to Toulon, went on board one of the battleships there, ordered it into the offing under the pretext of witnessing some experiments with the guns, then caused the ammunition to be brought up haphazard from the hold, and throughout the entire firing, extending over a period of several hours, made a point of standing in the immediate proximity of the breech of the gun so that if there had been any explosion he would have been the very first to be blown into eternity. He saw active service in France's naval conflict with China.

ALTON.

The Alton Tennis Club held a successful concert on the Tennis Grounds, Alton, on Wednesday evening. The programme was furnished by the Alton orchestra and other talent.

We are sorry to be obliged to record the death of another of the old citizens of Alton in the person of Mrs. Margaret Stevens, aged 87 years, who died on Sunday, Aug 9th, and was buried in Alton cemetery on Tuesday, the 11th. Mrs. Stevens is survived by a sister, Mrs. Graham, of Amaranth. Her husband predeceased her some years ago. Deceased was ill only a short time and old age was the cause of her death.

The Alton Woollen Mills are now shut down for a short time. We understand that depression in trade is responsible for the shutdown. We hope to see them in operation again shortly as they mean a great deal to the prosperity of this village.

Mrs. Smart and family, of Brampton, are visiting at the home of her father, Mr. Alex. Dick.

Miss Madill, of New York, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. John Madill.

The two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Adam C. Wilson, of Brampton, are visiting at the home of their grandmother, Mrs. John Madill.

We hear that some of the young men of this village have volunteered to accompany the contingent now being formed to assist in the struggle of the Motherland against Germany.

Miss Ada Lemon, of Moose Jaw, is home for a holiday visiting her father, Mr. Peter Lemon.

LAUREL.

(Intended for last week.)

Rev. J. S. Stevenson and son, Keith, are spending three weeks with friends in Renfrew.

We are pleased to note the fine meetings of our Epworth League. Don't fail to set aside Tuesday evenings to attend. All are welcome.

Rev. I. Couch, M.A., B.D., and Mrs. Couch and family, of Ottawa, are spending their holidays at the home of Mrs. John Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. John Johnston spent a pleasant two weeks with friends in Buffalo. Mr. Johnston likes Uncle Sam's country and while away attended the International Epworth League Convention in session in Buffalo.

It is very gratifying to our teacher, Miss Liddy, that her Entrance pupils were so successful. We always rejoice when pupils pass, but to have honors as well as a scholarship shows that ability and real appreciation count. Miss Liddy is very painstaking in her work. We wish her further success.

ROSEMONT.

The rain on Sunday and Monday has freshened up the grass and has been a great help to the root crop.

Some of our farmers have finished harvesting and only for the rain the most of them would have been through in a few days.

The buckwheat seems to be a very promising crop around here this year.

Threshing has started again and Mr. Wm. Thompson's new machine is doing excellent work. He has a grain elevator on his machine which is proving a great help to the box men.

Some of our farmers have started to ridge up for fall wheat. It is thought that seed wheat will be very high.

Anniversary services will be held in St. Luke's Church in Rosemont on the second Sunday in September.

Miss Myrtle Robinson, of Toronto, is holidaying at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McNabb, of Shelburne, visited friends here on Sunday.

Mrs. Gardener, of Toronto, who spent the past two weeks visiting friends here, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe. Hancey, of Alliston, spent Sunday at the latter's home here.

MELANCTHON STATION.

The farmers are in the midst of harvest and are looking forward to the big annual outing—the Toronto Exhibition.

Our township council is putting in some large cement bridges in this vicinity, one across the Gravel Road about one mile north of the village and two at the 5th line crossing on to some formerly called it, German's Creek. At this point there were formerly three wooden bridges, but by slightly changing the course of the stream two bridges will answer the purpose.

Our townsman, Mr. Thos. Sanderson, is improving the appearance of his farm and premises by building a new straw shed. Mr. John M. Johnston has the contract.

Mrs. T. K. Slack and little daughter, Helen, are visiting friends in Toronto.

Miss Gertie Stone is visiting at Cheltenham.

Dr. R. D. Sloan, of Leamington, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Sloan here.

CAMILLA.

(Too late for last week)

Mr. and Mrs. H. Culp and Mr. Charles Rayfield visited at Mr. Geo. Rayfield's for a few days this week.

Rev. A. J. Fowlie is spending his vacation with friends at Hillsburg. During his absence, the services were taken by Mr. Will Bremner, of Muskoka.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott spent Sunday with friends in this locality.

Misses Berdita and Robena Thompson have returned from Orangeville to their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Curtis and sons, of Toronto, spent several days at the home of Mr. James Curtis.

Mrs. H. McKim has been spending some time with Orangeville friends.

Miss Nina Bremner has returned home from a trip to Muskoka Lakes.

MONO MILLS.

The annual meeting of the local branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society will be held on Tuesday evening, Aug. 25th. The usual custom of holding these yearly meetings in the Anglican, Presbyterian and Methodist churches in rotation brings it this year to the Methodist Church. The people of the village and vicinity have a very creditable record in connection with this work, contributing as much as many of the large towns. The amount paid in last year, $86.46 all together, was collected by the following members of the Collecting Committee—Miss I. M. Potter and Miss Alma Dowling, $12.05; Miss Hackett and Miss Quigley, $11.70; Miss Duman and Miss Hamilton, $11.10; Miss Ethel Allen and Miss Ella Taylor, $8.50; Miss Annie Atkinson and Miss Laura Henry, $8.35; Miss M. Welwood and Miss Eva Henry, $8.00; Miss Ina Taylor and Miss Ethel Mason, $7.30; Miss Drummond and Miss McCulloch, $7.; Miss Annie Holmes and Miss Viola Crombie, $.00; Miss Bertha Stinson and Miss M. McMullin, $4.75. These young ladies have the sincerest thanks and appreciation of the officials of the Society for the work they have done so faithfully and so well. Mr. H. D. Martin will address the meeting this year and illustrate his address with stereoptican views. Meeting to commence at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Ira Stork, who has been spending a week at her former home in Nassagaweya has returned home.

Miss Ethel Armstrong, of Erin, and Miss Bethaa Thompson, of Caledon, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. Everton McNichol and children, of West Toronto, motored up to the village on Monday and spent the day among friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McManus, of Dunkerron, Ont., spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McManus.

Miss Stella McManus returned home on Wednesday after a pleasant trip to Bradford, Beeton and Newmarket.

Miss McKitrick, of Shelburne, is the guest of her friend, Miss Vilda Crombie.

Miss Grena Crozier is taking her Model course at Hanover this fall.

Miss Stringer, of Toronto, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McPherson.

Mr. R. J. Potter journeyed to Coldwater, Ont., on a trout fishing trip on Wednesday last.

AGASSIZ AND A HERRING.

And a Student Who Finally Succeeded In Making a Discovery.

A student enrolled in Agassiz's class. For several days Agassiz paid no attention to him whatever. At length, tired of standing around idle, the student asked Agassiz to give him something to do. Agassiz's reply was to hand him a herring and to say, "Study this." The student was bewildered, but set about "studying" it. The next day Agassiz asked him what he had learned about the herring. The student replied that it had two eyes, so many fins and such and such markings.

"No, no!" Agassiz cried. "Study it more. Those things are not important."

The next day and the next the experience was repeated. The fourth day Agassiz again demanded information about the now rotting specimen. In a desperate attempt at humor the student replied, "Well, it's the same on both sides."

"That's it!" shouted Agassiz. "That's it! A starfish isn't the same on both sides, an oyster isn't, thousands of specimens of the sea are not. When you find one that is, you've found a starting point in a new stage in the evolution of life."

Obviously, that student learned more from that one lesson about the scientific method of study than he would have learned in a year's reading and lectures. The textbooks would have taught him the facts; Agassiz taught him the method of learning all facts.—World's Work.

Lighting a Picture.

The hall in the Rijks museum, in Amsterdam, which contains Rembrandt's "The Night Watch," painted in 1642, was specially built to hold the picture that the lighting might be as perfect as possible. The picture is always lighted, the hall always dark. Originally the picture was arranged badly as to light and space. When, in 1715, it was transferred from the Doelen to the town hall it was made to fit into its new position by having strips cut off the canvas on either side and off the top, which destroyed the balance.

Had to Be.

Little five-year-old Bessie was telling about some medicine she had taken while ill.

"Yes," she said, "I took some compulsion of cod liver oil, and"—

"You mean emulsion, don't you, dear—not compulsion?" said the visitor.

"Well," rejoined Bessie, "there was a good deal of compulsion about it."—Pittsburgh Press.

A SUCCESSEUL TOURNEY

Wright, of Owen Sound, Won Association event.

Reid, of Orangeville, Captured Consolation Prize.

As intimated in last week's issue the fifth annual Tournament of the Orangeville Lawn Bowling Club, which was pulled off last week, was the most successful in the history of the Club. 49 rinks entered for the big event and despite threatening weather on the opening day there was only one default. Rain on Thursday afternoon interfered considerably with the final games in the Consolation match. Otherwise the weather conditions were well-nigh perfect. Skales, of Mount Forest, Wright, of Owen Sound, and Mill, of Parkdale, were still in the running when the semi-finals were reached in the Association series. Mill captured the bye and Wright put Skales out by a narrow margin. One or two of the Parkdale players were obliged to leave, so that the final game was not played. Under the circumstances the first prizes, four large fumed oak rockers, were awarded to the Owen Sound rink. The second prizes, which went to the Parkdale rink were four Mackinaw combination sweaters and house coats. Reid, of Orangeville, Bachelor, of Owen Sound, and J. G. Wilson, of Fergus, reached the semi-finals in the Consolation match. Bachelor secured the bye and Reid won from Wilson in an all afternoon game. The rain stopped the play several times, prolonging the game until after six o'clock. As it was impossible to play the final game Reid and Bachelor tossed for the prizes, the former winning. The first prizes were four mahogany trays with silver railing. The runners-up won four combination electric toasters and grillers. The following is a detailed statement of the Tournament results:—

Robb—Hamilton.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at high noon on Tuesday, Aug. 11, at the home of Dr. J. H. and Mrs. Hamilton, of Erin, when their daughter, Nora Margaret, became the wife of Mr. Charles C. Robb, B.A., of Toronto. To the strains of the wedding march, rendered by Miss Marion Russell, the bridal party passed through an aisle of flowers and ribbons terminating in a bower of palms and ferns, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Lindsay. The bride was charmingly gowned in cream silk crepe metier, en train, trimmed with seed pearls, and wore a long flowing train and orange blossoms. She carried a handsome bouquet of roses and lilies-of-the valley, and wore the groom's gift of a hoop of pearls. The bridesmaid, Miss Ora Hallett, received a pearl solitaire. Small Jean Scriven made a dainty flower girl in her pretty French frock of shadow lace and pink silk, carrying a basket filled with sweet peas to match. She was the recipient of a necklace of rose beads and pearls. The groom was supported by Mr. J. S Ross, M.A. After the wedding breakfast and the usual toasts the young couple left for a few weeks on the St. Lawrence and Saguenay after which they will reside in Clinton, Ont.

Mrs. Wm. Bailey, of Shrigley, was thrown from a democrat and had her arm broken.

Acton Public School Board will expend $6540 this year. Of this sum $5870 will be paid for salaries.

IMAGINARY MILLIONS.

Money Myths That Hover About England's Chancery Court.

Most people seem to think that there are countless and vast fortunes in chancery waiting to be bestowed upon their proper owners. This, as a matter of fact, is purely a myth, and how it arose it is impossible to say.

"We are supposed," said an official of the pay office recently, "to have the estate of a man named Hoffman, valued at £18,000,000, and we are repeatedly receiving inquiries—almost always from Poland—but we know nothing of the estate." Another estate with which the pay office has nothing to do—that of the great Sir Francis Drake—is also the subject of many questions.

In all there are 3,838 estates in chancery, but the value of the largest is not more than £7,000. And, so far from many millions, the paymaster of the supreme court of judicature has only £1,250,000 in his hands awaiting claimants. A large proportion of this money, moreover, has been lying unclaimed since the early part of the eighteenth century.

If you think you are entitled to any of this money you should first study the official list at the law courts and then make a formal claim. But, it may be said, it very rarely happens that such applications prove successful.—London Answers.

PASSING OF ST. HELENA.

Made Famous by Napoleon, the Island Appears to Be Doomed.

When the great French emperor died in exile in 1821 there was probably a wish buried deep in his Corsican heart that the island which had been the scene of his humiliation might be wiped from the face of the seas.

Whether or no such a curse was ever cast upon the island, it is certain that St. Helena is doomed if not to extinction at least to become an uninhabitable rock. With the advent of steam navigation the island ceased to be a regular port of call, so that its always scanty exports dwindled almost to the vanishing point; plagues of insects destroyed its vegetation; rats, brought thither by foreign vessels, multiplied and overran its soil until the government was compelled to offer a bounty of a penny for every rodent captured. Then the English garrison, which had been practically the sole source of income to the inhabitants, was withdrawn, and the needs of the natives became desperate.

Then, as if this series of misfortunes was not enough, the termite—that curse of tropical and semitropical countries—invaded the island and will unless controlled reduce the city of Jamestown to a pulp of sawdust.—New York Independent.

Possibilities Overlooked.

He was a suburban garden faddist, who innocently bored all his friends by asking them down for week ends and showing them around his 2 by 4 estate. Just now it was Brown from the office. He showed him his three rose trees, his pocket shrubbery, his half inch fountain jet with its little basin and pair of goldfish. He showed him his summer house, which would accommodate two people at the same time.

"Never know what you can do with a bit of ground till you try!" said the host gleefully.

"Quite so—quite so!" returned the visitor. "But why don't you take a strip off the flower bed—say about six inches wide—turf it over and make it into a blooming golf links?" — New York Post.

Wagner and Beer.

Signor Angelini Giustiniani, who traveled specially from Rome to Baireuth in order to be present at the first performance of "Parsifal" July 26 1882, gave an account of his impressions in the Rassegna Contemporanea. He was surprised at seeing Wagner drive up to the theater "in a carriage which also conveyed a large barrel of beer perched conspicuously on the box seat by the side of the driver. This was carried into the theater, presumably with a view to slaking the thirst aroused in Wagner and his friends by the performance of his masterpiece."—London Chronicle.

Two Queer Epitaphs.

Near Salisbury plain, in England, is the grave of one William Button. His epitaph runs:

Oh, sun, moon, stars and ye celestial poles!
Are graves, then, dwindled into Button-holes?

Which is not as clever as this epitaph which a famous New York dentist composed for himself:

Stranger, approach this grave with fitting gravity.
Here lies a dentist—filling his last cavity.

Missing Opportunities.

"I have no patience with a man who makes the same mistake twice," said Armes, rather severely, in speaking of an unfortunate friend.

"Neither have I," agreed his wife, "when there are so many other mistakes to make."

Missed His Chance.

Hank—Yes; Kelley's been under bonds to keep the peace for some time. Bill—I wish I'd known. I've missed several fine chances to call him a liar.

Banish Your Worries.

Cut out the fear of things that never happen and you will be able to reduce your troubles 90 per cent.—Chicago News.

The knowledge of thyself will preserve thee from vanity.—Cervantes.

Oodles, the Avenger

He Was Half Witted, but Faithful

By M. J. PHILLIPS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"The New York attorney, he goes tomorrow," said Frederic, the fat French landlord of Pere Chene.

His wife, a thin little woman, with a sharp voice and a heart of gold, blazed into sudden anger.

"He stayed too long, and he goes too soon!" she cried.

Frederic took his pipe from his mouth and turned ponderously.

"You mean—what?" he questioned.

"I mean that our Therese"—

Frederic gazed uncomprehendingly, and she made a gesture of impatience at his stupidity.

"Tchk! Can't you see? She likes him too well."

Her husband's mouth sagged open. He held the pipe in his pudgy hand. His black beard rippled over his breast. His eyebrows were raised in amazement and something of dismay. He looked like a wondrously carved statue, for he sat very still.

But one's mouth cannot stay open indefinitely. Frederic's closed reluctantly. He peered into his pipe and drew forth his buckskin tobacco pouch. "Chut!" he commented.

Mme. Lecoeur ceased her agitated rocking.

"'Chut!'" she snapped. "'Chut!' And our only child is breaking her heart. Look for yourself. They are coming."

She inclined her head sideways. Her husband turned in his stout chair, all together, like a piece of machinery, and looked up the one street of the backwoods Michigan town.

It was a pretty sight that Frederic saw—one that appealed to the quick sentimental perceptions of his race.

A man and a girl were coming toward the hotel on the veranda of which they sat. The man was of the city, and his neat, fashionable clothing was in striking contrast to the Mackinaw garb of the few woodsmen who

THEN HE TOTTERED AND FELL.

lounged in doorways. He was talking eagerly to the girl, who kept pace with him; and his keen young face was alight with the visions of one who is both dreamer and doer.

The girl was a glorious creature, whose roundness was not plumpness and whose slenderness was not thinness. Her luxurious brown hair was uncovered. She walked in Indian moccasins with the springy ease of a frontierswoman.

Her big, dark eyes were turned on young Amidon with flattering attention. In their depths was an unconscious and pitiful revelation of her heart.

They paused a moment by the rude steps.

"We are going down to the falls," said the lawyer. "I want to explain to Miss Therese what our company means to do here. Why, M. Lecoeur, the country above is a natural reservoir. A dam will furnish power to light every town within a hundred miles of here and run the mills besides."

He turned to Therese as he finished as one turns to a friend who comprehends. But there was nothing in his look or his manner but impersonal enthusiasm; no hint that he was conscious of her sex or of her loveliness.

"Your company is rich, M. Amidon?" queried the landlord.

A smile came to the lawyer's boyish face.

"They have barrels of it," he replied.

Mme. Lecoeur turned to her husband when the young people had gone on.

"You see, you see!" she demanded. "She cannot get enough of looking at him. And he—his head is full of dams and electric lights and mills. Tchk—men!"

"My daughter," she continued, "is worthy of any man in the land. She has graduated from the Grayling high school. She can bake and sweep and sew. She is as merry as a robin. She can walk from here to Thessalon in four hours, and it is twenty miles.

"She has taste, too, Frederic—a taste she did not inherit from the Lecoeurs. Faith, no.

"She has the high heeled, small shoes and a gown no bigger around than your trousers leg—great, fat—fat! She has even been three times to Soo City. She is as innocent and unspoiled as a babe. Why does he not see?"

She had spoken rapidly in French. Her husband removed his pipe in order to shake his head slowly.

"I will tell you why he does not see," she said, switching to English to answer her own question. "He has had no time but to bargain and plan and buy the land.

"If he could stay here for two weeks more, with his mind free of business, he could not help loving her. But he will go without seeing or speaking, and it will kill her."

She sighed wistfully. "If he would but fall sick. She is a splendid nurse."

They turned guiltily at a sound behind in the doorway, but at sight of the queer face looking down at them Mme. Lecoeur spoke relievedly. "Oh, Oodles! It is you!"

Oodles Napper was one of "God's innocents," a silent young half wit who roamed the wilderness, flitting here and there as the errant fancy took him. The door of every settler from the straits to Saginaw bay was open to him. No one dreamed of charging him for food and lodging.

But he paid in his own way nevertheless. He was a mighty hunter. He always carried a rifle, and his aim was of the deadliest. Birds and squirrels and deer in season he brought to the homes of his friends.

Now the wide, thin, upturned mouth was doleful; the small blue eyes were dull.

"You heard, Oodles?"

Mme. Lecoeur and all of Pere Chene knew that he loved Therese, as the dog loves his mistress, with a dumb love that asks nothing but the privilege to serve.

The half wit nodded.

"Yes," he murmured. "Sorry—sorry." He looked to the north after Therese and Amidon.

"Where to, Oodles?"

Frederic had noted that he carried rifle and pack.

"Tabquema—south."

Without another word or look he turned toward the blue hills. Soon he disappeared in the scrub at the end of the street.

When the village had been shut off by tag alders and bushes Oodles' long strides shortened. Unconsciously he came to a standstill. He stood for several minutes in an indecision that was painful. His lips moved soundlessly.

Evidently it was a time of intense mental agitation, for the sweat burst out on his forehead, and his hands clinched until the knuckles showed white through the brown skin, and the tendons in his wrists drew like cords.

At last a resolution was reached. Heading west, he began to run swiftly, but with great caution.

He slipped through the brush like a wild thing. His face took on a new expression—queer and terrible.

As he ran he bore to the north in a half circle. Presently he came out on a little knoll, threw himself flat in the long grass and peered between the trunks of a clump of jack pines.

Yes, there they stood on the bank of the river, near the rapids. The lawyer, his face alight, was pointing as he explained the plans of his company to Therese.

The girl was looking up at her companion. Even at that distance the half wit read the unconscious pathos of her attitude.

With swift fierceness he drew the rifle to his shoulder, sighted carefully and fired.

Amidon paused in the midst of his sentence, blank amazement on his face. Then he tottered and fell.

Therese's scream echoed high above the bur of the rapids. The half wit ran away, more like a wild thing than ever.

* * * * * * *

Therese and her lover, who was also her husband, stood on the porch of the Lecoeur house in the gloaming. Her dark eyes were pools of brooding happiness.

The man, mimicking a shy schoolboy, edged over and took her hand. She laughed and leaned against him.

"It's good to be here," he said.

"Do you know what day it is?"

He looked down at her, eyes round with recollection.

"By Jove!" he cried. "It's just a year—a year ago today."

She nodded. They were silent a moment, and then he went on:

"If it hadn't been for that I'd never have discovered how much I cared. I was going away without a word to you. Think of that!

"But you hadn't finished binding me up before I was crazy about you, and the longer you nursed me the more I loved you."

His arm went round her.

She nestled against him and sighed contentedly.

"The chap who did it was a marksman," he continued. "There I was, gesticulating like Mark Antony, and along comes a bullet and breaks my arm—snip—like that. I wonder who it was?

"I'd like to know so I could thank him. The fellow did me a good turn."

She shuddered a little.

"I was frightened—at first. But it did come out all right, didn't it?"

"It certainly did," returned Amidon. "And now let's talk of something more serious. Kiss me," he said severely.

A chuckle came from the doorway behind, and they turned guiltily, like children.

"Oh," said Therese, relieved, "it's only Oodles!"

Indigestion and Headaches

Arising From Constipation, Cured and Regular Habits Established by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes:—"For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXVI.—continued.

"I hope," he said, "that you will not be dull this evening. This electioneering is becoming wearisome, but it is a necessity."

"Thank—you," she said. "I shall not mind a quiet evening at all. If I am dull I shall go round and see Sylvia Mannering."

"Be sure you take a carriage and your maid," he said. "I wish that I could ask you to come with me. I am afraid however that it will be a rather rough meeting."

She yawned.

"I wish," she said, "that politics were so deadly dull."

"I am sorry," he answered quietly, "that you find them so. I trust however you will remember that I shall expect you to give me some of your time next week."

"What a bore!" she answered, abstractedly.

Sir John frowned. He looked across at his wife in stern disapproval.

"It seems to me, Anna," he said, "that lately you find most things a bore."

"I am afraid I do," she admitted.

Sir John leaned forward in his chair.

It is an ungracious task," he said, "to refer to the change in your life which I have been able to bring about, but you force me to remind you of certain things. I found you in Paris absolutely poverty stricken, and in real or apparent distress concerning the misbehaviour of your sister. Forgive me, Anna, but I see no cause for mirth."

The smile faded from her lips.

"I agree with you," she said, "Go on."

"It suited you," he continued, "to make yourself a very charming companion to me. You were always bright and cheerful, and any little expedition which I planned you seemed to enter into and enjoy. I myself, I fear, am a somewhat dull person. For that reason perhaps you were more than ordinarily attractive to me. We were married, and you yourself shall be the judge whether you have not been since then a changed woman. You may say that I am a depressing person to live with. You see very little more of me now than during the few weeks before we were married, and you certainly did not appear to find me such then."

"Dear me," Annabel exclaimed. "This is a perfect indictment. You combat my excuses before I make them. I shall be crushed flat."

"I think you can scarcely fail to recognize the truth of what I say," Sir John declared. "You complain of our being able to get away for only a week, of my house at Hampstead, of my friends. I have let you choose your own residence, you are here to make such friends as your position entitles you to. I have not deceived you on one single point. On the contrary, I have done far more than I eper promised. Am I unreasonable therefore if I look to you for some better evidence—of your appreciation?"

A spark of real sympathy—or perhaps it was remorse—touched Annabel. She rose to her feet, and bending lightly over his chair, kissed him on the lips.

"You poor old thing," she exclaimed. "I believe you're quite right. I'm not half so sweet as I ought to be."

Sir John was gratified. He appeared ridiculously pleased. He retained hold of her fingers.

"That is very charming of you, dear," he said. "You know what I heard a man call me in the club the other day, when he heard that I had married one so very much younger—an old fool—that was it. Lately I think the phrase has haunted me. There may be a little truth in it, Anna, but I don't want it thrust home too hard."

"How idiotic!" she laughed. "Between ourselves I think—yes, I think that you would have been an old fool if you hadn't married me."

Sir John smiled like a young man.

"I quite agree with you, my dear," he said.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Montague Hill Sees Light at Last.

At exactly ten minutes past ten Annabel rang the bell of her sister's flat. There was no response. She rang again with the same result. Then, as she was in the act of turning reluctantly away, she noticed a thin crack between the door and the frame. She pushed the former and it opened. The latch had not fully caught.

The flat was apparently empty. Annabel turned on the electric light and made her way into the sitting room. There was a coffee equipage on the table, and some sandwiches, and the fire had been recently made up. Annabel seated herself in an easy chair and determined to wait for her sister's return.

The clock struck half-past ten. The loneliness of the place somewhat depressed her. She took up a book and threw it down again. Then she examined with curiosity some knick knacks upon a small round table by her side. Amongst them was a revolver. She handled it half fearfully, and set it carefully down again. Then for the first time she was conscious of an unaccountable and terrifying sensation. She felt that she was not alone.

She was only a few yards from the door, but lacked the courage to rise and fly. Her knees shook, her breath came fast, she almost felt the lurid effect of those tiny patches of rouge upon her pallor stricken cheeks. Her eyes were dilated—fixed in a horrified stare at the parting in the curtains which hung before the window.

There was some one there. She had seen a man's head steal out for a moment and draw the curtains a little closer. Even now she could trace the outline of his shape behind the left hand curtain. She was wholly unable to conceal her knowledge of his presence. A little smothered cry broke from her lips,—the curtains were thrown aside and a man stepped out. She was powerless to move from her chair. All through that brief but measureless space of time during which wonder kept him silent, as fear did her, she cowered there, a limp helpless object. Her courage and her presence of mind had alike deserted her. She could neither speak nor move nor cry out.

"Annabel! God in Heaven, it is Annabel!"

She did not speak. Her lips parted, but no words came.

"What have you done to yourself?" he muttered. "You have dyed your hair and darkened your eyebrows. But you are Annabel. I should know you—in Heaven or Hell. Who is the other?"

"What other?"

Her voice seemed to come from a long way off. Her lips were dry and cracked.

"The Annabel who lives here, who sings every night at the 'Universal'? They call her by your old name. Her hair and voice and figure are as yours used to be. Who is she, I say?"

"My sister!" Annabel faltered.

He trembled violently. He seemed to be labouring under some great excitement.

"I am a fool," he said. "All these days I have taken her for you. I have pleaded with her—no wonder that I have pleaded with her in vain. And all this time perhaps you have been waiting, expecting to hear from me. Is it so, Annabel?"

"I did not know," she faltered, "anything about you. Why should I?"

"At last," he murmured, "at last I have found you. I must not let you go again. Do you known Annabel, that you are my wife?"

"No," she moaned, "not that. I thought—the papers said——"

"You thought that I was dead," he interrupted. "You pushed the wheel from my hand. You jumped, and I think that you left me. Yet you knew that I was not dead. You came to see me in the hospital. You must have repented a little, or you would not have done that."

"I did not come," she faltered. "It was my sister Anna. I had left Paris."

He passed his hand wearily over his forehead.

"That is where I got confused," he said. "I opened my eyes, and she was bending over over my bedside. Then, I thought, she has repented, all will be well. So I made haste and recovered. I came to London to look for you, and somehow the figure I saw in my dreams had got mixed up with you. Your sister! Great God, how like she is to what you were!"

Annabel looked around her nervously.

"These are her rooms," she said. "Soon she will return."

"The sooner the better," he answered. "I must explain to her. Annabel, I cannot believe it. I have found you."

His eyes were burning. He advanced a step towards her. She held out both her hands.

"No, no," she cried. "You frighten me!"

He smiled at her indulgently.

"But I am your husband," he said. "You have forgotten. I am your husband, though as yet your hand has scarcely lain in mine."

"It is a mistake," she faltered. "You told me that your name was Meysey Hill. I thought that you were he."

His face darkened.

"I did it for love of you," he said. "I lied, as I would have committed a murder, or done any evil deed sooner than lose you. What does it matter? I am no pauper, Annabel. I can keep you. You shall have a house out at Balham or Sydenham, and two servants. You shall have the spending of every penny of my money. Annabel, tell me that you did not wish me dead. Tell me that you are not sorry to see me again."

Her passion conquered for a moment her fear.

"But I am sorry," she exclaimed. "Our marriage must be annulled. It was no marriage at all."

"Never," he exclaimed vehemently. "You are mine, Annabel, and nothing shall ever make me give you up."

"But it is too late," she declared. "You have no right to hold me to a bargain which on your side was a lie. I consented to become Mrs. Meysey Hill—never your wife."

"What do you mean—by too late?" he demanded.

"There is some one else whom I care for!"

He laughed hardly.

"Tell me his name," he said, "and I promise that he shall never trouble you. But you," he continued, moving imperceptibly a little nearer to her, "you are mine. The angels in Heaven shall not tear you from me. We leave this room together. I shall not part with you again."

"No," she cried. "I will not. I will have nothing to do with you. You are not my husband."

He came towards her with that in his face which filled her with blind terror.

"You belong to me," he said fiercely; the marriage certificate is in my pocket. You belong to me, and I have waited long enough."

He stepped past her to the door and closed it. Then he turned with a fierce movement to take her into his arms. There was a flash and a loud report. He threw up his hand, reeled for a moment on his feet, and collapsed upon the floor.

"Annabel," he moaned. "You have killed me. My wife—killed me."

With a little crash the pistol fell from her shaking fingers. She stood looking down upon him with dilated eyes. Her faculties seemed for a moment numbed. She could not realize what she saw. Surely it was a dream. A moment before he had been a strong man, she had been in his power, a poor helpless thing. Now he lay there, a doubled-up mass, with ugly distorted features, and a dark wet stain dripping slowly on to the carpet. It could not be she who had done this. She had never let off a pistol in her life. Yet the smoke was curling upwards in a faint innocent looking cloud to the ceiling. The smell of gunpowder was strong in the room.

It was true. She had killed him. It was as much accident as anything, but she had killed him. Once before—but that had been different. This time they would call it murder.

She listened, listened intently for several minutes. People were passing in the street below. A hansom stopped a little way off. She could hear the bell tinkle as the horse shook its head. There was no one stirring in the flats. He himself had deadened the sound by closing the door. She moved a little nearer to him.

It was horrible, but she must do it. She sank upon her knees and unbuttoned his coat. It was there in the breast pocket, stiff and legal looking. She drew it out with shaking fingers. There was a great splash of blood upon it, her hand was all wet and sticky. A deadly sickness came over her, the room seemed spinning round. She staggered to the fireplace and thrust it into the heart of the dying flames. She held it down with the poker, looking nervously over her shoulder. Then she put on more coal, piled it over the ashes, and stood once more upright.

Still silence everywhere. She pulled down her veil and made her way to the door. She turned out the electric light and gained the hall. Still no sound. Her knees almost sank beneath her as she raised the latch of the front door and looked out. There was no one to be seen. She passed down the stairs and into the street.

She walked for a mile or more recklessly, close veiled, with swift level footsteps, though her brain was in a whirl and a horrible faintness all the time hovered about her. Then she called a hansom and drove home.

* * * * * * *

"Miss Pellissier," he said gently, "I am afraid that some fresh trouble has come to you."

She smiled at him cheerfully.

"Am I dull?" she said. "I am sorry."

"You could never be that," he answered, "but you are at least more serious than usual."

"Perhaps," she said, "I am superstitious. This is my last week at the 'Universal,' you know. We begin rehearsing on Monday at the 'Garrick.'"

"Surely," he protested. "The change is all in favour of your own inclinations. It is your own choice, isn't it?"

She nodded.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Hundreds of People Have Found "Fruit-a-tives" Their Only Help

READ THIS LETTER

Superintendent of Sunday School in Toronto Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 DOVERCOURT ROAD, Oct., 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases". "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FORCES LINING UP FOR GREAT BATTLE

German Army Pressing Forward Toward Position Held by British, French and Belgians

Fragmentory reports which have reached London from Paris and Brussels indicate that the advance movement of the German army against the lines of the allies in Belgium and Luxemburg is proceeding slowly but steadily, despite numerous repulses in encounters between the advance guards.

The checks administered to the German scouting detachments at Eghezee, Haelen, Noville Taviers, Diest, Tongres and other Belgian towns are not regarded by military experts as of great account, except in their possible moral effect upon the defenders. It seems certain that the German battle line is closing in, all the way from north of Liege to the Swiss border and that the beginning of a general engagement, which may last for weeks, cannot be long deferred.

The Germans appear to be holding to their reported original plans to hammer a way into France through the Duchy of Luxemburg and southeastern Belgium, and then through the gap in the line of French fortresses, between Verdun and Maslères. French troops are said to have been massed at this point and this territory is expected to bear the brunt of the fighting.

An announcement by the French War Office admits that a French army has entered Belgium and has left Charleroi on the way to Sambleux, near Namur. The Belgian fortress of Namur will come within the scope of the German forward movement, and its defences are being strengthened in order to prolong its resistance as long as possible. The presence of French troops in Belgium has been reported before, but this is the first official announcement of the fact.

Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the English expeditionary force, is personally in charge of the British troops on the continent.

At Liege the forts are still standing firm. The Germans on Saturday withdrew their artillery from the forts on the right bank of the River Meuse and concentrated their attack on the left bank. The German line extends from considerably north of Liege now, its immediate front being from St. Trond to Hasselt, with cavalry details still further north. Diest and Aerschot are believed to be the objective points of an attack by several German army corps, which are reported as massing in that vicinity.

A report from Paris says that an entire division of 12,000 Germans surrendered to the French army during the five days' engagement in the Vosges mountains, where French victories are said to be complete.

MAY ATTACK TURKEY

Triple Entente Angered by Breach of Neutrality Rules

Since the purchase by the Turkish Government, of the two German cruisers, Goeben and Breslau, the chances are that Turkey, unless she repudiates her purchase, will face war with the triple entente—and, in addition, expose herself to the hostile intentions of both Greece and Italy.

The price which the Turkish Government is said to have paid Germany for the cruisers in question is said to have been $20,000,000. The buying of the vessels is said to be in direct violation of the neutrality laws, and to constitute a menace to Greece and Italy.

Great Britain, France and Russia already have forwarded a peremptory demand to Turkey for the immediate repatriation of the officers and crews of the two ships. A report received at Paris says that they were met outside the Dardenelles by Turkish cruisers and safely escorted into the harbor.

BATTLE IN ADRIATIC

Austrian Fleet Broken up by French Warships

A despatch to London from Nish, Servia, under date of Sunday, says:

"A naval battle between French and Austrian warships began off Budua, Austria, in the Adriatic, at 9 o'clock this morning. The French squadron, coming from the southwest, attacked the Austrian warships. Two Austrian ironclads were sunk, one was set on fire, and a fourth fled northwards toward Cattaro. The fight lasted over an hour."

Von Emmich Killed Himself

General Von Emmich, commander of the German forces operating against Liege, has committed suicide. His self-destruction followed the receipt of news that the Kaiser had appointed another general to supercede him.

Prize Horses to Army

Sir Adam Beck, who has one of the finest hunting stables in England, has presented his eleven prize horses to the War Office. The gift is deeply appreciated as coming from a Canadian who is of absolutely German origin.

Canadian Artillery First

Mobilization orders for the artillery division of the Canadian expeditionary force have been issued and will be the first arm of the service ready to leave for Belgium. There will be three brigades of 18 guns each or 54 guns in all.

Canadian Nurses To Go

The Militia Department will send one hundred Red Cross nurses with the Canadian army division. The selection will be made from several hundred applications which have come in from trained nurses in all parts of the Dominion.

LONG RANGE BATTLE BETWEEN CRUISERS

German Vessel Declined to Stand up and Fight the Smallest British Warship on the Atlantic

For half an hour on Thursday night, August 6, H.M.S. Bristol, the smallest British warship in the North Atlantic, fought a long-range duel with the Karlsruhe, one of the German cruisers which have been trying to intercept British shipping on the North Atlantic. Fleeing from H.M.S. Suffolk, which interrupted the Karlsruhe coaling at sea from the North German Lloyd steamer Kronprix Wilhelm, the German cruiser was intercepted by the Bristol southwest of Bermuda, and for a half hour a long-range running fight took place in the blackness of semi-tropical night.

Racing through the heavy swell at a terrific clip, the ships exchanged broadsides without inflicting much damage, the conditions being very unfavorable for accurate gunnery. Although the Bristol's consorts were at least 100 miles astern, the German would not stand and fight. Altering his course, he gradually drew away from the Bristol owing to superior speed, and after half an hour was out of range of the British ship's six-inch bowchaser. All through the night the chase lasted, but somewhere in the darkness the German doubled and made off south to San Juan where he put in for coal some days ago.

Details of this action were brought to Halifax last Friday by H.M.S. Suffolk, the flagship of Rear-Admiral Cradock, commanding the fourth cruiser squadron.

"Nineteen thousand yards was the closest we got to her," said the flag captain of the Suffolk. "The Bristol was to the north of us and the Berwick to the south. We called both of them up by wireless and ordered them to aid in the chase. The Berwick tried to cut off the Kronprinz Wilhelm, while the Bristol took a position to intercept the Karlsruhe. All afternoon we raced after the flying German. By 5 o'clock her smoke had disappeared, and then all our hopes centred in the Bristol picking her up. At 9 o'clock that night the welcome news came through the air to us from the Bristol: "Enemy in sight." A few minutes later came the message: "We are engaging the enemy."

"Although we must have been fully one hundred miles astern by then, we raced on for all we were worth. We had no fear of the result if the German stood up to the Bristol, for we were all sure that our fellows could whip the Karlsruhe easily at close quarters, but wanted to be in at the finish ourselves.

"The Karlsruhe had the heels of the Bristol, too. They were in action for just about half an hour. For a few minutes the German stood up, and the ships fought broadside to broadside, the Bristol using her two 6-inchers and the five 4-inchers on her broadside against the Karlsruhe's five 4.1's. After a few minutes, however, the Karlsruhe turned and ran. The Bristol chased her, firing her forward 6-incher. It was difficult to make anything like good practice. It was pitch dark and the sea was heavy. Not one of the German shells landed anywhere near the Bristol, but our chaps think they got some shots aboard the Karlsruhe. However, in long-range fighting, under those conditions, it is pretty difficult to do much, and the Karlsruhe's speed saved her again."

GERMANS FALL BACK

French Troops Attacked Aggressively —Captured Many Prisoners

The following official statement was issued at Paris late Sunday night: "A forward movement developed Sunday all along the front from Rechicourt (Rixingen), in Lorraine, eleven miles southwest of Saarebourg, to Sainte Marie-aux-Mines. We carried the latter and advanced into the region of Saint Blais.

"The French troops, who occupied Donan on Saturday, continued to advance, their progress being especially rapid in the Schirmeck valley. We have taken 1,000 prisoners in addition to five hundred on Friday. Large quantities of equipment were abandoned by the Germans; we have also captured this. We pushed as far as Lorquin Heights, capturing a convoy belonging to a cavalry division, consisting of nineteen automobiles and lorries.

"The Germans attacked Dinant (in Belgium). Their force consisted of a guard division and the first cavalry division, supported by several battalions of infantry and machine gun companies. When these forces appeared on the left bank the French attacked with great vigor and dash. The Germans soon gave way and recrossed the Meuse in great disorder. Many who failed to reach the bridge slipped down the steep bank and fell into the swiftly-flowing river and were drowned.

"Profiting by the disorder, a French light cavalry regiment followed over the river and pursued the Germans for many miles. This regiment put to flight and drove before it greatly superior forces of German cavalry."

Atlantic Routes Safe

The British Admiralty has given the assurance that the ocean routes are well patrolled, and a guarantee of the quick resumption of the Atlantic passenger service.

Several steamships which previously had been provisionally requisitioned for Governmental purposes have now had their sailing dates fixed.

Antoine Notter, a French reservist from Cape Breton, was shot dead by a sentry at the Armories in Montreal on Friday. Notter did not understand the soldier's orders to move on and refused to budge.

The Austrian steamers Ida and Captain Martintolich, were taken over by the Marine Department at Quebec on Friday as war prizes. They arrived from Austrian ports.

GREAT BATTLE ON

Despatches to London papers early Tuesday morning said: "There is little doubt that a great battle is now occurring in Belgium between the Germans and the Belgian and French allies.

"The Germans are advancing on the historic battle ground of Waterloo, and events of the greatest importance are in progress."

A Brussels despatch to the London Daily Mail says: "Sharp fighting has been in progress since Monday morning."

German cavalry is approaching Brussels and the Belgian seat of government has been moved to Antwerp.

JAPAN IS READY TO ENTER FIGHT

Sends Ultimatum to Germany Which is Merely a Pretext For Attacking That Country

Japan has sent an ultimatum to Germany demanding that she withdraw her warships and evacuate Kiao-Chau. Unless Germany unconditionally accepts by August 23 Japan will take action.

The ultimatum is as follows:

"We consider it highly important and necessary in the present situation to take measures to remove the causes of all disturbances of the peace in the Far East and to safeguard the general interests as contemplated by the agreement of alliance between Japan and Great Britain.

"In order to secure a firm and enduring peace in eastern Asia, the establishment of which is the aim of the said agreement, the Imperial Japanese Government sincerely believes it to be its duty to give the advice to the Imperial German Government to carry out the following two propositions:

"First—To withdraw immediately from Japanese and Chinese waters German men-of-war and armed vessels of all kinds, and to disarm at once those which cannot be so withdrawn.

"Second—To deliver on a date not later than September 15 to the Imperial Japanese authorities, without condition or compensation, the entire leased territory of Kiao-Chau, with a view to the eventual restoration of the same to China.

"The Imperial Japanese Government announces at the same time that in the event of it not receiving by noon on August 23, an answer from the Imperial German Government signifying its unconditional acceptance of the above advice offered by the Imperial Japanese Government, Japan will be compelled to take such action as she may deem necessary to meet the situation."

That Germany will yield to Japan's demand is impossible, and the inevitable result will be the occupation of Kiao-Chau by the Japs and the capture or destruction of the German warships in Asiatic waters.

ARMIES FACE TO FACE

Great Battle Impending In Which Millions of Men Will Engage

The conditions under which the great battle between the Germans and the allied forces will probably be fought were made the subject of an official communication issued by the French Minister of War Sunday. By its development and the nature of the ground over which the battle will be waged, the communication says, this vast engagement will differ profoundly from the battles of other times.

"By reason of the abandonment of the attack which the Germans planned against Nancy," says the communication, "our concentration has been carried out with regularity and in its entirety, and thus the whole of the French army will battle with the whole of the German forces, with the exception of those German troops concentrated on the eastern frontier of the empire.

"The violation of the neutrality of Belgium has extended the Belgian and French lines to the frontier of Holland. The next battle, therefore, will be from Basle to Maastricht, with several millions of men on each side.

"It is this enormous extension of effectives and of front, which will characterize the battle, and it will be profoundly different from all other battles.

"When two adversaries engage in battle along a front of from 20 to 30 kilometres (13 to 20 miles) the engagement is characterized by two features—it is rapid and immediately decisive. With a front extending over 400 kilometres (266 miles), it is not likely to be the same." It is expected that the battle will last for eight or nine days.

MENACE ON PACIFIC

Two German Cruisers Started In Canada's Direction

The German cruisers Leipzig and Nurnberg were headed north, steaming at full speed, when last seen north of San Francisco Bay, according to statements of the captain of the steamer Queen, which arrived at San Francisco on Friday.

The naval authorities at Esquimalt requested that nothing be published regarding the proposed movements of Canadian naval ships on the Pacific coast when questioned about the reported sailing of the German cruisers Leipzig and Nurnberg. It was officially stated the Algerine was quite safe, as well as the Rainbow and Shearwater. There may be a battle somewhere off the coast.

The Montenegrin troops are reported to be successfully invading Austria.

First War Correspondent

The first war correspondent according to a theory propounded by Sutherland Edwards appears to have been Homer who was sent by the editor of an Argos paper called the Chronos to describe the siege of Troy. Hostilities lasted only about seven weeks, when they came to an end the Greek chiefs were in no hurry to return to their wives. Homer was a good sort and as he drew a large salary and a handsome allowance for expenses from the Chronos, he readily accepted the scheme propounded by the wise Ulysses—to keep the war going in the columns of his paper so long as he could manage to write about it. His letters were too good not to publish and meantime the Greek chiefs had an enjoyable time at Troy and elsewhere. Re-issued in book form as "The Iliad," these early examples of war correspondence have enjoyed a wider circulation than was possible even in the columns of the Chronos.

How Italy is Hit

Italy will be one of the chief sufferers from the war whether she engages in it or not as its chief sources of revenue are sulphur, oranges and lemons and tourists. The latter item provides a gross revenue of over $100,000,000 annually. There will be no tourists for Italy for a long time and few ships to handle her citrus crops.

Wars of the Past

In the conflict with Napoleon for the freedom of Europe, which extended over two decades, the British people increased the national debt by upwards of $3,000,000,000.

England had a population of only 5,000,000 and London only 250,000 people when the English threw back the Armada in 1588.

SURPRISED THE CAPTIVE.

An Incident That Aroused Varied Emotions All Around.

In his "Reminiscences" General Basil W. Duke of the Confederate army tells of an incident he witnessed just after the close of the war:

"One morning about 9 o'clock I was sitting on the platform of a station waiting for my train when my attention was attracted to a squad of Federal soldiers who had evidently been on guard during the night, but were now getting their breakfast. They were well supplied with rations and seemed in high spirits.

"Just then I caught sight of a lank, hungry looking fellow who was unmistakably an ex-Confederate. He wore a ragged, faded gray jacket, with the buttons cut off, a pair of most dilapidated blue trousers and an old canvas haversack, as empty as extra-sidereal space, hung around his neck. If he had eaten a square meal within six months appearances were deceitful. He was partially hidden behind a cotton bale, whence he watched the Yankee spread with eyes that threatened to protrude across the intervening distance.

"About the time I saw him the Yanks also caught sight of him. They held a short consultation; then one of them sprang up, started toward him and shouted out:

"'Hello, reb! Come this way; we want you!'

"For some reason—perhaps because I was sick and peevish—I conceived the idea that they wanted to arrest him, and my blood boiled with indignation at so totally an unprovoked act of oppression.

"The 'Johnnie' evidently entertained the same opinion, for he began a rather rapid retreat. A fresh summons, however, re-enforced by a volley of threats, induced him to turn and approach the party, with an attempted dignity of demeanor that was ludicrous compared with his hasty retrograde movement.

"When he reached the spot where the 'grub' was the Yanks seized him, made him sit down and began to exert themselves to appease his manifest hunger. I have known some extraordinary feeders, but I honestly believe I have never seen any other two men eat as much as that fellow did. He kept at it steadily for not less than an hour, while the Yanks aided and encouraged him to the utmost. He drank six tin cupfuls of coffee. He swelled visibly, and I wondered how his frail garments stood the tension.

"When at length he finished his captors crammed his weatherbeaten old haversack full of hard tack and bacon and sent him on his way rejoicing.

"It is scarcely necessary to say that my own feelings in regard to the incident had very materially changed during its progress."

The Gallery's Verdict.

In the old days the proprietor of a music hall always used to walk up and down the center gangway during the performances and restrain the exuberance of his patrons. One night a lady singer began a doleful ballad in a still more doleful voice, and at once received "the bird" from the gallery. "That'll do, boys," said the proprietor. "Order, please! Give the artiste a chance." But when the performance was finished he took off his hat, bowed to the gallery and remarked, "I beg pardon, you were quite right."—London Express.

FASHION AND MISERY.

A Pitiful Tragedy That Revealed an Incongruous Combination.

One of the standing subjects of humorous remarks among New York theatergoers is the weekly article on men's fashions, published over the nom de plume of Beau Brummel, in the programs of the theaters of the better class.

Some people think Beau Brummel is a woman, while others believe him to be merely a haberdasher with a drug habit. However that may be, it is a reasonable supposition that no one wears any of the clothes that Beau Brummel writes about. It couldn't be done. If any man ever arrayed himself in one week's output of the Beau Brummel fashions and started down Broadway he'd land in jail or the psycopathic ward at Bellevue.

The case of Beau Brummel is merely funny. But here is a grim and pitiful little tragedy which is in a way related to it. In a small tenement, at the eastern and poverty stricken end of Fifty-sixth street, the police found John Conwell and his old mother, dead from gas. The man was past middle age and unmarried. They lived alone, and he idolized the woman—a poor, old drunkard. The neighbors said he used to cry hysterically when she would stagger home, stupified with drink. At last he turned on the gas while she slept and died with her.

He wore cotton overalls at the time of his death, and the few articles of his wearing apparel found in the apartment were worn and ragged. Yet the letters and papers which the police took possession of proved that he earned a livelihood for himself and his mother by writing articles on the latest fashions in men's dress.—New York Letter in Cincinnati Times-Star.

OLD FORT MARION.

America's Only Medieval Castle a Landmark In St. Augustine.

For more than 200 years St. Augustine was the Spanish capital of Florida, and the Florida of those days extended from the Chesapeake bay to the Pacific ocean. It was an impregnable stronghold all of those years.

Old Fort Marion, begun in 1592 and finished in 1756, is the only medieval castle in America. It cost an enormous sum of money. Repeated heavy drafts of the builders caused the king of Spain to inquire if they were building Fort Marion of gold dollars. The castle stands today in perfect condition, guarded by the United States government. The keeper conducts visitors through the castle, down into the dungeons and shows you rings in the walls where victims of Spanish oppression were chained to die. Report, fairly well authenticated, has it that when the castle fell into the hands of the British two skeletons were found in one of these dungeons chained to the wall. One was of a man, the other a woman. There is something uncanny about these dungeons that cannot be described by word of mouth.

While there has been great improvement in old St. Augustine, the ancient landmarks have been preserved. The old city gate is intact; the Spanish monuments hundreds of years old attract the lover of antiquities. Narrow streets characterized all Spanish towns of medieval times. There are streets in St. Augustine not more than ten or a dozen feet wide, each side lined with the same type of buildings that were the custom three or four centuries ago.

Wanted to Be Safe.

Tom Jackson had participated in a narrow escape from death, due to an accident which happened while he was crossing to Liverpool. It was, therefore, with much fear and hesitancy that he decided to return home.

Approaching the porter hurriedly at the last minute, he was told that he was too late for a stateroom. "The last one was just taken," announced that worthy.

"Stateroom?" queried the frightened passenger. "Who wants a stateroom? Give me a reserved seat in a lifeboat."—Buffalo Express.

A Painful Process.

Little Prescott had been leaning out of an upstairs window.

"Come away from the window, son," his father said sternly. "You might fall out and get a hump on your back—like the camels you saw yesterday."

The little boy was silent for a few minutes. Then he asked, "Father, do all the little camels have to fall out the window to get their humps?"—New York Post.

Argued Too Long.

"Why did you permit yourself to be drawn into a long argument with your assailant?" asked the policeman.

"A long dispute was just what I was trying to avoid when I called him a liar," explained the man on the hospital cot.—Buffalo Express.

Too Soon and Too Late.

"What became of that play you wrote five years ago?"

"The managers decided it was too daring to produce."

"Send it on again."

"I did. They say it's too tame now."—Pittsburgh Post.

What a Fright!

His Wife—But, dear, tell me why you want my photograph taken in this costume? Her Hubby—So that in three years you will look at it and say what I would like to say right now.—Judge.

Weakening.

"So you think there is yet a chance of selling Mr. Nuskads an auto?"

"Sure! He used to say he wished he had one; now he's arguing he can't afford it."—Puck.

THE 36TH IN CAMP.

Quartered in Ravina Rink Park, West Toronto, but Anxious for Battle.

The 36th Regiment, about 230 strong, are quartered in the Ravina Rink Park. Arrangements were made by Lt.-Col. Windeyer whereby the 36th obtained the use of the rink and grounds as a barracks. The regiment was practically the first to mobilize and was at drill in earnest on Friday last. The officers and men have entered into the work with great enthusiasm, and all are drilling hard towards efficiency. Recruits are being received daily and all undergo a most strict and thorough medical examination before being accepted. Unfortunately a couple of the men who bravely volunteered for service from Orangeville will have to return home, being rather too slim in physique. The rink is a most ideal spot for a barracks. The hockey rink is used as men's quarters and the curling rink is used for the messing, while the ball room and upstairs rooms are used for regimental and company offices and officers quarters. The school grounds at the entrance to the Rink, are used for drill purposes and here the over-seas contingent undergo a hard drilling and grind. The men realize what soldiering is or will be. Every one is active and on the jump.

General Otter paid the regiment a visit on Saturday and commented highly on the quick work of the regiment and the ability to obtain such ideal surroundings. He also stated that with a few more days of such drill the men would hold their own with any regiment in Canada.

Sunday church service was held in front of the barracks on the tennis courts in the ravine. The companies formed a hollow square and the visitors lined the embankments and club house verandahs. Rev. Frank Vipond conducted the services. The regimental band from Port Credit furnished the music, and remained for a couple of hours afterwards and rendered a splendid concert. Rev. Vipond is much interested in the boys and visits them at each meeting of the day for short prayers.

The orders for moving forward have not yet been received, and every one is greatly worried as to his chances of getting to the front. If we get an order to move to Quebec with all men in training they would be happy, but should a smaller number be required then some of us are going to be left at home. However everyone is enthusiastic. About Wednesday we shall proceed to Long Branch ranges for rifle practice. Orders to move forward to Quebec are being looked for daily.

Any mail for members of the contingent will reach them by being addressed to the 36th Regiment, Ravina Park Rink, West Toronto.

NIGHT MADE BEAUTIFU

By the Electrical Decoration at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Electricity as an ornament will be a striking feature of this year's Exhibition. You'll remember a year ago those little electric bulbs flickering like fireflies among the leaves of the trees. That was only a start for a series of electric novelties that will this year make the grounds a vision of loveliness by night.

Above the entrance will be the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes entwined, with the dove of peace floating over them, while at the sides of the entrance will be two electric panels, one emblematic of Canada and the other of the United States.

The Grand Plaza has been strung with a network of wires and will be canopied with twinkling electric stars.

These with other decorations will make it Electric Year as well as Peace Year at the Canadian National.

Personal Mention

Mrs. Finlay Grahame, of Durham, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Dorrance.

Miss Amy Waller returned home yesterday after spending the past two weeks in Cayuga.

Miss A. Baker, of Toronto, is spending a week with her friend, Mrs.
Robt. Little, Camilla.

Mr. Fred Kilpatrick, of Toronto, is spending a couple of weeks with his sister, Mrs. E. C. Clark.

Misses Olive Ramsay and Ruby Mc-Gillivray left on Friday evening to visit friends in London, Ont.

Miss Bea Robinson and Miss Blanche
Cameron are attending the A.Y.P.A.
Convention in Kingston this week.

Mrs. Robt. Oliver, of East Gara-fraxa, went to Toronto on Wednesday last to visit her daughter, Mrs.
James Robinson.

Miss Ruby Allen, stenographer in the office of the Department of Agriculture, is spending two weeks' vacation at Port Burwell.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Irwin, of Toronto, are visiting at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs.
Thos. Arnott, this week.

Dr. and Mrs. L. G. Campbell, of Markdale, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Dorrance during the Orangeville tournament last week.

The engagement is announced of Miss Olive A. Bolen, daughter of Mrs. Thos. Bolen, of Corbetton, to
Mr. Homer Besley, of Shelburne.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Cunningham and little daughter, Alice, of Medicine Alta., who have been on an extended visit to Toronto, Orangeville and vicinity, left on Wednesday last for their home.

Mrs. A. W. McGillivray and her son and daughter, Finley and Miss Mary, returned home on Thursday evening after a three weeks' visit with friends in Winnipeg and Emerson, Man.

Mr. Ide McNabb, a native of Orangeville, but now of Stratford, gave his home town a visit on Saturday.
It is over thirty years since Mr. Mc-Nabb last left Orangeville and time is dealing gently with him.

Mr. Geo. McIntyre returned home on Friday from Inverhuron, where he spent a couple of weeks with his family at their summer home. In-verhuron is a pretty summer resort on the Lake Huron shore. It has one of the best harbors on the Lake and at one time in its history cherished hopes of becoming a thriving town or even a city. No less than 1500 acres were surveyed into town lots, plans were made for a town park and public buildings. Then the railways came—not to Inverhuron as expected but to Goderich and Kin-cardine and with their advent vanished Inverhuron's dreams of greatness.

Aid for Hospital Ship.

Orangeville ladies take no second place in loyalty to the flag that faces the battle and the breeze without a droop in its folds. On Monday the Daughters of the Empire took the warpath and in a short time and with little or no trouble they collected from the patriotic citizens, which means every man, woman and child in the bailiwick, the tidy sum of $330 for the benefit of the Hospital Ship Fund, which fund is now almost full to the limit. This will probably be but the first of many calls that may be made on the generosity of those of us who are enjoying the protection of the boys at the battle front, but it is a long way to the bottom of the homestayers' pocket and every call will be responded to with liberality, pride and pleasure.

Off to the War.

It is quite evident that the citizens of Orangeville are not accustomed to sending men off to the war.
When some fifteen of our boys left on Friday evening for active service in a foreign land there was little excitement and the departure was made as quietly as though the affair was a daily occurrence; but perhaps this was owing to a realization of the seriousness of the event. Be that as it may, the boys went off with spirits elate and none in their haversacks; and they will doubtless make a record when they get into the firing line. The fact that they were not sent off with bands playing and people shouting does not mean that their friends are not with them heart and soul in their life and death struggle with the enemies of King and country, and the prayers of loved ones are going up for them daily as they march to the scene of conflict. May they return well in mind and body and gloriously victorious.

A Brave Soldier Laddie

Orangeville can boast of having produced at least one soldier boy who cannot resist the thrills of warlike combat, whose nature compels him to respond to the bugle's call, all of which is probably owing to the flow of Rossoommon blood in his veins—the same county which gave birth to General French, Commander of the British forces now in France.
The young veteran is none other than
Mr. John Menary, a printer by trade, and a son of the late Wm. Menary.
John enlisted last week with the old timers and is now at Val Cartier, awaiting orders for the trip overseas. Mr. Menary took part in the Northwest Rebellion of '85, was in the fight at Batoche and several other skirmishes. At Rossland, B.
C., he enlisted for South Africa and his first fight there was at Hartz River. He came safely through that campaign and now enters for the biggest struggle of them all, that which will change the map of Europe and probably other parts of this old earth. May he come as safely through in the future as he has in the past.

Berry—McCabe.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs.
Arch. McCabe, of Laurel, on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 11th, when their only daughter, Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. James F. Berry, of Horning's Mills. The marriage ceremony, which was performed by Rev.
J. S. Stevenson, B.A., B.D., took place on the lawn under an arch of evergreen decorated with natural flowers. The wedding march was played by Miss Dora Cooney. The bride, who was given away by her father, was dressed in white silk crepe de chene with pearl garniture and carried a bouquet of cream roses, sweet peas and asparagus fern.
Her cousin, little Miss Ethel Trimble, who made a dainty flower girl, carried a basket of sweet peas centred with a lily in which nestled the ring. The groom presented his bride with a sunburst of pearls, the pianiste with a brooch and the flower girl with a ring. After the happy couple had received the congratulations of the assembled friends about one hundred guests sat down to a dainty dejeuner which was served on the lawn, the tables being arranged under the trees. Seated facing the youthful bride were her aged grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCabe.
Later in the day a large number of the guests accompanied the newly wedded couple to the station and saw them off on their wedding journey to the accompaniment of showers of rice and good wishes. Many beautiful presents testified to the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held by their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Berry will spend a brief honeymoon at Toronto and Hamilton, after which they will take up their residence near Hornings Mills. The Banner joins their numerous friends in tendering hearty congratulations.

LaRose—Lanktree.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs.
John H. Lanktree, of Camilla, on Wednesday, Aug. 12th, when their daughter, Ethel, was united in marriage to Mr. Russell La Rose, of Weston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. J. Fowlie, pastor of St.
Andrew's Church, Camilla. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a beautiful gown of white satin with overdress of shadow lace and pearls. She wore a long tulle veil caught up in cap effect with lillies of the valley and carried a large shower bouquet of white rosebuds and maidenhair fern. After the ceremony the happy couple led the way to the dining room where a sumptuous wedding repast was served. While jokes and fun ran high the bride slipped away, soon returning in a rich travelling suit of navy blue silk moire with beautiful corn colored blouse and hat trimmed with plumes to match.
Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left on the evening train for their new home in West Toronto, where they were received by a great many of their friends who had gathered to wish them much happiness and prosperity.
The gifts, which were numerous and costly, testified to the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

Boy Scout News.

It has been decided by the Provincial Council to cancel the big Rally at Toronto Exhibition this year, as His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught is too busy with State affairs to attend. It is expected however that every Orangeville Boy Scout will do his part at this time.
Let us be thoroughly patriotic, and loyal, assisting where relief is necessary, alleviating suffering and want, offering ourselves for any service asked of us, showing in every way possible that we are not only living up to our motto "Be Prepared," but are Scouts through and through, from the peak of our hats to the biggest nail in our shoes.

The Scout Camp will be held next week in the Hockley Valley. The start will be made at 9 a.m. on Monday morning. Meeting of Scouts on Saturday afternoon to make final arrangements. Any Scout with a rifle who desires to qualify for Marksman Badge is requested to take it with him, also a supply of ammunition. Rifles will be kept in charge of the Commanding Officer.
Wednesday afternoon in Camp will be Visitors Day. The Scouts will put on a programme for friends and relatives of the boys who care to visit our Camp. Only Scouts in correct uniform allowed in Camp.

Monday—Bridge Building Day.
Tuesday—Reconnoitering and Signalling Day.
Wednesday—Visitors' Day with Swimming and Life Saving Contests.
Thursday—Scout Tests Day.
Camp fires after supper each evening. Concerts, story telling, Scout yarns, etc.

HAVE PRETTY HAIR

Thick, Soft, Fluffy, and No Dandruff—Use Parisian Sage.

If your hair is losing its natural color, coming out and splitting, or lacks that enviable softness, gloss and beauty, do not despair—pretty hair is largely a matter of care. If it is too thin make it grow. If it is harsh and brittle soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp with Parisian Sage — all dandruff disappears, falling hair and itching head cease, your hair is doubly beautiful.

Parisian Sage, sold by F. S. Pickering and at all drug counters, is just what you need—a large bottle costs but 50 cents. It surely makes the hair lustrous and seem twice as abundant. You cannot be disappointed in Parisian Sage.

AN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Automobile Runs Down Pedestrians in Duntroon

The village of Duntroon was the scene of a somewhat peculiar auto accident on Thursday evening, says the Collingwood Bulletin, when Thomas Knowles, a young man engaged with Mr. A. J. Campbell in the grain business, was seriously, if not fatally, injured. With Daniel Hunt, Knowles was crossing the road from John Brack's to the post office about 8.30 p.m. When about half way across, and just as they were standing, an auto owned by Mr.
George Julien came along and, according to eye witnesses, with lights burning and the driver, Mr. Julian, blowing the horn. Hunt and Knowles both endeavored to get out of the way of the car, and while the former escaped, the latter was struck by it and hurled to the ground and rolled over and over. Julian stopped the car as quickly as possible and with those who gathered, picked the injured man up and carried him into the home of Miss Russell, where medical assistance was hastily summoned. Upon examination it was learned that seven ribs were broken and one lung had been pierced by a broken rib. Besides these injuries the man was badly bruised and greatly shaken up. Indeed, his injuries are such that it is still doubtful if he will recover, though hopes are entertained that he will.

Scarcely had the accident occurred when reports of a most serious character were in circulation and as usual most of them were derogatory to the driver of the automobile. By eyewitnesses it is generally believed to be an accident, which could not, under the circumstances, have been avoided. An eyewitness said that if any fault could be found with the driver of the car it was that he was probably exceeding the speed limit.
The lights of the car were burning brightly and the horn was blown for some time before the scene of the accident was reached.

From other sources it was learned that Julian is not an amateur with the car. He has driven a car for some time—two seasons at least, and is not regarded as a speed artist or a reckless driver.

On the other hand, those who witnessed the accident do not place any blame on Knowles. Some thought he attempted to cross the road in front of the car, misjudging the distance it was away and the speed at which it was going. The car was not seriously damaged, a lamp being broken and a fender bent. Mr. Julian remained at Duntroon until Friday morning and did all he could to comfort Mr. Knowles.

Funeral of Lorne McLean.

Through an oversight reference was not made in last week's issue to the funeral of the late Lorne McLean, whose untimely death at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McLean, Margaret St., was reported in The Banner of July 30th. The funeral was held from his late home to Alton cemetery the afternoon of July 30th, Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, conducting the services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. Elgin
Holmes, Ossie Woodland, Thos. Huston, Herb. Allen, Herb. Wilson and Al. Galbraith. The late Mr. McLean, who was 32 years of age, was a quiet, industrious young man, who was well thought of by a wide circle of acquaintances. He was bright and cheerful throughout his long illness, bearing his affliction without murmur or complaint. He is survived by his parents, three brothers,
Lewis and Norman, in Toronto, and Arthur, of Orangeville, and two sisters, Mrs. Hugh Gallaugher, of Alliston, and Miss Gladys at home.

Frederick Skales Pickering.

The death took place on Friday,
Aug. 14th, of Fred. Skales Pickering, a young man very much esteemed in the town. Deceased had for some years back been in ill-health at times, on account of an accidental injury, but last year he was better and purchased a drug business at Orangeville. On last New Year's Day he married Miss Lillian Dempsay, of Renfrew. Some weeks ago he had a recurrence of his malady and came to the home of his parents here, for a change and rest, but his strength declined and he passed away from heart failure. Fred was a young man of excellent character, who had been active in connection with Epworth league work here, and was greatly thought of by all who knew him.
Sympathy will be extended to his young wife, his parents and brothers and sisters in their loss, the first break in the family. All the members of the family except Harry, of Vancouver, B.C., were able to be present before his death. The funeral, which was private in compliance of the repeatedly expressed wish of the deceased, took place on Monday afternoon. Rev. A. C. Eddy conducted the services. The pallbearers were four brothers of the deceased: Dr.
Pickering, Durham; Arthur, druggist, of Orangeville; Charles, of To-onto, and Walter, Mt. Forest, and his cousin, Howard Skales, Mount Forest, and brother-in-law, Mr.
James Dempsay, Renfrew. His father-in-law, Mr. S. J. Dempsay, of Cochrane, was also in attendance.—
Mount Forest Confederate.

Mr. Pickering bought out the late
T. Stevenson's stock and business last autumn and lived in Orangeville until about three months ago. He was a young man who had many fine qualities and had made a number of warm friends during his short residence here. His death is deeply regretted and the sympathy of our citizens goes out to the widow and other relatives in their bereavement.

BRUCE KETCHUM DEAD.

Son of Mr. Harry Ketchum, Formerly of Orangeville, Struck by Pier.

Bruce Ketchum, the twenty-year-old son of Mr. Harry G. Ketchum, the well known sporting goods merchant, died at the Protestant hospital at 8.30 o'clock last night, as a result of injuries received on Sunday afternoon at Britannia when he was struck by a part of a diving tower which collapsed. His condition was considered serious all day yesterday, and a specialist was brought from Montreal and an operation was performed at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. Following the operation Ketchum appeared to be much better but at eight o'clock he became much worse and died half an hour later.

On Sunday afternoon Ketchum and about fifteen other young men were swimming at the end of the Britannia pier, and the diving tower, which was about forty feet in height, collapsed while Ketchum was in the water, part of the framework of the structure striking the young man at the base of the neck, rendering him unconscious.

Frank Lachance swam to the rescue of Ketchum and was forced to dive to the bottom three times before he was successful in bringing Ketchum to the surface. Lachance was unable to bring Ketchum to shore, however, and Mr. Phil Fleming went to the rescue, and he and Lachance brought the young man to the club house, where first aid was rendered. This is the third rescue from drowning in which Mr. Fleming has figured.

It was stated at the hospital last night that the condition of the deceased was aggravated by the efforts at resuscitation on the part of those who thought his unconsciousness was due to water taken in rather than injury.

Bruce Ketchum was very popular and had a host of friends in the city.
He was a member of several prominent sporting clubs and associations.
He was a member of the Ottawa Seconds football team, which won the Quebec Rugby Football Union championship last fall, and he played on the Aberdeen hockey team. He was a promising amateur boxer, and won many bouts at the Britannia winter club. In 1910 he was a member of the boy scout contingent which went to England for the coronation of King George. During the summer he had been at Britannia, where he trained for rowing and paddling. He is survived by his father, mother and one brother, Jesse, all of whom reside at 242 Charlotte street. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.—Ottawa Evening Journal.

How One Scot was Fooled.

The heroine was the owner of a wee shop in Glasgow, and the hero acquired the habit of seeing her home, carrying the bag, which contained the day's work takings. The bag was generally heavy.

"You must be doin' well," remarked the hero, very frequently.

"Oh, aye," would be the reply of the lady. "It's a guid bit of business."

But she did not disclose that besides the moderate drawings the bag contained the counter weights. The canny hero only discovered the fact after marriage.

WILLIAM DOUGLAS DEAD.

Had Been Resident of Markdale for 57 Years.

A well-known and highly respected pioneer of Grey County entered into rest on Wednesday at two o'clock in the afternoon, August 5th, in the person of Mr. William Douglass, of Markdale, aged seventy-nine years and five months. He was born in Temple Shambo, County Wexford, Ireland, March 7th, 1835. When he was 16 years of age, his father died, and his mother moved with her family to Canada, settling in Kempville.
In 1857 he came to Markdale, which was at that time called Cornabus.
Mr. Douglass contracted for and built many of the first buildings erected through the district. He took the contract for the first bridge over the river at Barrhead Mills; also built the house on the Benson homestead, now occupied by Mr.
Harry Shaw. He returned to Leeds County in 1858, where he married and commenced farming. In 1874 he moved back to Markdale, where he has resided ever since. The deceased was a member of the church of England, and a very faithful attendant.
In politics he was a staunch Conservative. A memorial service was held in Christ Church at 2.30 Saturday afternoon, conducted by the Rector, Rev. Mr. Hosford, assisted by Rev. Mr. Graham. The members of Markdale A.O.U.W. Lodge, in which Mr. Douglass was a charter member, attended the funeral in a body and assisted in the burial service at the grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. J. W. Ford, Wm. Lucas, P. McCullough, Frederick Sarjeant, Angus Plewes and Thomas Matthews.

Besides his widow, Mr. Douglass is survived by four sons and three daughters, viz: W. J. Douglass, of Medicine Hat, Alta.; R. A. Douglass,
Matheson; H. L. Douglass, of Mark-dale; A. C. Douglass, Vancouver;
Mrs. W. N. Haskett, and Miss Minnie Douglass, Markdale, and Mrs. A.
Hill, Edmonton, Alta.—Markdale

TORONTO MAN KILLED.

Sheldon Lyons Fell Through Barn Floor in Mono Township.

Mr. Sheldon Lyons, a carpenter of Toronto, aged forty-eight years, met with a sadly sudden death on Monday morning last at the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. Robt. Anderson, lot 17, con. 6, Mono. Deceased came up from the city on Saturday and spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs.
James A. Matthews, of Orangeville, and went over to assist his brother-in-law with the building of a granary. While assisting in taking up the old flooring of a barn he fell through and struck his head upon the cement floor, causing a hemorrhage of the brain, from which he succumbed at 11 o'clock that night. A doctor was immediately summoned, who, with a trained nurse, did all that was possible for the sufferer.
Deceased was semi-conscious throughout the day. He was a widower, his wife having died five years ago.

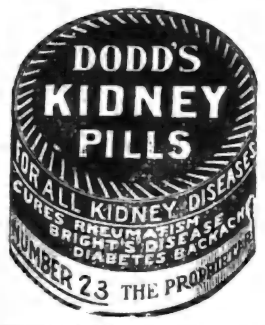
BERT ADAMS DROWNED.

Sad Fatality in Grand River on Friday, August 7th.

On Friday evening, 7th instant, between 7 and 8 o'clock. James W. Adams, aged 31 years and 9 months, eldest son of Mr. James Adams, of Elora, was drowned in the Grand River in rear of the Watson farm, on the outskirts of Elora. He and his younger brother, Earle, had gone there after supper for a bath, and Bert had engaged to teach Earle to swim. The younger boy in some way got into difficulties in the water and was in grave danger of being drowned, but Bert finally got him out of the water and on to the bank, only to fall back himself into the river. The rescued boy was in a dazed condition from his experience, and when discovered by Mr. Ed. Watson he was crouching over a little fire that had been kindled on the bank, and vomiting. He was able, however, to point to the river, and the two suits on the shore told the rest. Mr. Watson with all speed went into the water, which is about eight feet deep at the place, and soon located the body at the bottom and got it out. It is not known how long it was under, but probably 15 to 30 minutes. Two scars on the temple and side of the head would lead to the conclusion that some time in the struggle to rescue Earle Bert had been stunned by striking one or more of the large boulders in the bed of the river.



Dr. Kerr was sent for and was soon on the scene. Efforts at resuscitation were unavailing, however. Earle was properly cared for and taken home. He was in a very serious condition for a day or two after, but is now doing better, though far from completely recovered.

The drowned man leaves a widow and one child, a daughter about two months old. For her there is the deepest sympathy. Just at the time her baby was born her mother, who was a widow, died. She has a brother, but his whereabouts is unknown. A few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Adams came to Elora, where Bert has worked as a tailor. Sympathy for the widow and child took a practical turn, and a subscription list was started. About $225 was raised, largely through the untiring efforts of Mr. T. Q. Biggar and a few others.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, being very largely attended. The services were conducted by the Rev. C. E. Stafford, assisted at the house by the Rev. McD. Hay, L. J. R. Naftel, Elora, and Rev. Evans, of Rockwood, a relative of deceased. Besides the latter there were present at the funeral from outside points the following; Mrs. Andrew Adams, Mr. Frank Adams, Mr. Bert Graham, Guelph; Mr. and Mrs. Lang, Rockwood; Mr. Douther, Toronto; Mr. Sam. Maxwell, Mr. H. Forgrave, Mr. Wm. Clayton, Mr. Sam. Gamble, Grand Valley.

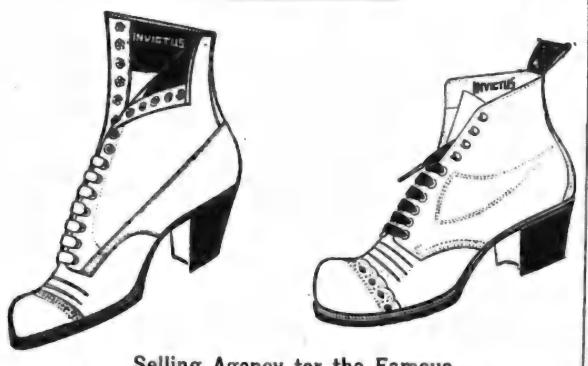
The pallbearers were: Charles Burt, Fred Barnes, Chas. McGowan, Russell Duncan, Davie Foote, Jas. McVey.

Besides the widow and infant daughter there are left to mourn Bert's loss his father, Mr. James Adams; his sister, Miss Gertie Adams, and brother, Earle, at home, and another brother, Chas., of Orillia. All have the sincerest sympathy of the community in the sad and sudden bereavement that has come to them.—Elora Express.

Tipsy and Rum.

To the Editor.

I supose some of your readers think me extreme, or even doubt my assertions. Let me advise such to purchase a little book entitled "Hygiene for Young People," by Knight, a professor in Queen's University, Kingston, and recommended by the Minister of Education. In it will be found much useful information for young and old about the preservation of health, the cure of the eyes, ears, teeth and skin, etc. If read and applied it is worth many times its price. Please turn to page 177, "Alcohol and Animals." There you will read a very interesting account of how Dr. Hodge, of Clark University, of Worcester, Mass., sought to find out whether the moderate use of alcohol is harmful or not.



He took two puppies, which he called Tipsy and Bum, and began mixing a little alcohol with their food. Two other puppies of the same age, which he called Topsy and Nig, were treated in every way the same as the others only that they were given no alcohol. For the first six months they all seemed to grow alike, but those to which the alcohol was given were not nearly so active nor so strong, and they were much more liable to sickness. By the aid of a pedometer attached to their collars Dr. Hodge found out that for every 100 yards that Nig went Bum went only 71, and for every 100 yards that Topsy went Tipsy went only 54. In fact the drinkers were always lazy and were not able to keep up the running so long.

When these dogs were two years old, a disease broke out among the dogs of the town and these four took it. Topsy and Nig, the dogs that had no alcohol, had it very lightly and recovered. Tipsy and Bum, the dogs that had the alcohol, took it very severely and died.

This accords with the effect of alcohol on men and women. It weakens the delicate little organisms that defend us against the germs of disease and so renders us more liable to have disease and to have it more severely. Experiments conducted in German schools, by giving a certain number of pupils a small quantity of beer or wine and setting them to work at a similar task with those who did not have any beer or wine, showed that even in small quantities beer and wine weakened the mental powers.

Dogs Attacked Heifer.

About 2 o'clock on Sunday morning last citizens in the south end of town were awakened by a terrific barking of dogs. T. Maxwell got up to learn the cause, and as it seemed to come from the back of John Jardine's barn he awoke that gentleman by phone to have him investigate. Mr. Jardine got up and on proceeding toward the scene of the racket found four dogs surrounding a yearling heifer in the bed of the river. The vicious brutes had the poor animal so torn and worried that it was completely fagged out and would soon have been compelled to succumb to their attack. They had driven it and another from S. Cowan's field, and were so determined to kill it that it was not until Mr. Jardine had pelted them good and plenty with stones that they ceased in their attack. The heifer has since been under the care of Vet. Hughes.—Creemore Star.

Fire broke out in the farm house of Mr. A. Gowinlock, fourth concession Eldersie, completely destroying a two-story brick house.

On the Advice of His Doctor

He Used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Protruding Piles With Splendid Results.

Too often a doctor can only think of an operation when asked for a treatment for piles. Some are sufficiently broad-minded to use the most effective treatment available, which is undoubtedly Dr. Chase's Ointment, as was proven in the case referred to in this letter.

Mr. Simon E. Jones, Railway street, Inverness, N.S., writes:—"I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable for protruding piles. For three years I suffered from piles, and was advised by a local physician to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I had tried many treatments in vain, and therefore know which is the best. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and you are at liberty to use this statement."

The record of cures of every form of piles which stands behind Dr. Chase's Ointment is the strongest guarantee you can have that it will promptly relieve and cure this ailment, even in the most aggravated form. 60c a box all dealers.

FARMER'S WIFE ALMOST A WRECK

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Own Story.

London, Ont.—"I am a farmer's wife and a very busy woman. Last summer I was taken with severe pains in my back so bad that I could not get up or scarcely move without pain, and my periods were painful. My husband called in a good doctor and I was under his care for some time, but he did me little or no good. One day a friend of mine told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had been greatly helped by it. I began taking it and soon got well, and my periods became natural again. Since then I have had perfect health. In fact I have never felt so well in my life. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine many women need. If you think this letter will help other women please publish it."—Mrs. K. C. YOUNG, Tambling's Corner, London, Ontario, Canada.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

GOOD ROADS IN PEEL.

A meeting of the Good Roads Committee of the County of Peel was held in the court house yesterday. A large number of accounts were passed and a statement of the position of the Good Roads account presented. The County of Peel raised by debentures $260,000. $130,000 was raised by the province of Ontario for road construction in the county, making a total of $390,000 spent on road making in the County of Peel. The fund is almost exhausted. Chinguacousy's proportion is all expended. Toronto Township has $1,4000; Caledon, $4,900; Albion, $8,000; Toronto Gore, $1,900. The county road system so far completed is about eighty-seven miles, of this thirty-six miles being on Hurontario street from Port Credit to Orangeville. Thirteen miles in Toronto Township; ten on the Brampton sideroad, two on the 17 sideroad and ten on the 27 sideroad, Chinguacousy. Albion has five miles completed and a very great deal of grading done; Toronto Gore seven miles. The bridges of the county have nearly all been renewed with permanent steel and concrete structures and at least 100 culverts of a permanent character constructed.

While eight miles of Dundas street is included in the county road system that has been completed, that road by reason of the excessive automobile traffic is now in a condition demanding immediate attention. Engineer Wheelock, Warden Rutledge and Provincial Engineer of Highways Maclean made an estimate of the cost of repairing the road. From Cooksville to Summerville, a distance of about four miles, would necessitate an outlay of $10,000. The township of Toronto and the government each agreed to pay one-third of the cost and asked the county council to bear the other third. This the county council refused to do. At yesterday meeting Major Thos. Kennedy addressed the committee and promised a private contribution of $1,000 if the municipal authorities would undertake the work. The committee made no recommendation. It is expected that a special meeting of the county council will be held in the near future to settle the matter. —Brampton Conservator.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER.

Every mother knows how fatal the hot months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Forced into Mixed Farming.

Conditions in the west are gradually forcing the farmer into keeping more live stock. The cost of wheat raising has increased to such an extent in recent years that there is little profit in growing it, unless the yield per acre is large. Last year there was a good average crop, but the price dropped to near the profit line. This year the crop is not likely to average so well over the whole country. Coupled with this is the record crop of the United States which is bound to have a more or less depressing effect upon the market. The natural effect of this condition of affairs is to turn the western farmer more strongly than ever towards mixed farming. In that direction lies his hope for future permanent success, and he will not be slow in taking advantage of it. This does not mean that wheat growing will be discontinued altogether. The West will continue to be a great wheat producing country for some years to come. But the country is big enough and farms are large enough to admit of a widely extended movement in the direction of mixed farming, and have quite a number of millions of bushels of wheat produced in addition. Take the so-called wheat growing states to the south of the boundary. These are not entirely given up to grain growing. The state of Kansas will serve as an example. That state this year was a wheat crop estimated to yield 175,000,000 bushels. And yet the number of market animals produced every year will total up in the millions. It is because Kansas some years ago took up mixed farming and raising live stock that she is able to-day to produce a record wheat crop. Mixed farming has meant better farming, more live stock on farms has meant increased fertility in the land, which in turn has meant increased production per acre in grain crops.—Canadian Farm.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, AUGUST 27, 1914

After the storm comes sunshine and the rainbow. Out of the stress, the sorrow and the suffering of the present war will come a long period of peace and prosperity. Let us hope that out of this quarrel of rulers there will also come a new order, under which the common people who have to bear the brunt of the fighting will have something to say as to whether the nations are to remain at peace or be plunged into the chaos of deadly strife. If the gigantic struggle now in progress on the European continent is the means of ushering in this new order it will have worked a great and lasting good to all humanity.

Reasons For Confidence

The Financial Post, Canada's leading financial newspaper, makes a strong appeal to Canadian business men to meet the present unusual situation with calmness and confidence. The first duty of Canadians, it states, is to aid in Great Britain's sustenance and defence at any cost and their next is to keep the business of the Dominion moving as normally as possible. The Post continues as follows :—

Let it be remembered that while we must lay aside something to pay our share of the cost of the war, we have at our back storehouses of natural wealth scarcely yet touched. As the calamities of Europe place a higher value on our wheat and other exportable crops, so will the same calamities—the result of militarism and conscription—make the peaceful land of Canada more attractive to some of the best people of Europe whose homes and lands, generation after generation, have been despoiled or devastated by war. At the present instant Canada stands practically immune from the physical menace of war; our fields are giving their wealth to the harvester, and our other resources are yielding their bounty in greater proportions than ever. Wealth production is proceeding, and the opportunities for still greater primary production are not diminishing. This continent, including Canada, will profit largely and speedily by the changes in the world's currents of trade during the war. Many of our factories will find demands upon them stimulated because of restriction placed upon the productive machinery of Europe by the exigencies of war, and though for a time in diminished quantities, a fair proportion of Britain's available capital will come to Canada for investment. Under the circumstances, therefore, the one great essential to keep business moving is confidence, and Canada, probably of all nations of the world, has least excuse to offer for any lack of it.

"In the unprecedented and critical situation that exists," says Sir Geo. Paish, "it is of the greatest importance that everyone should endeavor to act as if great events were not impending. Were confidence seriously disturbed, business would come practically to an end, and our ability to face the difficulties that may be in front of us would be seriously impaired. Therefore, it is of vital importance that, as far as possible, the events that are now taking place should not interfere with the daily life and the daily work of the nation. Orders should be given, factories should be run, and everything should be arranged to maintain, as far as possible, the productive power and the income of the country.

"But for this to be accomplished, the situation must be faced with courage and confidence on the part of everyone. Investors must continue to invest, bankers must continue to lend, the Stock Exchange must continue to deal, and every one according to his ability must endeavor to work hard in order that individual incomes, and therefore the income of the whole nation, may be maintained at the highest possible level."

Victor Hugo's Tribute.

At this time, when British arms are engaged in preserving the smaller nations of Europe from the rapacity of Germany, it is appropriate to quote the opinion of an eminent and eloquent Frenchman as to the world's debt to the Empire. Victor Hugo said :

"Over that sea in calm majesty lies the proud isle whose existence consoles me for a thousand continuous crimes, and vindicates for me the processes of Providence. Yes, proud England, thou art justly proud of thy colossal strength—most justly of thy proudlike pose. Stretched upon the rock, but not like Prometheus, and no evil fiend to rend thy side, rests the genius of England. He waits his hour, but counts not the hours between. He knows that it is rolling up through the mystic gloom of ages, and that its chariot is guided by the iron hand of destiny. It will come, it is coming, it has come. The whole world, aroused as by some mighty galvanism, suddenly raises a wild cry of love and admiration, and throws itself into the bounteous bosom of England.

"Henceforth there are no nations, no people, but one; undividable will be the world, and the world will be one England. Her virtue and her patience have triumphed. The lamp of her faith, kindled at the apostolic altars, burns as a beacon to mankind. Her example has regenerated the erring, her mildness has rebuked the rebellious, and her gentleness has enchanted the good. Her type and her temple shall be the mecca and the Jerusalem of a renewed universe."

War Has Cemented the Factions Which Divided the Russians

"It is impossible to relate a tithe of the amazing things that have happened in Russia during the last ten days," says a letter to The Daily Chronicle, written in St. Petersburg on Aug. 12. It continues:—

"Russia is not recognizable, or, rather, that haunting beauty of Russia which those of us who live here gropingly and often sadly feel and love, has suddenly shone forth radiantly from out of the heavy clouds of failure and defeat that have hidden it for so many years.

"Russia is full of moral energy. She has never displayed it with the same vigor as now at any period of her history. Russia feels herself for once to be morally in the right.

"Russia's internal condition was deplorable," says the correspondent. "The Poles, Finns and Jews were embittered by the Government's policy of oppression. Douma was divided and helpless. Strikes were spreading There were serious riots in St. Petersburg."

CZAR NICHOLAS.

The writer adds: "Few Russians wanted to fight for the sake of Servia, but when it became clear that the Austrian move was only the prelude to a German attack on an apparently helpless and demoralized Russia, the feeling changed in an instant.

"The general mobilization made all Russia realize the situation. The peasants, the workmen and the strikers of the week before; clerks, students, teachers and lawyers — all dropped their work without a murmur and joined the ranks.

"I had half expected mobilization riots in the country districts like those which occurred during the Japanese war, but friends from the south, the west and the east declare that all Russia is as one man. Everywhere the people are going to war 'to die for our country,' as the peasants say.

"The drink shops were closed and all went soberly and sternly, expecting no easy victories and prepared for a long and hard struggle.

For the first time in his reign the Russian Emperor is cut off now from those German influences that egged him on so continually to ruinous action. His Majesty came out on the balcony of his palace to greet an immense throng of people.

"The Douma gave stirring expression to the nation's feeling. The fanatical reactionary Pourishkevitch actually shook hands with his bitter enemy, the Cader Leader Miloukov. Representatives of various nationalities, the Poles, the Letts, the Lithuanians, the Russians, the Russian-Germans, and, most striking of all, the Jews, stood up and declared whatever they had suffered they would lay aside their grievances in this hour of great trial and fight side by side with the Russian people. Many deputies were moved to tears.

"Will the Government be capable of seizing this splendid opportunity for making a permanent peace with all its peoples?"

Indians Want to Go.

Chief Jacobs of Sarnia, chief of the grand council of all the chiefs of the Indian tribes of Ontario, has written to Duncan Campbell Scott, superintendent of Indian affairs, stating that he and all the chiefs under him are prepared to assist Canada in every way possible to take her part in the service of the empire. He offers to raise a fighting force if necessary. Chief Jacobs is an Iroquois.

There are many Indians in the Canadian militia and at Brantford there is a company composed entirely of and officered by Indians. The Blood Indians of Southern Alberta have subscribed one thousand dollars for Canada's war fund and also offer to supply fighting men if wanted.

These communications have been handed Col. Hughes.

Canada's Submarines.

Interesting facts concerning the submarines purchased by the Canadian Government were contained in an order-in-council tabled in the Commons during its brief session. The submarines were originally for the Chilian Government. The cost of the two was $1,050,000 and the expenditure is covered by Governor-General's warrant. The displacement of each is 313 tons, length 144 feet and 152 feet respectively, beam 15 feet and speed 13 knots.

THE ARENA OF EUROPE.

Belgium Has Often Been the Theatre of War.

Little Belgium has often been overrun with armies and been made the scene of other nations' wars as well as her own. Liege has borne the brunt of the first attack in this war. Usually it is a busy manufacturing city. Not since the war of the Austrian succession in 1746 has it been jarred by the rumble of heavy artillery in action. On Oct. 11 of that year Marshal Saxe, after successful battles in southern Belgium, concentrated at Rocour, or Roucoux, a few miles north of Liege, and administered a decisive defeat to the allies under Prince Charles of Lorraine.

Namur, one of the objective points of the present German movement, has been the scene of six battles since 1692. The territory about Charleroi and between the two cities has been plentifully strewn with dead men's bones in wars of contending monarchies.

In the stretch of country for about 100 miles west of Namur at least 20 celebrated battles have been fought, among them Fontenoy. The city of Tournai has been the scene of four. This disagreeable habit of making the dooryard of a peaceful and comparatively insignificant power the battleground of western Europe would naturally make the plucky Belgians very sore at whatever power would impose that hard condition upon them.

Although living under a joint guaranty of protection and classification as neutral territory, they knew that in any emergency of war the guaranty would not be worth a pinch of gunpowder, so they have prepared themselves for the event of invasion with the patient industry for which they are famous. When German columns began pouring through their main highways en route for the French border it was possibly assumed that the Belgians would take to their cellars and shiver at the menace of annihilation should they think of resistance.

But the Belgians have stood their ground like men and decreed that whoever would bring a war to them should have as hearty a reception as they are capable of giving. A people who have been repeatedly caught between opposing lines of battle for several centuries and occasionally compelled under duress to take sides in quarrels in which they had no interest, had a right to show resentment in this case, so instead of waiting for help to come they have manned their positions and fought their own fight, which has certainly given the invaders a chance to warm up previous to the main scrimmage. It also assured the invaders that their line of retreat and connection with base through Belgium will require a considerable force of men to hold it.

ITALY WITH BRITAIN.

All the Sympathies of the Italians Are For the Entente.

The feeling for England has grown warmer. A correspondent had a talk with a military man recently who requests that his name be kept secret, and who served in Africa in the first Libyan campaign. He affirmed that there is a secret agreement between Italy and England, whereby Italy's neutrality shall cease the moment Austria's position in the Adriatic threatens either this country or the Triple Entente. Then, Italy's fleet and army shall be at the disposal of Great Britain.

In return Italy will regain her beloved little peninsula between Trieste and Fiume, where are so many Italians under the Austrian yoke, and so many centuries of Italian traditions, for these were colonies in the days of ancient Rome, and again during the palmy days of the Venetian republic.

Anti-Austrian feeling becomes stronger here every day. Officers have notified their state staff that their men would not take up arms for Austria, and that the officers would refuse to press their men to do so. Thus is traditional hatred stronger than all political alliances.

This plan of retaking Trieste, and perhaps the old ports of the Dalmatian coast, is so pleasing to the Italians that many rich men have offered large sums of money to the king to defray expenses.

If war comes the king, it is stated by military men, will go into the campaign. The general staff would be removed from Rome to North Italy. The king is a good tactician, and much respected by his soldiers. The second in command probably would be Gen. Tassoni, who has seen much active service in Africa. But all these arrangements are being kept secret, so it is impossible to say who will command under his majesty.

Supplicants Fill St. Paul's.

St. Paul's Cathedral, which is situated in the heart of London, is crowded all day and night by sorrowful worshipers, downcast because of the war. Generally recognized as the nation's church, it is filled to capacity by citizens praying for soldiers and sailors.

Service begin at 7 o'clock in the morning and continue throughout the day. Signs bearing the words "church full" are posted early; the gates to the churchyard are closed and thousands gather in the street waiting an opportunity to enter.

Too Old For Service.

French Minister of War Messimy asked George Desparbes, a well-known French novelist, now in his 60th year, if he would write a story for the army bulletin. "I will give you a story," Mr. Desparbes replied, "if you 'give me back my corporal's stripes and send me to the front." The Minister of War objected and said that it was quite impossible. The author argued for some time to be taken into the ranks, but all his pleading could not make the Minister of War relent.

More Money Received by the Orangeville Women Than First Reported.

In the recent "Hospital Ship" collecting campaign, the mass meeting of the Women of Orangeville was not confined or influenced by any of the several Societies in the town. It was with one accord a hearty response to the cause of Loyalty. It is true we women of Orangeville are all loyal daughters of the Empire to which we are right proud to belong and glad are we to do even the merest trifle in helping to lend a hand in alleviating in the smallest degree the need and probable suffering now forced upon our Mother Country. The various women's clubs and societies in the town are each in themselves a mere handful of women. In the mass meeting held in the Library auditorium, Mrs. C. R. McKeown was chosen from among the women as President (as one of the town's most representative women), and Mrs. Geo. Tebbs elected as Secretary-Treasurer. The latter is not a member of the Society known here as Daughters of the Empire, and neither of these ladies were acting for or representing any one of the Societies belonging to our town, but were chosen as true and responsible women from among our many worthy women.

To facilitate the collecting campaign the municipal divisions of the town were allotted to the superintendency of the presidents of our four leading women's societies. These presidents were responsible for the securing of collections for the different Wards, so that the work was made light for all. The West Ward was taken by the W.C.T.U., and brought into the Treasurer, $109.15. From the North Ward the Daughters of the Empire handed in $108.75. Of this amount Mr. and Mrs. McKeown gave $15, Inspector Liddy $10 and a number of other well-to-do citizens $5.00 each. These were the largest individual donations received. The Charity Society, with Mrs. Fairbairn as its Convenor and chief aid, collected $38.24. The Women's Institute of our town brought in $80.60, and from adjoining Institutes Miss B. Patterson, of the Maples Institute, brought in $5.00; Mrs. W. T. Johnston, of Whittington, $22.00; Mrs. Alex. Lundy, of Camilla, $5.45, making a total donated by Institute workers of $113.05.

The entire amount up to date raised by Orangeville and outside women and sent by our Treasurer, Mrs. Geo. Tebbs, to headquarters for these funds in Toronto, is $369.19.

We are all pleased with such success.—Com.

King and Queen Are Now Patrons of National Sanitarium Association

"I have to-day received a letter from the Right Honorable Sir William Carrington informing me that Their Majesties the King and Queen are graciously pleased to become patrons of the National Sanitarium Association of Toronto."

"I have the honor to inform you that H. R. H. the Governor-General has received two signed prints of Their Majesties the King and Queen for the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children, and that by His Royal Highness' command I am sending the same to you by Dominion Express. Kindly acknowledge receipt of same."

These are two letters received from the Secretary to His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, by the National Sanitarium Association, operating the Hospital for Consumptives at Muskoka and Weston.

"Canada's Greatest Charity" the name by which this worthy enterprise is so well known, also enjoyed the patronage of His late Majesty King Edward and of Queen Alexandra, who is still a patron.

The Queen Mary Hospital, to which King George and Queen Mary now present their signed portraits, was so named by special permission of Their Majesties. The opening ceremony, unique at the time, was performed by Queen Mary by continuous cable and telegraph wire connection from Buckingham Palace a year ago.

8000 Consumptives have been cared for at the various Institutions. By far the greater number of these patients were unable to pay anything at all towards their own maintenance.

Orangeville's Volunteers

Volunteers from Orangeville and Alton for the Overseas Contingent, who have passed the medical inspection in Toronto and are now at Valcartier Camp, are :—

Capt. Harry McGuire, Col-Sergt. W. G. Snook, Corp H. Wilcox, Corp. C. Nichol (of West Toronto, formerly of Orangeville), Privates E. H. Cullinore, H. Anderson, J. M. Cowan (Alton), Leonard Cavers (Alton), Ralph Endacott, Garfield Gordon, R. Heard, J. H. Myers (Alton), A. Tyner, Henry Mallan, Fred Robinson and Chas. Wicken.

Alan Cameron, another member of the Contingent, has been attached to the Signallers Corps.

Until their departure for Valcartier last week the members of the 36th who have enlisted were encamped at Ravina Rink. A member of the contingent describes the barracks as ideal. The Ravina Rink was placed at the disposal of the Regiment by Dr. Smith and the shareholders. The 36th contingent numbered 235 of all ranks and recruits were received from company headquarters while in camp in Toronto. The same writer says :—"Most towns have given their volunteers a good send-off and in many instances have even donated something in the way of money. Orangeville apparently has not realized what the volunteers are sacrificing in order to help fight the battles of the Empire. Surely its citizens do not intend to allow their soldiers to go to the front without doing something in the way of encouragement."

Miss Bess Moss, of Dundas, and Mr. A. O. Scott, of Toronto, spent Sunday at the latter's home here.

Mr. Jack Rayfield, of Toronto, is spending his vacation under the parental roof.

Mr. Peter Dunnett, of Toronto, is the guest of his sister, Mrs. A. Bremner, sr.

Mrs. Jas. Island and Mrs. Faulkner are visiting at Mr. Richard Henty's. The latter has just returned home from a splendid tour through our Canadian West.

Miss Birdie Curry has arrived home from a trip to Saskatoon. Miss Curry reports a delightful tour, and says the crops in that part of the West are, unlike those of Southern Alberta, very good.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jas. Walker, which was held Sunday, was largely attended by sympathetic friends and neighbors. The services were taken at the house by Rev. Mr. Fowlie and at the grave by Rev. Mr. Stevenson, of Shelburne.

The large touring car of Mr. James Reynolds, of Owen Sound, was ditched quite recently near Elba. The car was travelling at a moderate rate of speed but owing to the extreme wetness of the highway, when the chauffer turned out to pass a horse drawn vehicle the wheels skidded and the big machine slid into the ditch, depositing its quota of passengers on the roadside. Fortunately no one was injured. A team of a nearby farmer was requisitioned to replace the car on the road. This being done the delayed people resumed their northward journey apparently none the worse of their mishap.

The annual meeting of the Bible Society will be held in St. Andrew's Church, Thursday evening. Rev. Mr. Stewart, of Toronto, will be the speaker for the evening.

Shakespeare in speaking of a great contemporary poet condensed a volume of eulogy into four words—"O rare Ben Johnson." Similarly by all, who were fortunate enough to know Mrs. James Walker, it can be said justly "O rare Mrs. Walker." Mrs. Walker after a painful and protracted illness from an incurable and insidious disease, passed peacefully away on Saturday morning, Aug. 22nd, at her home at Camilla, leaving to mourn her premature departure, humanly speaking, a husband and family of four sons and two daughters. They have lost the dearest to them, but the memory of her beautiful character and loving kindness will be to them a priceless recollection. The sympathy of the whole community is theirs in their bereavement. She was an indulgent mother, a loving wife, and a faithful friend. In the hearts of those she left behind she will live and to die this is not to die. A sunshiny, genial disposition and a forgiving spirit that never harbored revenge were hers. Gentleness and kindness were visible expressions of her great humanity. The hurt of a friend plunged her into sorrow, the joy of an associate bathed her in sunbeams. She despised the wrong no matter how formidably entrenched, and she exalted the right no matter how seriously beleaguered. In the protracted struggle between life and death she bore herself courageously. Her resolution never quailed. Her spirit was firm to the end. Undaunted she saw that dread vision, which as strength and health seemed so remote, draw nearer and nearer, and without a vain regret she entered on the experiences of the world beyond. Recalling her fortitude in this dark hour, may not we hold the conviction that not merely was she su

Undaunted she aw that dread vision, which in trength and health seemed so re- mote, draw nearer and nearer, and ithout a vain regret she entered on he experiences of the world beyond. Recalling her fortitude in this dark our, may not we hold the convic- ion that not merely was she sus- tained by the assurances of that Christian faith whose precepts she observed, but that boldly and with- out fear or misgiving she essayed the passage to the bosom of the illimit- able ocean of the mysterious future, well buttressed and buoyed by the confident hope expressed by the poet:

And though from out our bourne of time and place,
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face,
When I have crossed the bar.

And so, with our hearts attuned to sorrows that a life fraught with so much good should be cut off from among us, our chastened reflections can discern echoes of counsel and en- couragement from her life which should animate us all to a renewed and higher consecration to worthy and unselfish devotion to our Eternal King, and our kind. And whilst among the perplexities of this world we "can not always see the way," we can all become better and stronger from the example of such a life that battled hopefully and persistently against the almost overwhelmning environment, and with pride and gratitude for such a career we can cry to our Father and her Father:

Lord, I believe: help Thou mine unbelief,
And grant Thy servant such a life and death.

Death to a woman like Mrs. Walker is but a shadow cast by her transition to loftier activities:

She is not dead but sleepeth; well we know
The form that now lies mute beneath the sod
Shall rise when time the golden bugles blow
And pour their music through the courts of God.

MONO COUNCIL.

Council Chamber, August 21, 1914.

Council met as per adjournment of former meeting. Members were all present. Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. The following accounts were passed by Council in Committee of the Whole:—

ORHNGEVILLE WON THE DISTRICT.

Dufferins Downed Wingham at Fergus Last Week.

About 200 enthusiastic supporters accompanied the Dufferins to Fergus last Wednesday to witness the play-off with Wingham for the district championship. The trip was made by special train leaving here at one o'clock. The match attracted a big crowd and some stirring scenes were enacted while the game was in progress. Two supporters of the rival teams had a lively mix-up, from which the Winghamite emerged with blackened eyes and badly torn clothing. The game itself was fast and keen with plenty of close checking. Wingham went on the field with confidence to burn and the players were a badly disappointed lot at the finish. The quarter time score was two all. At three-quarters time The Dufferins were ahead with a score of 7-2 and appeared to have the game on ice. They made the mistake of resorting to defensive tactics in the last quarter and as a result Wingham came dangerously near winning out. The final score was 9 to 8 for The Dufferins. The winners played a fast, aggressive game and there did not appear to be a weak spot on the team. The line up was:—

Orangeville—Booth, goal; Scott and Cranston, points; Densmore and Dedrick, defence; Stevenson, centre; Keith, Ewing, Camplin and Patterson, home.

Wingham—Knechtel, goal; McLean and Gurney, points; Williams and Vanwyck, defence; Elliott, centre; McCoy, Holmes, Fink and Belcher, home.

Referee—Frank Doyle.

The win caused a good deal of enthusiasm in town and the victors were given a warm reception on their return home. Over one hundred townspeople accompanied the boys to Hanover yesterday. Home and home games will be played with Hanover in the first round of the semi-finals. If the Dufferins can win a majority of the goals on this round they will stand an excellent chance of getting in the finals. Yesterday's trip was made by special Broke an Arm.

While driving into town on Monday, Mrs. Joseph Chambers, of the 1st line, east, Caledon, met with an accident, which resulted in the breaking of her arm, and which might easily have turned out much more seriously. She and Mr. Chambers were driving along the road with a very quiet and tractable horse, but meeting an automobile the animal became excited and ran away, upsetting the rig with the above result. The injured lady received prompt attention and is progressing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Ingenious Window Dressing.

The Adamson Hardware Co. has a reputation for unique and original conceptions in window dressing. The most recent creation is a model of the British flag ship "Iron Duke" constructed from articles which the firm has on sale. The sides of the miniature dreadnought are made of steel saws, the funnels of small stove pipes and the quick firing guns are represented by a formidable array of taps. Sad irons swinging from their davits on brass chains are made to take the place of the ship's boats. The window which is further decorated with a picture of King George and a good-sized Union Jack is quite a centre of attraction. Mr. J. H. Aitcheson is responsible for the clever conception and its successful working out.

ALTON.

We are sorry to record the serious illness of Mr. Wm. McClellan (known as Organ Willie McClellan). He has been quite ill for some time and is not expected to recover.

Mrs. G. B. McClellan, of Moose Jaw, is on a visit to Alton friends.

At the Presbyterian service on Sunday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey McClellan sang a beautiful duet, which was much appreciated by the members and visitors. At the evening service Miss Lemon, of Moose Jaw, gave an excellently rendered solo and Mr. and Mrs. McClellan another duet. A large congregation enjoyed to the full these fine numbers. They were appreciated all the more because Miss Lemon and Mr. McClellan are both natives of this village.

Rev. Dr. Armstrong, Presbyterian minister, and Mrs. Armstrong left on Monday morning for a three weeks vacation trip. They expected to visit Thessallon on the north shore of Lake Huron, where Mr. Armstrong was formerly stationed. They will also visit other friends in the north country. We wish them a pleasant trip and a safe return home again.

Mrs. Everton Barber and Mrs. McCutcheon have been collecting money for the Hospital Ship Fund for the use of the sick and wounded soldiers and sailors during the present war. Something over $30 was collected in Alton.

The electrical storms of the last week or so have been very destructive in this part. Among the buildings destroyed, together with their contents, were those of Mr. McArthur, 15 sideroad, Mr. Baker, near Greenlaw, and Mr. McDevitt on the east side of the township. The lightning also struck the house belonging to the late Mrs. Stevens, of Alton, knocking off a quantity of plaster and shocking the inmates who were asleep in their beds.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey McClellan, of Chicago, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. V. Lemon.

Mr. Charles Culligan, of Stratford, is spending his vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Culligan.

Henderson-Heath.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Heath, Orton, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on August 19, when their eldest daughter, Mabel Minerva, was married to Mr. James Clarence G. Henderson, B.A., only son of Mr. S. Henderson, of Bellwood. The bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by Miss Gladys Henderson, sister of the groom. The ceremony took place under an arch of evergreen and goldenglow, in the presence of the immediate relatives. The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk crepe de chine, trimmed with shadow lace and seed pearls, and wore the customary veil, caught up with lily of the valley. The only attendant was Miss Anthony Raine, Toronto, little niece of the bride, in white silk with lace overdress. The officiating minister was Rev. W. M. Lovesgrove. After congratulations, the guests repaired to the dining room and partook of refreshments. The bridal party left on the evening train for a short honeymoon in Toronto and points east, the bride travelling in a navy tailor made suit and white hat. They will be at home of their friends in Thornbury, after October 1st.

Lawrason—Campbell.

A very pretty house wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dougal Campbell, First Avenue, at four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, when their elder daughter, Elsie May, was united in marriage to Mr. William Lawrason, of St. George. The interesting ceremony was performed by Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, in the presence of a few of the immediate friends of the bride and groom. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in ivory silk crepe metier trimmed with silk shadow lace and pearl ornaments and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lily of the valley. Prior to the marriage service the wedding music from Midsummer Night's Dream was played by the bride's sister, Miss Stella Campbell, Mus. Bac. A dainty wedding breakfast was afterwards served in the dining room. The house was prettily decorated in pink and white, roses, asters and sweet peas being the flowers chiefly used. The bride, who is an estimable and popular young lady, received a large number of beautiful wedding gifts. The groom's gift was a pearl and peridot necklace and to the pianiste a pearl necklace. The happy couple left on the evening train for a honeymoon trip. A large number of the bride's girl friends assembled at the depot and gave them a hearty send-off. The bride's going away costume was delft blue silk and black hat trimmed with tulle. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrason will make their home at St. George. The out of town guests were Miss Lottie and Mr. R. E. W. Lawrason, of St. George, and Miss Maude McGill, of Erin.

Wm. Beamish Dead.

Mr. Wm. Beamish, a widely known Caledon East hotelman, died at his home in that village on Saturday night aged 70 years. His death marked the culmination of a long illness. There was a large attendance at the funeral, which was held to St. James' Church cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. Deceased is survived by a widow and two daughters.

William Rice Dead.

William Edward Rice, formerly a blacksmith at Elba in Mono township, died in the Owen Sound General Hospital on Friday last at the age of 61 years. Death was caused by cancer, from which he had suffered a considerable time. Deceased, who was a widower, had been living in Owen Sound for several years. He is survived by a grown-up family. Mr. Rice was born in Toronto township and was a member of the Baptist Church. The remains were brought to Orangeville for burial, the interment taking place in the Forest Lawn Cemetery, where Mrs. Rice is buried, after the arrival of the Owen Sound train on Monday evening. Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas conducted the burial service.

Mrs. Robert Gordon.

Amaranth lost an old and greatly respected resident last week in the person of Mrs. Margaret Gordon, widow of the late Robert Gordon. Her death took place at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Tribble, on Tuesday, Aug. 18th. Mrs. Gordon, who was in her 76th year, was a daughter of the late Anthony Cooney and a cousin of Mr. E. B. Cooney, of Laurel. She was born in Ireland, but came to this country with her parents when only a girl. Her husband died about 12 years ago. She leaves a family of two sons and four daughters, who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement. They are Mr. Geo. E. Gordon, of Laurel, Mr. Norman Gordon, of Corbetton, Mrs. Robert Tribble and Miss Annie Gordon, of Laurel, Mrs. Oliver Cooney, Brule, Keith Co., Nebraska, and Mrs. Adam Wallace, Grand Valley. The late Mrs. Gordon was a member of the Methodist Church and a sincere Christian woman. She was a devoted wife and mother and was highly thought of as a neighbor. The funeral was held to Laurel Cemetery on Thursday afternoon, Rev. J. S. Stevenson, of Laurel, conducting the services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. W. J. and Jos. Gordon, Orangeville, Wesley Gordon, John Johnston, E. Hamilton and John Greason, of Laurel.

The German Crown Prince

Twenty-five years ago the attention of the world was much engaged by the young man whom a father's untimely death had placed upon the throne of united Germany. The mental picture it got of him in the opening years of his reign has proved to be a likeness not wholly accurate.

He may be a military autocrat with a firm belief in the divine sanction of monarchy; nevertheless, he has shown a wisdom, an understanding of his people, and a power of self-control that have meant much for the prosperity of his country and the peace of the world.

His son, the Crown Prince Frederick William, may not ascend the throne for many years, but the world has already begun to take note of him. Like his father, the young man has the knack of doing things that cause him to be talked about. He has a personality, and that, especially in the case of a future Emperor, is always interesting. He is no more a docile son than his father was. Again and again the newspapers have told us of hasty and ill-considered actions that have brought down the paternal discipline upon him. As, in the latest cases—his congratulatory message to the Prussian colonel who shook the mailed fist in the faces of the citizens of Zabern, and his telegram of approval to the obscure army officer who had written a hotly jingoistic book—the actions have usually been the result of his absolutist and militarist sympathies.

They say that above everything else he is a soldier, and that he has not only military tastes, but military capacities of a high order, which he improves by constant study. According to those who know him best, he has little use for constitutional forms, but much confidence in the divine right of his house; and since he is not distinguished for tact or taciturnity, there are those who believe that his reign, when it comes, will be stormy.

With all these characteristics, the crown prince has much personal charm. He is vivacious, generous, and good-natured; and his manners, if not his political views, are democratic. Most of the Prussians are fond of him; the rest of Germany is a little afraid of him, and the Socialists and Radicals are of course highly suspicious of him.

The prince likes outdoor sports, and strange to say, when we remember his ardent Teutonism is politics, is quite English in the clothes he wears and in his social tastes. His smile is infectious and disarming.

Such is the young man who will one day be the German Emperor. There is material in him for greatness or for tragedy. It is easy to imagine a dozen ways in which he could provoke his neighbors to war, or his subjects to revolt. The son may live to confound the prophets. At all events, he will not be a colorless ruler.—Youth's Companion.

ON A WAR FOOTING

CANADA is going to find out, within the next few months, what it means to be "on a war footing."

Just what it means depends largely on how we meet the situation. It might mean continued dulness, depression, "hard times"--if we were to persist in thinking and talking "hard times."

It may, just as reasonably, mean prosperity--if we keep our heads and go after business in the right spirit of aggressiveness.

We might well follow the lead set us by some of our large industrial concerns.

An excellent example is furnished by our three leading automobile manufacturers.

One—making a high priced car—has given instructions for the most aggressive selling campaign the company has ever undertaken; backed up by a big campaign of advertising in the newspapers.

Another, who makes various-priced cars of high quality, had a large announcement of 1915 models in a long list of papers the very week after war was declared.

A third—a Canadian branch factory of a United States concern making a popular-price car, is announcing an important price change—and taking larger space than ever before in Canadian newspapers to tell the story.

And this, be it noted, is the attitude of the three big men in an industry that the pessimists have been predicting would be seriously affected by the war. Their unshaken confidence, their greater-than-ever determination to market successfully a class of product that is always hard to sell, should be an inspiration to the rest of our industries. These three manufacturers have tested advertising, and have confidence in its efficiency in stimulating business in times of war as well as in times of peace.

Instead of retrenching, the business men of Canada may well emulate the action of the motor car manufacturers, and go out after business in the most aggressive way possible.

THE OLD BOOTJACK

Time Was When It Proved a Real Friend In Every Home.

JOYS OF A PAIR OF BOOTS.

Getting Them Off When They Were Hard and Wrinkled Was a Struggle, but Getting Them on Was Often a Test of Strength and Endurance

Many boys and young men of these days who have heard more or less about the old time bootjacks have probably never seen one, because with the abandonment of the wearing of boots by men and boys the bootjack went out of fashion. In the old days, especially in the winters, the man or boy who wore anything but boots was rare and the bootjack was a necessary article in every house.

Boots were worn without rubbers, and frequently to keep out the snow and the slush they were treated to an application of mutton tallow or some other greasy substance, but these applications did not always keep the feet dry nor the leather soft. The leg of the boot in the vicinity of the ankles was sure to have deep, heavy wrinkles, and when the boots got wet and then dried on the owner's feet the wrinkles became hard, and it was no easy matter to get those boots off. It generally required considerable labor over the bootjack. It required tugging and tugging, and after the job was finally accomplished the boots would generally be left near the stove for the night to get a thorough drying out for the morning.

Getting the hard boots on in the mornings was always more of a job than getting them off the night before. If the wrinkles at the ankles were hard at the time the boots were taken off they were even harder and stiffer in the morning, and that added to the task of getting them on. The owner would shove his foot down into the leg of the boot, the forefingers would be shoved through the straps, and the haul at getting the boots on would begin.

At first the haul would be a straight one, with the boot resting on the floor, and while the hauling was in process the weight of the body would be exercised in shoving the foot into the boot. The counters of the old time leather boots were naturally hard, but after the leather had become wet and had dried out they were still harder and invariably it was a hard task to get the heel down. It was always a tremendous relief to get the edge of a stockinged heel over the inside of the counter, because with that the great difficulty was overcome, and then the foot would slip naturally into its resting place in the boot.

Invariably a rest was desired after the first boot was on before the task of getting on the second was tackled, and often the practice of kicking the boots on was resorted to. The man or boy would first get his forefingers into the straps of his boot, and as he pulled he would kick the toe of the boot against the wall or baseboard. In houses where there were boys the marks made by kicking on the boots were always to be seen. Of course, this had a tendency to wear out the toes, but then many of the boots were built to meet this "kicking" game.

Some of the boots were re-enforced with brass toe pieces, a trifle over a quarter of an inch in depth, and these were fastened into the boot between the upper and the welt and shaped something after a horseshoe. Boots supplied with these brass pieces—and they made this kind for men as well as boys—would always stand more "kicking" before the leather was worn through and a visit to the cobbler's was made necessary.

The bootjack, though it has disappeared now, was then to be found in every home. Bootjacks generally were of home manufacture, and one would last for many years. They were so easy to make that some families would have a number of them, so that there would be no occasion for waiting should one member of the family want the bootjack while another member was using it. A hammer, some nails, lumber and a saw were the requisites.

To make a bootjack a piece of board about twelve or fifteen inches long and four or five inches wide was obtained. A piece the shape of a V would be sawed from one end of the board and then a lift consisting of a piece of board about an inch in width and an inch high would be nailed on the underside a short distance below the small point of the V. That raised the V end from the floor and gave a place to put the heel in when it was desired to pull off the boot. This in effect completed the bootjack, with the exception of the hole by which to hang it up.

In the days when boots were so generally worn augurs were not as common in the homes as they are nowadays, when about every household has a small kit of carpenter's tools, but getting a hole in the bootjack was an easy matter. It was done by heating the stoke poker in the kitchen stove until it became red hot, and with it to burn a hole through the bootjack about an inch from the end opposite the V, and the bootjack was completed. Bootjacks made in the way outlined have done service in many families for generations.

We exaggerate misfortune and happiness alike. We are never either so wretched or so happy as we say we are.—Balzac.

AN INVITATION TO SICKNESS

Impure Blood Means a Breakdown in Your Health.

Impure blood is an invitation to sickness. The blood is at work day and night to maintain the health, and any lack of strength or purity in the blood is a weakness in the defence against disease. Anaemia is the doctor's name for lack of blood. There may be an actual loss in the quantity of the blood, or one or more of its constituents may be lacking. Its truest symptom is pallor. Anaemia is particularly common in young girls. It is not, however, confined to them alone, for it is this same lack of blood that prevents full recovery after la grippe, fevers, malaria and operations. It is also present in old age and in persons who have been under unusual mental or physical strain. If you are suffering from this trouble take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They make pure, new blood with every dose and this new blood means health and strength. Thousands have proved the truth of these statements, among them Mrs. Minnie Barteaux, Annapolis, N.S., who says: "Following the birth of my child I was a complete wreck. I felt and looked as if I had not a drop of blood in my body. My heart would palpitate so badly that I could not walk upstairs without being completely exhausted. Night after night I would have to sit up in my bed to get my breath. I had no appetite and suffered from severe headaches. I was taking doctor's medicine all the time and naturally felt very much discouraged. While in this deplorable condition my husband brought me home a couple of boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and before they were gone I could feel some improvement. I gladly continued their use until I had taken, I think, ten boxes, when I was completely cured, and I never was so well in my life as I have been since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or will be sent by mail for 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE RUSSIAN ARMY.

To the Editor.

News was published last week from St. Petersburg to the effect that an order from the Czar to his army dealing with the drink evil had just been issued. Drunkenness is to be ruthlessly stamped out. Officers are forbidden to drink in camp, on manoeuvres or while on duty with their men. All classes of drunkenness are to be dealt with in the severest manner. Commanding officers are ordered to discourage as much as possible the drinking of alcohol and medical officers are to deliver lectures periodically on the harmful effects of alcohol.

We look upon Russia as very benighted and much behind Canada in social reform, but when did any of our governing bodies take action to teach the people the harmful effects of alcohol? Apart from the teaching in the schools no effort whatever has been made by dominion, provincial or municipal authorities to let the people know the facts revealed by science. In England, France and Germany great efforts are made by means of bulletins, posters and other means to warn the people of danger in the use of alcoholic liquors. The results, so far as we can judge, show that more good is accomplished by teaching than by prohibition. Here the teaching is left to private enterprise, which is very spasmodic and does not carry the weight or influence of governmental authority.

Teaching is very much needed, as ignorance on the subject is appalling. If we appealed to the government to issue an authoritative warning on the subject surely they would act.

ALTON'S DIME.

"I found a dime! I found a dime!" cried Alton, running into the house to show the bright coin to his mother. "Mamma, may I spend it right away for candy?"

"Is it your dime, dear?" asked Mrs. Kile.

"Why, yes, mamma. All the boys say finding is keeping," said the little boy, in surprise.

"Maybe some one will come to claim it. Where did you find it?"

"Out in front of the house on the walk. It's only a little bit of money, so no one will ever want it. Ones papa lost a whole quarter on his way to the train, and he just said, 'Never mind,' when Mr. Carson wanted to go back with him to look for it."

"Put the dime on the table until after a while, Alton," said Mrs. Kile. "I am very busy just now. Did you ask any one who passed about losing money?"

"No, I brought it right into the house. I wish I could spend it now, mamma. Anything on our walk belongs to us, doesn't it?"

But his mother had gone into the kitchen and he had to put the dime on the table. He thought of the candy he could get with that much money, and then of some marbles at the store, till he could not decide just what he wanted to do. In the midst of trying to make up his mind he saw Ben Alder going past looking carefully at the ground as he walked, and a little boy in the house turned his head away quickly.

"Ben Alder is the meanest boy in town," he said to himself. "It just serves him right if he lost the dime." Alton did not go out into the yard until he was sure Ben had gone past, but when he did he found Tom Parks waiting for him with a pretty little white rabbit in his arms.

"See here, Alton, what I found," he cried. "It was over in our pasture nibbling clover and I picked it right up. Won't it make a fine pet?"

"It's Nellie Reed's Bunny!" said Alton, looking it over carefully. "I wonder how it got out?"

"It's mine!" said Ted. "Finding's keeping, isn't it? I'm going to build a nice pen for it right away."

"It's mean and wicked to keep things that don't belong to you," began Alton, and then his face turned very red. Ben Alder was coming along the walk again looking carefully at the ground, and Alton ran quickly into the house for the new dime.

"What are you looking for, Ben?" he asked.

"Lost a dime," said the big boy, without looking up. "It slipped out of a hole in my pocket."

"Here it is!" cried Alton, forgetting all about the candy and marbles. "I found it a little while ago."

"I—I guess I'll take the rabbit back to Nellie," said Ted. "I think your way is best."

Nellie was so glad to get her Bunny back that she hugged and petted it and finally sat down and cried for joy.

Ted, too, was very happy; far happier than he would have been if he had kept it.

You see that by one person's being honest it often leads others to be and brings joy to lots of people. —Olive Plants.

Dr. Chase is No Stranger

In This Home—Receipt Book and Medicines Kept at Hand All the Time.

There is no better safeguard against disease and suffering than a good cathartic medicine. In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are constantly kept at hand, because they quickly awaken the action of liver, kidneys and bowels, and cure the most common ills of life.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, Jamestown, Ont., writes:—"Dr. Chase is no stranger in our home, for we have two of his Receipt Books in the house. My father and my husband's father each had one, and I have been familiar with it ever since I can remember. It was only natural that we should use the Kidney-Liver Pills, and we found them so satisfactory in regulating the digestive system and curing the common ills of life that we always keep them on hand. Many a time these pills have saved me much suffering and prevented serious disease. We also keep the Ointment in the house all the time."

HE KNEW.

The colonel of a volunteer regiment camping in Virginia came across a private on the outskirts of the camp painfully munching something. His face was wry and his lips seemed to move only with the greatest effort.

"What are you eating?" demanded the colonel.

"Persimmons, sir."

"Good heavens! Haven't you got any more sense than to eat persimmons at this time of the year? They will pucker the very stomach out of you!"

"I know, sir. That's why I'm eatin' 'em. I'm trying to shrink me stomach to fit me rations."

Rev. A. R. Anderson, formerly of the Innisfil Methodist circuit, but now of Belleville, is on a trip to Europe and fears are entertained for his safety.

Mr. S. W. White, of Caledon East, met with an unfortunate accident, which might have had fatal results. While loading a wagon with lumber a train came along and startled the horses, one of which became frightfully restive, and Mr. White in trying to pacify the animal had reason to stoop down, and received a kick full in the face, the result being a severe cut on the brow and other minor bruises.

THANKS FOR A FAVOR.

The Lady and the Baker and a Little Bit of a Surprise.

It was after dark, and the French baker was about to close his shop when the telephone bell rang.

"Mr. Ovens?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"This is Mrs. Jimley of Hickorynut street."

"Yes, Mrs. Jimley."

"I am giving a supper tonight, and I discover that I need half a dozen more rolls. Could I trouble you to send them over?"

"I'm sorry, ma'am, but I haven't a roll left in the store nor even a loaf of bread. We are sold clear out tonight."

"This is very provoking," said Mrs. Jimley. "Are you sure you haven't anything that would do?"

"There isn't a thing in the place that I would care to sell you, ma'am. Hold on, though. There's a half dozen fresh rolls on my own supper table right now. I could let you have those if you think they would do. My kids can eat crackers instead. They'd rather, anyway."

"Those will do very nicely, Mr. Ovens. Will you send them over soon, please?"

"Right away, ma'am. The boy has gone for the night, but I'll take them to you myself."

In a minute or two he stood on her front steps ringing the bell and feeling well pleased with himself that he could do some one a kindness.

Mrs. Jimley opened the door and took the packages from his hands. Then she said in icy tones:

"The next time you bring any goods here, Mr. Ovens, I wish you would remember to ring the basement bell. I can't have tradesmen coming to the front door."—Newark News.

He Knew.

"If I were you," his wife said, "I'd go to that man and tell him exactly what I thought of him. He lied to you, and you ought to tell him that you know it. If I were you I'd let him know just how I despised him. I'd have the satisfaction of making him feel ashamed of himself."

"No, my dear," he replied, "you wouldn't do anything of the kind. If you were me you'd do just as I'm doing. This fellow weighs fifty pounds more than I do, and they tell me he's one of the best boxers in this town."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Her Library.

It is clear that the young women who figure in this little conversation from the New York Telegraph were no blue stockings:

Amy—I don't know what to give Gladys for a birthday. She has a gold mesh bag, she has a wrist watch, she has a silver toilet set—oh, she has everything!

Pearl—Well, give her a book.

Amy—No; she has a book too.

Her Father's Car.

"Where were you last night?" asked one girl of another.

"I was out riding with father in his car."

"But I did not know your father had an automobile."

"He hasn't; he is a motorman."—Indianapolis News.

Why, the Very Idea!

"I had to pay $17 for a ticket to Chicago," said one woman.

"It seems expensive," commented the other.

The Ugly Mug.

In homely guise I wooed Irene.
I had not power nor place nor gold,
But love's mad passion made me bold
To seek the heart of her, my queen.
But she, I found, was not so green.
She had no ear for passions told
In homely guise.

It wrung my soul with anguish keen
To prove unworthy in her eyes.
For she my wooing doth despise
Because she finds no charm, I ween,
In homely guys.

Strong Evidence.

"This girl is only a college flirt. How do you know that she really loves you?"

"She dyes her hair to conform with my class colors, dad. A fellow couldn't ask for any greater proof of devotion than that."—Judge.

A SERIAL STORY

ANNA, The Adventuress

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXVII.—continued.

"Yes. But I believe that Mr. Earles thinks I am a little mad, and between ourselves I am not sure about it myself. It is easy enough to sing these little chansons in an original way—it requires a very different sort of ability to succeed on the stage."

"You have it," he declared confidently.

She laughed altogether in her old manner.

"I wonder how it is," she exclaimed, "that my friends have so much more confidence in me than I have in myself."

"They know you better," he declared.

"I am afraid," she answered, "that one's friends can judge only the externals, and the things which matter, the things inside are realized only by one-self—stop."

She laid her fingers upon his arm, and they both stood still. They had turned into the street, on the opposite side of which were the flats where Anna lived. Glancing idly up at her own window as they had swung round the corner she had seen a strange thing. The curtains which she had left drawn were open, and the electric lights were turned on. Then, even as they stood there, the room was plunged into darkness.

"There is some one in my rooms," Anna said.

"Is it your maid?" he asked.

"I have given her two days' holiday," Anna answered. "She has gone down into the country."

"And no one else—has a key?"

"I believe," she said, "that that man must have one. I am safe while I am there, for I have had bolts fitted everywhere, and a pane of glass in the front door. But I am always afraid that he may get in while I am away. Look! Is that some one coming out?"

The front door of the flats stood open, and through it a woman, slim, and veiled, passed on to the pavement and turned with swift footsteps in the opposite direction. Anna watched her with curious eyes.

"It it any one you know?" Brendon asked.

"I am not sure," Anna answered. "But, of course, she may have come from one of the other flats."

"Perhaps," he said, "you had better let me have your key, and I will go up and explore."

"We will go together," she answered.

They crossed the street, and entering the front door passed up the outside stone steps of the flat. Anna opened the hall door. They stood for a moment in the passage and listened. Silence! Then Anna clutched her companion's arm.

"What was that?" she asked sharply.

He had heard nothing. They both listened intently. Again silence.

"I thought that I heard a groan," Anna whispered.

He laughed reassuringly.

"I heard nothing," he declared. "and my ears are good. Come."

He threw open the door of the sitting room and switched on the electric light.

"There is no—Good God!" he exclaimed.

He turned round to keep Anna out by force if possible, but he was too late. She was by his side. She too had seen. The thin stream of blood on which her eyes were fastened with a nameless horror reached almost to her feet.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Case for the Police.

After the first horrible moment it was perhaps Anna who was the more self possessed. She dropped on her knees by his side, and gently unbuttoned his waistcoat. Then she looked up at Brendon.

"You must fetch a doctor," she said. "I do not think that he is quite dead."

"And leave you here alone?" he asked, in a hoarse whisper. "Come with me."

"I am not afraid," she answered. "Please hurry."

He reeled out of the room. Anna was afterwards astonished at her owo self-possession. She bound a scarf tightly round the place where the blood seemed to be coming from. Then she stood up and looked around the room.

There were no evidences of any struggle, no overturned chairs or disarranged furniture. The grate was full of the fluttering ashes of burnt paper, and the easy chair near the fire had evidently been used. On the floor was a handkerchief, a little morsel of lace. Anna saw it, and for the first time found herself trembling.

She moved towards it slowly and picked it up, holding it out in front of her whilst the familiar perfume seemed to assert itself with damning insistence. It was Annabel's. The lace was family lace, easily recognizable. The perfume was the only one she ever used. Annabel had been here then. It was she who had come out from the flat only a few minutes before. It was she——

Anna's nerves were not easily shaken, but she found herself suddenly clutching at the table for support. The room was reeling, or was it that she was going to faint? She recovered herself with a supreme effort. There were the burnt papers still in the grate. She took up the poker and stirred up the fire vigorously.

Almost at the same moment the door opened and Brendon entered, followed by the doctor.

Anna turned round with a start, which was almost of guilt, the poker still in her hand. She met the keen grey eyes of a clean-shaven man, between forty and fifty, quietly dressed in professional attire. Before he even glanced at the man on the floor he stepped over to her side and took the poker from her.

"Forgive me, madam," he said stiffly, "but in such a case as this it is better that nothing in the room should be disturbed until the arrival of the police. You have been burning paper, I see."

"Are you a detective or a doctor?" she asked calmly. "Do you need me to remind you that your patient is bleeding to death?"

He dropped on his knees by the man's side and made a hurried examination.

"Who tied this scarf here?" he asked, looking up.

"I did," Anna answered. "I hope that it has not done any harm."

"He would have been dead before now without it," the doctor answered shortly. "Get me some brandy and my bag."

It was nearly half an hour before they dared ask him a question.

"Will he live?"

The doctor shook his head.

"It is very doubtful," he said. "You must send for the police at once, you know. "You, sir," he added, turning to Brendon, "had better take my card round to the police station in Werner Street and ask that Detective Dorling be sent round here at once on urgent business."

"Is it necessary to send for the police?" Anna asked.

"Absolutely," the doctor answered, "and the sooner the better. This is a case either of suicide or murder. The police are concerned in itin either event."

"Please go then, Mr. Brendon," Anna said. "You will come back, won't you?"

He nodded cheerfully.

"Of course I will," he answered.

The doctor and Anna were left alone. Every moment or two he bent over his patient. He seemed to avoid meeting Anna's eyes as much as possible.

"Does he live here?" he asked her presently.

"No."

"Far away?"

"I have no idea," Anna answered.

"Who is the tenant of these rooms?" he inquired.

"I am."

"You will have no objection to his remaining here?" he asked. "A move of any sort would certainly be fatal."

"Of course not," Anna said. "Had he better have a nurse? I will be responsible for anything of that sort."

"If he lives through the next hour," the doctor answered. "I will send some one. Do you know anything of his friends? Is there any one for whom we ought to send?"

"I know very little of him beyond his name," Anna answered. "I know nothing whatever of his friends or his home. He used to live in a boarding house in Russell Street. That is where I first knew him."

The doctor looked at her thoughtfully. Perhaps for the first time he realized that Anna was bu no means an ordinary person. His patient was distinctly of a different order of life. It was possible his first impressions had not been correct.

"Your name, I believe, is ——"

"Pellissier," Anna answered.

"Allow me," the doctor said, "to give you a word of advice, Miss Pellissier. A detective will be here in a few moments to make inquiries into this affair. You may have something to conceal, you may not. Tell the whole truth. It always comes out sooner or later. Don't try to shield anybody or hide anything. It is bad policy."

Anna smiled very faintly.

"I thank you for your advice," she said. "I can assure you that it was quite unnecessary. I know less about this affair perhaps than you suppose. What I do know I shall have no hesitation in telling any one who has the right to ask."

"Just so," the doctor remarked drily. "And if I were you I would keep away from the fire."

Brendon reappeared, followed by a tall thin man with a stubbly brown moustache and restless grey eyes. The doctor nodded to him curtly.

"Good evening, Dorling," he said. "Before you do anything else I advise you to secure those charred fragments of paper from the grate. I know nothing about this affair, but some one has been burning documents."

The detective went down on his hands and knees. With delicate touch he rescued all that was possible of them, and made a careful little parcel. Then he stepped brskly to his feet and bent over the wounded man.

"Shot through the lungs," he remarked.

The doctor nodded.

"Bad hemorrhage," he said. "I am going to fetch some things that will be wanted if he pulls through the next hour. I found him lying like this, the bleeding partly stopped by this scarf. else he had been dead by now."

The doctor glanced towards Anna. Considering his convictions he felt that his remark was a generous one. Anna's face however was wholly impassive.

He took up his hat and went. The detective rapidly sketched the appearance of the room in his notebook, and picked up the pistol from under the table. Then he turned to Anna.

"Can you give me any information as to this affair?" he asked.

"I will tell you all that I know," Anna said, "My name is Anna Pellessier, sometimes called Annabel. I am engaged to sing every evening at the 'Universal' music hall. This man's name is Montague Hill. I saw him first a few months ago at Mrs. White's boarding house in Russell Street. He subjected me there to great annoyance by claiming me as his wife. As a matter of fact, I had never spoken to him before in my life. Since then he has persistently annoyed me. A few nights ago he fired a pistol at me at the 'Universal,' and was bound over to keep the peace. Ever since then, however, I have seen him hanging about the place. I have suspected him of possessing a skeleton key to my apartments. To-night I locked up my flat at six o'clock. It was then, I am sure, empty. I dined with a friend and went to the 'Universal.' At a quarter past eleven I returned here with this gentleman, Mr. Brendon. As we turned the corner of the street, I noticed that the electric light was burning in this room. We stopped for a moment to watch it, and almost immediately it was turned out. We came on here at once. I found the door locked as usual, but when we entered this room everything was as you see. Nothing has been touched since."

The detective nodded.

"A very clear statement, madam," he said. "From what you saw from the opposite pavement then, it is certain that some person who was able to move about was in this room only a minute or so before you entered it?"

"That is so," Anna answered.

"You met no one on the stairs, or saw no one leave the flats?"

"No one," Anna answered firmly.

"Then either this man shot himself or some one else shot him immediately before your arrival—or rather if it was not himself the person who did it was in the room, say two minutes, before you arrived."

"That is so," Anna admitted.

"I will not trouble you with any questions about the other occupants of the flats," Mr. Dorling said. "I shall have to go through the building. You say that this gentleman was with you?"

"I was," Brendon answered, "most providentially."

"You did not notice anything which may have escaped this lady? You saw no one leave the flats?"

"No one," Brendon answered.

"You heard no pistol shot?"

"None."

The detective turned again to Anna.

"You know of no one likely to have a grudge against this man?" he asked.

"No."

"There is no one else who has a key to your rooms?"

"No one except my maid, who is away in Wiltshire."

"The inference is, then," the detective said smoothly, "that this man obtained admission to your rooms by means of a false key, that he burnt some papers here, shot himself within a few moments of your return. Either that or some other person also obtained admission here and shot him, and that person is either still on the premises or escaped without your notice."

"I suppose," Anna said "that those are reasonable deductions."

The detective thrust his note book into his pocket.

"I brought a man with me who is posted outside," he remarked. "With your permission I should like to search the remainder of your rooms."

Anna showed him the way. "Have either of you been out of the room since you discovered what had happened?" he asked.

"Mr. Brendon went for the doctor," Anna answered. "I have not left this apartment myself."

Nothing unusual was discovered in any other part of the flat. When they were still engaged in looking round the doctor returned with a nurse and assistant.

"With your permission," he said to Anna, "I shall arrange a bed for him where he is. There is scarcely one chance in a dozen of saving his life; there would be none at all if he were moved."

"You can make any arrangements you like," Anna declared. "I shall leave the flat to you and go to an hotel."

"You would perhaps be so good as to allow one of my men to accompany you and see you settled," Mr. Dorling said deferentially. "In the event of his death we should require you at once to attend the inquest."

"I am going to pack my bag," Anna answered. "In five minutes I shall be ready."

Mr. Dorling drew the doctor aside.

"What do you think?" he whispered.

(To be continued)

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

The Passing of Luxemberg

The eyes of the world are now upon the tiny mountainous Duchy of Luxemberg and its youthful ruler, the Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide, for Germany, ignoring the treaty of 1867, has invaded the Duchy so as to be able to gain easy access to France. By the treaty, Luxemburg was declared neutral territory and its fortifications dismantled.

However, because of its strategic position between France and Germany, Luxemburg has been coveted by the great powers of Europe for years, and it was only the treaty of 1867 that secured to it any degree of protection and independence. Kaiser William of Germany endeavored to get hold on the Duchy in 1907, by supporting the pretentions of Count von Merenberg, who opposed the succession of the Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide to the throne, and now, taking advantage of her weakness and unprotected condition, has invaded it on his way into the French territory.

The ruler of Luxemburg, the youngest sovereign of all Europe, is described as a slender, fragile slip of a girl with a world of earnestness and thoughtfulness in her sweet young face. She was crowned ruler of Luxemburg on her 18th birthday, in 1912, and since that time she has won the allegiance and the undying devotion of every subject in her little realm.

The father of the present ruler was the Grand Duke William Alexander, a descendant of William of Orange, and her mother, the Dowager Duchess Marie Anne, is a Portuguese princess of the house of Braganza. The Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide is the eldest of six daughters, and for a time some anxiety was felt in the kingdom lest in the absence of a male heir to the throne the Duchy pass into the hands of another family. However, Dr. Eyschen, the present minister of state, and a valiant supporter of the little Grand Duchess, discovered an old law which declared that in the absence of a male heir, the eldest daughter of the ruling family should succeed to the throne.

When the Grand Duke William Alexander died in 1207, the little Duchess was only 13 years old, so her mother, the Grand Duchess Marie Anne, ruled as regent until she was of age.

In June 1912, in the midst of national rejoicing, through the crooked streets of the quaint old capital carpeted with roses and draped in the national colors, the little Grand Duchess rode in triumph to the chamber of deputies, there to be proclaimed ruler of the Duchy of Luxemburg.

From the time she was a mere baby six years old, she has been trained and educated with the fact of her succession to the throne in view. Her father, the Grand Duke, made a companion of her, instilling into her mind the honors and duties of her position. French, German and English professors and governesses were procured for her. One of the statesmen of her father's court taught her statecraft, and her old friend, Dr. Eyschen, instructed her in the principles of international law.

The life of the Grand Duchess has been one of extreme and unusual simplicity. There seems to be a real personal note in the love and devotion bestowed upon her by all her subjects. Her advisers, old, white-haired veter ns of state many of them, stand ready to defend her rights in the face of the whole world. In fact, it was the minister, Dr. Eyschen, who established her right to the throne by a brilliant legal battle in the law courts. However, Luxemburg is unarmed, and in spite of her loyalty and devotion her subjects are powerless to help her in this new extremity. She had only the faith of her great neighbors to depend upon, and since Germany, the strongest of them, has broken this faith and flooded her land with an army of invaders, her position seems hopeless.

With the passing of the Duchy of Luxemburg the history of one of the most picturesque kingdoms in Europe will come to an end. With its mountains and precipices, its winding passes and crooked waterways, its old little towns with their gabled houses, dismantled battlements and ancient churches and monasteries, it has been a favorite spot for lovers of quaint places and artistic scenery.—Selected.

Nothing Like It for Colds.

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

"BABYLON"

Wonderful Oriental Spectacle at Canadian National Exhibition.

"Babylon," the magnificent Oriental spectacle now in preparation for this year's Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will outshine in the beauty of its coloring and costumes, its life and the number of its people, any similar spectacle ever produced on the American continent.

The very name "Babylon" is a synonym for luxury and lavishness, and the story of the handwriting on the wall that dazed the rioters at the feast of Belteshazzer, and later the destruction of the most beautiful city of ancient times, lend themselves readily to romantic depiction and spectacular reproduction. The material is all ready to the hand of the author and artist.

When it is learned that a thousand costumes for the king, the nobles, the state officers; the envoys of other nations, the priests, the warriors, the Assyrian guards, the Nubians, the Arabs, the slaves, the charioteers, etc., etc., are being imported, that they will be accurate in every detail, you can form some opinion of the riot of color the stage will hold.

The stage setting will consist of a view of the ancient city 700 feet in length—the largest stage in the world.

GERMANY'S GIBRALTAR.

British Fleet Will Find Heligoland a Hard Nut to Crack.

The eyes of the naval experts of the world are centered upon the Island of Heligoland, Germany's Gibraltar, in the North Sea.

It is the general opinion among them that the German squadrons will not attempt an open engagement with the British fleet in the North Sea, but will remain in the safe haven of the Kiel Canal, secure behind the chain of coast defences, of which Heligoland is the principal link.

In 1890 Great Britain bartered Heligoland for a portion of German territory in East Africa. To-day Great Britain finds the island the key to the impregnable wall of redoubts, which protects Germany's North Sea coast line, the Kiel Canal and the approaches to Hamburg and Bremen.

Within a comparatively small compass Germany has there several important mercantile and naval harbors, most of them fortresses believed to be invulnerable to attack.

Had the island not existed and it were possible to construct a fortress at a point which would prove most formidable against attack in the North Sea, Germany could not have chosen a more advantageous location.

But 46 miles distant from the mouths of the Elbe and the Weser, Heligoland, on three sides, rises nearly perpendicularly from the sea to a height of 150 feet. Its rugged, overhanging, natural walls are fortified and protected to a degree which has no parallel save possibly Britain's Gibraltar or Russia's Cronstadt.

A large section of the rocky plateau has been made to conceal guns in armored turrets, great coast weapons on disappearing mountings and a formidable array of rapid fire guns. Hewn out of the solid rock are ammunition magazines and bombproof shelters, and the entire scheme of fortification is so ingeniously engineered as to be, from without, completely invisible as well as invincible. The island is also a mighty naval station and is also provided with disappearing hangars for aeroplanes and accommodation for dirigible balloons.

In the events of a concerted attack, the British squadrons would be shelled by invisible guns protected by the stoutest armor and concerte, the artillerymen being practically immune from danger. The elevation of the batteries makes possible the direction of a plunging fire which would prove destructive to war vessels protected by the most approved types of armor. It is held by the German army authorities that the guns could annihilate the strongest fleet of battle craft at long range.

Within the fortress is a supply of reserve provisions sufficient for three months, and a full complement of seamen gunners and artillerymen for the garrison.

The island at one time belonged to Denmark, being taken from the Danes by the British in 1807. Heligoland remained a British possession until 1890, when it was ceded to Germany.

The Horror of War.

Hugh Sutherland, director of the Canadian Northern Railroad, has reached home from Bohemia with his nerves somewhat shattered by the arduous journey and the first sight of the horrors of war.

"At a small station near Prague I noticed confusion among the soldiers entraining," he said. "I then saw four Serbs struggling violently against being forced to proceed with their Austrian regiment to fight their fellow Slavs on the Russian frontier. The officer commanding issued a few crisp commands and immediately the wretched four were led away a short distance, lined up, and shot to death in plain sight of myself and everybody on the train. The women screamed and fainted, and a terrible uproar ensued, in the midst of which the train was ordered to proceed.

"I was obliged to change from one train to another ten times on Thursday night, traveling to Belgium through Germany, owing to the sudden embarkation of troops, necessitating the turning out of all regular passengers. I passed through a thousand miles of lands rich with harvest, but no body was working in the fields except here and there a few women and children. The crops are in beautiful condition, but its impossible to save them now. This loss is terrific."

Ships Taken Total 200.

The London Daily Express estimates that the large number of German vessels captured at sea by the British, French and Russian warships total 200, with a tonnage of one million tons and a value of $300,000,000. The paper says that there are still remaining at sea about 500 German ships liable to capture at any moment. These have a total tonnage of 2,000,000 tons and a value of $700,000,000. These latter include 155 Hamburg-American vessels, 120 North German Lloyd, 65 Hansa, 45 German-Australian, 45 Hamburg-South American, 45 German-Levant, 30 German-American petroleum and 35 Woermann.

May Reach $150,000.

While committees of the Hospital Ship funds are asked to close their funds at their own discretion, for the benefit of distant places where collections are still actively being made for this purpose, the general fund will not be closed till early in September. Contributions to date show with "Flag Day" a total of $137,680.70, so it may reach the splendid sum of half over what was the original amount aimed at.

"Baccy" For the Troops.

A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Paris says: "The state tobacco factories are working day and night in order to supply the needs of the army. Large quantities of Virginia tobacco will be imported, especially for the use of British troops on the Continent."

French Is Man Who Marched to Relief of the City of Kimberley

The chief command of the British forces in the field has been allotted to Field Marshal Sir John French, who is leading the troops despatched to the assistance of Belgium. Until a few months ago he was Chief of the General Staff of the army, a post which he resigned owing to his differences with the Government in connection with the military dispositions for dealing with any disturbances resulting from the armed movement in Ulster. When the European war broke out his appointment as Inspector-General of the British forces was announced the same day as that of Earl Kitchener as Secretary of State for War.

Sir John, the son and grandson of naval officers, was originally intended for the church, was sent against his will into the navy, and after attaining the rank of lieutenant, quitted the sea in order to join the army as a hussar officer. He enjoys the well merited reputation of being the most able cavalry leader of the British army, and won fame as such during the Boer war.

FIELD MARSHAL FRENCH.

But with all that, he still rides like a sailor, that is to say very ungracefully. Indeed, he is not a good rider, which is all the more astonishing in view of his prowess while a young subaltern in regimental steeplechases.

French first saw active service in Egypt, and took part in the unsuccessful Nile expedition under Lord Wolseley for the relief of General Gordon at Khartoum.

Later on, while stationed at Aldershot, he incurred a good deal of criticism, and even censure, on the part of his military superiors, for embarking in cavalry tactics that did not commend themselves to generals of the old school, and his career was regarded by many, in consequence thereof, as ended.

But the late General Sir Redvers Buller gave him his chance when the Boer war broke out, selecting him as a member of his staff, and ended by placing him in command of his cavalry.

It was at the head of the latter, by means of a forced march, that French relieved the siege of Kimberley, and further assisted Lord Kitchener in the crushing of Cronje, and in the capture of his entire force.

Seeking to Protect Breeding Stock.

The French Ministers of War and Agriculture have adopted measures for the protection of blooded cattle and horses to be used for breeding purposes. Another effort in this direction will be the opening of certain industrial establishments which have shut their doors, and the prevention of the closing of others.

The Director of Foreign Commerce has been instructed to see if he cannot take some steps toward the conquest of German markets and in the interest of French manufacturers.

Port of Montreal Busy.

Shipping conditions in Montreal show a great improvement this week. The elevators were working full speed loading grain into ocean bottoms, and the number of lake boats waiting to discharge their cargoes was steadily increasing. Last week less grain was handled by the elevators here than during any previous week since navigation opened. The total amount received was 1,641,066 bushels; or half a million bushels less than usual.

Nelson's Words Read To Sailors.

Lord Nelson's words, written in his diary before the battle of Trafalgar were on Sunday last read to the men assembled on every British battleship. They are:

"May the great God whom I worship grant to my country and for the benefit of Europe in general, a great and glorious victory; and may no misconduct in anyone tarnish it, and may humanity after the victory be a predominent feature in the British fleet."

Bayonets With Teeth.

The London Daily Mail's Brussels correspondent says that the Germans are using a bayonet with teeth on it, which slips in easily, but tears the flesh to pieces in the process of withdrawal. On the other hand, the Prussian bullet, by reason of its extreme pointedness, is saving the Red Cross much work. Extractions have been reduced 25 per cent., the bullet passing clean through more often than not.

FIGHT IN NORTH SEA MAY NOT TAKE PLACE AFTER ALL

Only Desperation Will Cause Admiral Von Tripitz to Join Battle With the British.

Possibility of British Admiral Dividing His Forces Is Scouted as Improbable by Naval Men.

As long as the German fleet is "in being," it is a menace to England. To risk its destruction by a fleet nearly twice its size would obviously be foolhardy. There are three conceivable situations which may draw the Germans out. Should the English, in an effort to force matters or in its desire to co-operate with Russia in the Baltic, be willing to divide their fleet by keeping half in the North Sea and sending the other half around the Danish peninsula, the Germans, thus offered an equal combat, might issue forth from either end of the Kiel canal. If the Mediterranean is cleared, and the French navy, or a major portion of it, is released to the support of the British in the North Sea, the latter would then have a fleet which, roughly speaking, could be divided in two and either half be about the equal of the German fleet as a whole.

ADMIRAL CALLAGHAN.

But such a move on the part of the British only needs to be described to be dismissed. Admiral Jellicoe will not divide his fleet so as to give the Germans an even chance of wrecking one section of it and more than a chance of slipping past the British lines one or two fast cruisers which could terrorize British shipping until their coal ran short. No advantage in the Baltic could be worth such a risk. On the other hand, with the present possibilities of patrol and blockade, the British fleet can probably keep the Germans effectively bottled up, the British dreadnoughts being summoned by their scouts whenever the Germans threaten to come out. This apparently means a protracted stalemate with the Germans occasionally making sorties in the hope of inflicting injury on a section of the British fleet, but withdrawing before superior force and not risking a general engagement. This was the situation at Port Arthur between Russian and Japanese until the fortress was threatened by land. In short, it is likely to be a long campaign of harassments, the Germans hoping that by mines and torpedoes they can pick off a British dreadnought now and then.

If the war on land should be long drawn out, and Germany should find herself slowly worn down through lack of oversea communication and the means of obtaining supplies, the Kaiser's fleet might be driven at the British in the desperate hope that superior gunnery and handling might overcome the British superiority of weight and numbers. The third situation which might force the Germans out is the possibility of the Kiel canal being captured by a land attack. We may wait long for the "big" naval battle that in reality must be a general engagement between the fleets and not a mere skirmish.

Admiral Sir George Callaghan, who was in command of the British fleet, and who is now second in command to Sir John R. Jellicoe, is one of the best known flag officers in the navy. His name came before the world when he commanded the Naval Brigade despatched from the China coast to the relief of the foreign legations at Pekin at the time of the Boxer troubles. He has always been considered an authority on gunnery, and on that account chiefly was appointed naval adviser to the Inspector-General of Fortifications. During the interval great progress was made in the modernization of the coast defences of Great Britain and Ireland. Sir George is an Irishman by birth, of mixed Irish and English descent, was born in County Cork, and is 62 years of age. He entered the navy as a midshipman, and attained the rank of captain in 1894, commanding in turn the Hermione, Endymion, Edgar, Caesar, and Prince of Wales, all well known and important ships. He was a naval A. D. C. to King Edward VII., was rear admiral in the Channel fleet, and has commanded the fifth cruiser squadron. He was second in command of the Mediterranean fleet from 1908 until 1910, and commanded the 2nd division of the home fleet in 1910 and 1911, being appointed commander-in-chief of the home fleet the latter year. Sir George is a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor of France.

When the history of Germany's mighty naval development comes to be written one name will stand out in boldest relief — von Tripitz. To this giant, fork-bearded sailor-statesman, a magnificent specimen of Teuton physique of the old school, must fall the lion's share of the credit for the persistent aggressiveness with which the Fatherland has rushed to front rank as a sea power. He is the real creator of the Kaiser's fleet.

"Tirpitz the Eternal," they call him in Berlin. For nearly 15 years he has been unbrokenly at the helm. No other German Minister but Bismarck ever survived the vicissitudes of politics so long. Imperial Chancellors have come and gone, War Ministers, Foreign Secretaries, Chancellors of the Exchequer, Home Secretaries, and Postmasters-General have appeared and disappeared by the half dozen.

Von Tirpitz is suavity and frankness incarnate. In a recent interview he confessed unreservedly that his ides of German sea power was that the Fatherland must prepare itself as soon as possible to throw decisive weight into the political scales whenever its vital interests were concerned.

Specifically, he favored the two-to-three standard as the only goal compatible with German necessities, so far as Great Britain was concerned. He believed that the possession of a fleet two-thirds as powerful in offensive units as the British navy would effectually prevent combined Anglo-French military operations against Germany, besides making naval warfare, in the spirit of the Fleet Law's preamble, a grave risk for Britain.

He believed religiously in the invincible superiority of the German guns—that they would decide the issue to Germany's imperishable glory on the day when the Kaiser's Trafalgar was to be fought and won.

The French navy is under the supreme command of Admiral de la Peyrere, and on him rests the fate of the Triple Entente in the Mediterranean. Acknowledged both at home and abroad as the most distinguished officer of the French navy, he has both in his capacity as chief of the Admiralty staff and as Minister of Marine, completely reorganized that service, eliminating the dead wood, abolishing hundreds of almost incredible abuses, consigning to the scrap heap battleships and cruisers that were out of date and paying particular attention to the development of submarine navigation.

His popularity among all grades of the service is very great, and when ADMIRAL VON TIRPITZ.

Minister of Marine he still further enhanced it on one occasion by an exhibition of personal pluck thoroughly in keeping with his character and antecedents. Learning that in consequence of the number of disastrous explosions in connection with the handling of the charges of the big guns, the sailors and officers had become convinced that it was almost as dangerous to stand behind the gun or anywhere near its breech as at its mussle, he hastened to Toulon, went on board one of the battleships there, and made a point of standing in the immediate proximity of the breech of the gun so that if there had been any explosion he would have been the very first to be blown into eternity.

—Mr. John Menary has not yet gone to the wars. It seems the authorities do not wish to accept a large number of horsemen, and they refused to accept the Frontiersmen as a unit, but the men may enlist with any other regiment, and it is likely that Mr. Menary will go with the Princess Pats—a regiment financed by a Montreal capitalist. Mr. Menary spent Sunday in town.

Flat to rent. Bath room and modern conveniences. Inquire at Banner Office.

—Orangeville has lost two old and greatly respected citizens in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mann, who moved from their late home on Zina Street to Toronto a short time ago. They have resided in this town for the last thirty years and were universally esteemed by our citizens. Mr. Mann has taken a large part in Orangeville's public affairs, having served in the Town Council and on the Public Library and High School Boards. He retained his seat on the High School Board until his removal to the city. He took a keen interest in the welfare of the school and his services and sound judgment will be greatly missed by his confreres. The Banner joins their many local friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Mann health and every happiness in their new home.

UP-TO-DATE AND NOVEL.

Advertising Methods Adopted by an Enterprising House.

That Orangeville is fast becoming metropolitan in the methods of advertising used by our merchants to call the buying public's attention to the many splendid values which they are offering, also that the wide-awake firm of Ritchie Bros. are keeping up with and just a little ahead of the times in an advertising respect is again practically demonstrated by what is perhaps the most elaborate system of advertising ever attempted by any business house in this section, namely: the giving away of the beautiful Mozart Parlor Grand Piano which is now upon exhibition at their store.

This piano retails at $350.00 each, guaranteed for ten years. The principal points of superiority of the celebrated Mozart piano over any other of this class of instruments lie in the three strings in unison with overstrung bass, the splendid pitched scale and true sounding board which give the Mozart that rich, deep, even tone so much admired.
